MAKING THE MOST OF MEMORIAL DAY

IT may be taken for granted that almost every florist, however little ambition he may possess, will make some special preparation for Memorial day, the greatest flower day of the year. Indeed, he can hardly avoid making some little effort to get ready, for the observance of the day has become so general that some extra business is almost certain to come along and hit him, and it will be inconvenient not to be ready. The prime object of this article is to urge florists to make the most thorough preparation within their power, and to do it now—with all possible emphasis on the "now"—since Memorial day is only about two weeks in the future.

There is an old quotation that has established itself as a permanent tenant in the writer's memory and refuses to be evicted; it bobs to the front whenever the necessity of prompt action is under consideration. The exact wording of it cannot be vouched for, but it runs something like this: "The state of the world is such, and so much depends on action, that everything seems to say to every man, 'Do something! Do it! Do it!'" Perhaps that quotation can be paraphrased a little, so as to fit the present occasion precisely.

A Good Prospect.

Since encouragement is frequently the best incentive to action, it should be stated that this year's Memorial day business—the weather man and other powers permitting—will probably be unusually heavy and profitable, if only for the reason that the great day falls on Saturday, thus providing, practically, for two days of decoration. The experience of the trade has proved that when Memorial day immediately precedes or follows Sunday, the circumstance is a fortunate one for florists.

There are at least three essential forms of preparation for the big event—obtaining a sufficient quantity of the right sort of stock, attending to the advertising, and making such arrangements, with reference to the store force and the delivery outfit, as will make it possible to handle the increased business swiftly, systematically and satisfactorily.

Everybody's Day.

It is well to secure for Memorial day a good supply of such stock as will make a satisfactory showing at small expense, for on this occasion the florist is catering to the common people—not common in the old-time, outworn sense of being inferior or plebeian, but common in the truly American, modern sense of including everybody.

Memorial day is not simply the soldiers' day; it is some time since we got away from that restricted idea. It is not especially the wealthy people's day; most of the wealthy people make arrangements to keep the homes of their dead permanently beautified and are perhaps less likely than others to give special attention to the matter on the day custom has set apart for the purpose. It follows, then, since Memorial day is everybody's day, and everybody is not rich and generous, that the stock provided shall be largely of such a kind that a small outlay of money will accomplish the desired purpose.

Wreaths a Specialty.

What, then, is the best sort of stock to be placed conspicuously in the front and pushed as a specialty for the florists' day of days? Of course there will be a good demand for loose flowers and there ought not to be any great difficulty in meeting the demand, especially if there is an abundance of peonies and cape jasmine to compensate for any shortage of other flowers. If a cemetery vase in each instance is purchased along with the bouquet, the transaction will be more satisfactory to both buyer and seller. Many of the more fastidious class of customers will prefer flat sprays and the florist should be fully prepared to satisfy such patrons, but the sale of these must be limited by the briefness of the time allowed for the making of them.

However, there will also be a large demand for wreaths and the florist will find it perfectly safe, as well as highly profitable, to make his best efforts to increase the demand for them, since the wreaths can be constructed of prepared magnolia leaves or other such durable material and a sufficient supply of them can be made beforehand, leaving only the trimming of them to be done during the strenuous eleventh hour. On account of the reduction that has taken place in the price of magnolia leaves during recent years, it is easier than ever before to supply these wreaths at attractive prices, and any remaining unsold at Memorial day can be kept in stock for later use.

Memorial Day Wreath Illustration Popular for Use in Retailers' Advertising

The Advertising.

There are few florists who do not make use of some method of advertising for special occasions like this, even if they are contented at other times to make no public plea for patronage, but simply accept such business as happens to come their way. The majority of wide-awake florists, however, find it profitable to carry on a more or less regular campaign of publicity, and such wide-awake florists are also likely to make the biggest use of advertising for such big events as Memorial day. It is the essence of good advertising—or at least it is one of the main constituents of good advertising—to watch alertly for special occasions and special opportunities, and to derive the greatest possible advantage from them by means of special stock and special advertising.

As to the best method of advertising, that question must be settled by each florist in conformity with his location and environment. A well arranged window display is a good form of advertisement, varying in its effectiveness according to the number and character of the passers-by, and the arrangement of a Memorial day window is a comparatively easy task, since the accouterments of war and the emblems of patriotism are easily available and make good settings for flowers.

But he is an exceptionally fortunate florist who can build up a large business without any other means of publicity than his front window. Other methods of advertising must be used and in a large majority of cases the daily newspaper is the best and cheapest medium, though in certain circumstances the mailing of cards or circulars may be a good substitute.

However, as already intimated, this is not intended principally as a discussion of methods of action, but rather as a reminder of the necessity of instant action of some sort, if the full possibilities of Memorial day are to be attained. So we finish, as we began, with the well-meant and not officious exhortation: Do something, and do it now.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

TAUSENDSCHON IN DECORATION.

Working straight through the night of May 8, the decorators of the E. Wienhoeber Co. put up at 1516 Lake Shore drive what is said to have been the largest decoration in the history of the Wienhoeber business and what is believed to have been the finest floral display ever seen in Chicago. The event that called for this effort was the wedding of one of the daughters of Edward T. Blair and Mrs. Blair. The ceremony was performed in the Fourth Presbyterian church, the day before the dedication of that ornate new edifice, and the decorations there were simple, the effort being centered on the work at the home, where the reception was held and the wedding breakfast served.

The Blair residence is one of the newest of the millionaires' homes on the drive and called for different treatment than that ordinarily employed in house decorations. When called on for suggestions Ernst Wienhoeber proposed the use of the Tausendschon rose and his idea was accepted. Frank Oechslin flowered 125 large plants specially for this order. Nothing else was used on the main floor except a few vases of purple Spanish iris, where a touch of deep color was needed, and one large basket of Killarney Queen. There are only three rooms on the floor decorated, a large library, in which the couple received, a living room, in which the bride's table, seating thirty, was set, and the dining room, in which twenty-four small tables were spread. All rugs and furniture were removed because of the large number of invitations issued and the decoration was confined to the twelve large windows, two mantels and the tables, with a bank of palms to screen the orchestra. The use of nails or tacks being tabooed, the rose decoration called for the use of thirty-six wire frames, three for each window, and others for the mantels. The frames to go over the windows were made with loops that extended over the top of the woodwork, where they could be fastened with screw-eyes. The frames for the sides of the windows were pendent from the cross pieces, merely hooking on. The plants were delivered in pots, the growths being cut as used and worked onto the frames so thickly that all wire was completely hidden. Each stem was provided with a vase of water wired to the frame and cunningly hidden. For the mantels the same method was used, except that some of the plants could be used in pots, the pots being hidden by a front row of Adiantum Farleyense. The effect was so good as to seem to leave no room for improvement. Tausendschon, a rose without a superior in the rambler class, showed its adaptability to decorative work. The stock hardly could have been better, being heavily flowered and the beautiful blooms fully developed, making a mass of color. The bride's table had several low mounds of spring flowers and there was a thin-necked vase with a few choice blooms on each of the small tables. The bride carried a bouquet of white lilac and valley. Each of her party of eight carried a leghorn hat basket of apple blossoms, and the ushers' boutonnieres also were apple blossoms. Many gifts of flowers were received and were displayed on the third floor of the mansion, along with the other presents.

The work was in charge of William Wienhoeber, but the decorators were Frank Pasternick, J. T. Schouten and John Madden, with several assistants.

MORE WHITE HOUSE FLOWERS.

Flowers did not play nearly so large a part in the wedding of Miss Eleanor Wilson and Hon. William Gibbs McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, as they did on the occasion of the marriage of Miss Jessie Wilson to Mr. Francis B. Sayre, in November, when the bouquets and decorations were the subject of a special illustrated article in The Review. But the flowers used for the event of May 7 were, of course, of the best. The bouquets were furnished by Z. D. Blackistone. The one carried by Miss Wilson was of white orchids and lily of the valley with maidenhair fern, in shower effect, with long streamers of ribbon, to which were attached lilies of the valley and orange blossoms with an occasional white orchid. The bouquet was tied with a huge bow of white satin ribbon and embroidered gauze. Shepherds' crooks were carried by the bridesmaids. These were decorated below the crook with bunches of Mrs. Taft roses and tied with bows of white satin ribbon to which were attached orange blossoms, and from these bows extended streamers of narrow satin ribbon also decorated with orange blossoms. The flower girls carried hats filled with Japanese double flowering crabapple blossoms, Spencer-type sweet peas and Farleyense, with bows of white satin ribbon.

The decorations within the White House were quite extensive and each of the rooms of the state apartments was decorated in harmony with the permanent decorations. In the Blue room, where the ceremony took place, were Easter lilies and groups of palms and ferns. The south bay window contained the priedieu on a raised semicircular platform. This was banked with palms, graduating at the ends towards the floor. In the foreground were ferns, while tall blue vases filled with lilies flanked the chancel. A spray of lilies was fastened at one side of the priedieu with white satin ribbon and there were clusters of these on the mantelpiece. Lilies also were used in large quantities in the East room, the four mantelpieces therein carrying large vases. On the colonial-type tables, set into the walls at intervals around the room, were large vases of dogwood blossoms and of American Beauty roses, and the alcoves adjoining were similarly decorated. In the dining room, where the wedding supper was served, the decorations were of pink and white roses, these flowers being placed in vases on each of the round tables and in huge bunches upon the mantelpiece. The Red room was made a mass of color with long-stemmed American Beauty roses, while Killarney roses and dogwood blossoms made the Green room even more attractive than it usually is.

The gifts of flowers were quite numerous. J. H. Small & Sons furnished flowers for the President of Guatemala and for Mr. Warburgh, of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., bankers, New York, and a huge corsage bouquet of violets for Mrs. Wilson. The Washington Florists Co. made up a basket of Sunburst roses for the minister from Bolivia and Mme. Calderon, a basket of Killarney roses for the minister from Switzerland, and a shower bouquet of Sunburst roses for the minister from the Netherlands. William Marche & Co. supplied an offering of orchids and lily of the valley for a member of the diplomatic circle. Other Washington florists also had orders for baskets, principally of roses. C. L. MOTHERS' DAY AND THE F. T. D.

The many efforts put forth by members of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery in advertising the delivery of flowers at a distance, through window decorating and newspaper advertising and numerous other ways, were rewarded with a great deluge of orders May 9 and 10. Never before were there so many telegrams and telephone calls flying about over the country, calling for the delivery of flowers at prices and in quantities not usually experienced. Inquiry in several different cities shows that the Florists' Telegraph Delivery is doing good work and that the public has taken decidedly to availing themselves of the opportunities offered. Members are joining freely and with the united advertising campaign, which amounts to a national one in scope, the growth of this phase of the florists' business will be greater than ever and the result a permanent one.

Irwin Bertermann, Pres.

FROM "F. T. D." POCHELON.

The article in the April 30 issue of The Review about retail florists waking up to the fact that it is much more necessary for them to try to get orders to telegraph and to advertise this facility to the public than it is to solicit wire orders from other florists pleased me immensely, as I have preached this sermon for a long time. It is not now so necessary for retailers to advertise to other retailers throughout the country what they can do in this line; it has come to the point where it is more necessary to have all the retailers fill these orders in a uniform manner. There are still a great many who do not seem or want to understand that a uniform discount of twenty per cent should be allowed. Furthermore, all orders should be telegraphed to the florists who fill them, for the sum received for the order. If every florist studies the trade papers and watches the pictures of work done by other retailers throughout the country, he can soon judge for himself how the other florist is liable to fill his order.

It is articles of this nature that are most beneficial to this field of the florists' business; I am sure that in a few years from now you will reap the thanks of a good many florists.

NEW STORE AT AKRON.

The new store of Henry Heepe's Sons, at Akron, O., which was opened for the first time about the middle of March, is one of the most thoroughly up-to-date stores in the state. The day that the headquarters were moved across the street to the new location an enormous number of the citizens of Akron visited the store; the attendance for the day was said to be fully 12,000. Plants and cut flower baskets and arrangements made a handsome decoration, and the furnishings of the room, as may be seen in the accompanying illustration, greatly helped the effect.

Back of the show room is a room for stocks of ribbon and various other supplies, and behind that a cool room for cut flowers. The second floor is the basket department, an important division of any flower store nowadays. In the rear is the garage, which accommodates three cars, and all deliveries are made from the rear. The new equipment has lightened the work at rush times, and although this Easter's business showed a big increase over all previous holidays, it was handled much more easily than that of other years.

The president of this concern is E. A. Heepe, and the secretary and treasurer is Henry Heepe. Frank Riley, recently with the Smith & Fetters Co., of Cleveland, is now with Henry Heepe's Sons.

THE CHECK GAME.

The Review repeatedly has cautioned its readers against accepting checks that call for cash change; the presentation of a check with the remark, "Take it out of that," when a purchase has been made, should be like a red light to a railroader—a danger signal. Cash change for a check never should be given to a stranger.

In spite of repeated warnings, florists continue to forget. Almost every issue tells of someone who got good money for a bad check by pretending to make a purchase. It seems to be the easiest of all petty swindles. This is the way G. C. & B. A. Stevens, of Marlboro, Mass., report it:

"Perhaps you will be willing to print the following story as a warning and help for other florists who are liable to meet a similar experience:

"Last week, one evening during the supper hour, when our store was in the charge of our clerk, a man dressed in laborer's clothes came in, ordered a floral piece for $8, to be marked 'L. O. O. M. No. 34,' and asked to have it delivered to a certain number on one of our streets. He passed the clerk a check for $15 and she, being rather inexperienced, although she had been warned not to cash checks, accepted the check and gave the fellow $7 in change. When we returned to the store and were told of the order and check we were suspicious of the check and thought we would find out if there were someone dead at the house where he ordered the pillow to be sent, before we proceeded to make it. The messenger whom we sent to the house found that a family of an entirely different name lived there and that it was a fake order. Upon telephoning to the Lowell bank we were informed that the check was worthless.

"We understand he played the same trick on another florist in our city and tried in one or two fruit stores to play a similar trick. He was clever enough to have the right number of our local society, asked to have the lettering put on the pillow and gave full instructions, etc.

"We write this little experience, hoping that the clerks in other stores who read this will take the warning and be on the watch for such impostors. We have read in the past in The Review of the same trick being played on florists, so we know it is no new game, but hope that some florist will be smart enough to catch the rascals who are up to such dishonorable business."

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Application for a charter has been filed by the Chattanooga Floral Co., with a capital of $5,000. The incorporators are J. L. Lindsay, C. W. Duffey, Carl Burke, J. R. Huff and F. Giddings.

Lincoln, Ill.—Carl Hembreiker, foreman of the rose section at Gullett & Sons', has resigned, to enter into partnership with his brother, Otto Hembreiker, who recently purchased the West End Greenhouses. The resignation takes effect June 1.

WHAT TEXAS PAYS FOR FLOWERS

TO GROWERS OUTSIDE THE STATE

WE are new in the florists' industry in this state. Eight years ago there were forty-two people growing flowers for the market in Texas. This number includes the greenhousemen and the nurserymen who grew a small number of flowers. At the present time there are ninety-eight commercially engaged in the growing of flowers. [R. C. Kerr later stated there are 265 in the state.] This indicates the growth and value of this industry.

Florists Classified.

The florists of Texas are too dependent upon outside florists for plants which they ought to grow themselves. Since I was assigned this subject, I secured from the express companies a statement of the number of shipments of cut flowers into this state, and the immensity of that business was astounding to me. I confined my investigation to those flowers that can be grown in Texas and should be grown in Texas and paid no attention whatever to those plants that are not adapted to our climatic environments.

In investigating this matter I have depended upon express shipments, because they form a record of everything that comes into the state, and the values placed on these shipments are a matter of record in the office of the general superintendent. I have divided the florists in the state into three classes—A, B and C. In class A are the florists who maintain a store in the city, where they display their cut flowers. Class B comprises those who maintain a display house at the greenhouses and deliver plants and cut flowers throughout the territory which they cover. Class C includes all the others who grow plants for profit.

Carnations and Roses Shipped In.

The florists in class A last year purchased, as shown by the records, 2,200,000 carnations, for which they paid, on the average, 3 cents each. This number does not embrace the purchases of class B or of Class C; $66,000 is the value placed on the shipments that came into this state to class A alone. I followed up a shipment that came to Charles Ehlers, of Houston. I saw the open box and then went to see the value of the box given to the express company by the man who shipped it in, and I found that the value was about 60 per cent of the purchase price. I went to H. H. Kuhlmann's, who had received two boxes of cut flowers, and the value was 48 per cent of the real price.

The florists in class A each pay per month $200, on the average, for roses. There are twenty-five florists in class A; there are really twenty-seven florists in this state who maintain stores, but one or two of them only do so a part of the season, so I have cut down the number to twenty-five. They pay for roses, those twenty-five men, according to the value placed by the shippers, $60,000 annually. Every one of those roses, except perhaps one variety, could and should be grown in this state.

Many Lilies From Outside.

There is nothing easier to grow and propagate than Easter lilies, and yet the florists in class A shipped into the state last year, according to the records of the express company, 37,500 Easter lilies, for which they paid, on the average, 12½ cents each. There is not a florist in this state with $10,000 invested in his business who could not supply all the Texas florists with all the Easter lilies they need in their business.

I found that these twenty-five florists are also buying Easter lily pot plants, which they can grow, last year shipping into this state, as shown by the express receipts, over 5,000 plants, for which they paid about the same price as they do for the cut flowers.

Then we have the chrysanthemums. The records show that the florists of this class purchased, on an average, 1,500 chrysanthemums each from outside florists. That has nothing to do at all with the florists in this state who supply other florists with chrysanthemums. We have two or three florists in Texas who have supplied as many as 8,000 to 10,000 of these flowers themselves, but my figures embrace shipments from outside the state, amounting to $9,425, which the florists of class A alone have paid for chrysanthemums. I do not believe there is a state in the Union better adapted to the growing of chrysanthemums than the state of Texas, and yet, in the face of all these facts, our florists are forced from necessity, if they supply the demand, to send out nearly $10,000 a year for the supplying of their customers with this particular plant.

Valley and Palms.

Of lilies of the valley, which can be cheaply and profitably grown in this state, there were, in round numbers, 40,000 shipped into Texas in 1913. I have the records, the total of all of which for these twenty-five florists, according to the shippers' value, was $1,400.

Then there are palms; everyone who has attempted to grow these knows that there is no section of the United States where they can be grown with more profit and with greater ease than in Texas, and yet there were shipped into Texas by these twenty-five florists, last year, 6,250 palms, for which they paid from $1.50 to $15.00 each. The average price, according to reports of the value placed on the shipments of these palms, is $4 each, making $25,000 paid by those twenty-five florists for palms to supply their customers, when they have every facility for growing the plants themselves.

Shipments by Classes B and C.

Now we come to class B. Class B embraces the florists who do not maintain a store in the city in which they do business. They purchased last year, according to the reports of the express offices, 733,000 carnations, for which they paid $22,000. The florists in class B paid, according to the records, $22,000 last year for cut roses. They paid $1,562 for Easter lilies, $208 for pot lilies, $3,162 for chrysanthemums and $466 for valley. These are the shippers' values on them. The florists paid a great deal more than that, but that is the value shown by the receipts at the express offices. They also paid $8,333 for palms.

Now comes class C, which includes all the florists and nurserymen in the state not embraced in classes A and B. For carnations, they paid $10,268; roses, $4,000; Easter lilies, $750; Easter lily pot plants, $500; chrysanthemums, $1,000; valley, $800, and palms, $3,000.

What the Total Is.

The florists of this state purchased last year carnations, at the value placed by those who shipped them, amounting to $98,000; roses, $86,000; Easter lilies, $6,996; Easter lily pot plants, $1,333; chrysanthemums, $13,587; valley, $2,666, and palms, $36,333, making a grand total of $244,915 paid out by the florists of Texas, according to the shippers' values.

I stated in the beginning that the service that the department of agriculture and the Agriculture and Mechanics College can render to the florists of Texas depends almost entirely on the financial help given those departments. I dare say that if our experimental sta-

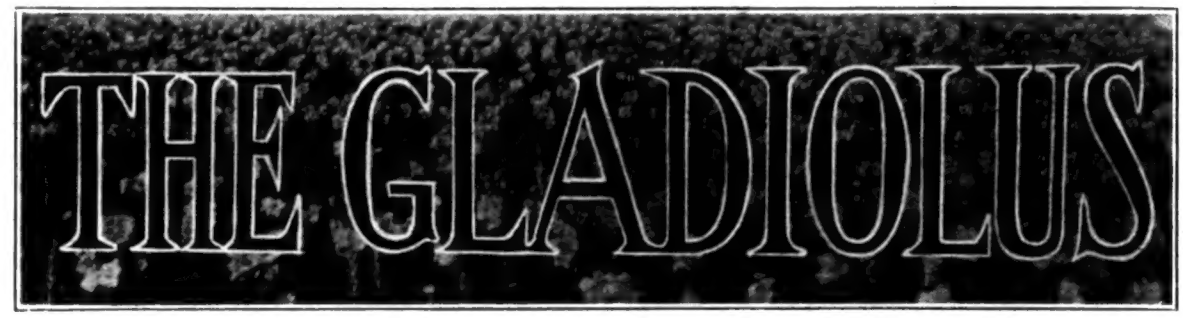
ROOTING ROSE CUTTINGS.

I have cuttings of American Beauty, Killarney and White Killarney roses which I have tried for months to root. My cutting bench is under the pipes and it is laid with 1½-inch clay tile, close together. The cuttings have all been good, having been taken from bench roses. I have tried some with a slanting cut and some with a straight cut. The sand, which is taken from a sand pit, is pressed firmly around the cuttings and they are watered for the first two or three days; afterwards they are sprinkled in the morning, so that the leaves will be dry by night. I would like to know why the leaves turn black and fall off after a week, the cuttings turning black, beginning at the bottom eye? I try to keep the temperature of the sand at from 65 to 70 degrees in the daytime and from 60 to 62 degrees at night, but still I am unsuccessful. R. M.

If the cutting bench referred to is underneath the heating pipes, as stated in this letter, it will be impossible to root rose cuttings on it. A bench to root roses is best made out of lumber or other material, about six inches deep, having good drainage in the bottom. If made of 6-inch boards, a quarter of an inch between the boards is sufficient. On top of this place about two inches of coarse gravel or crushed stone, such as is used for concrete work, and on top of this four inches of clean, sharp sand. Press this down firmly with a brick or pounder made out of a piece of 2x6 about ten inches long, with a handle fastened to it. Give the sand a thorough watering to clean out any impurities it may contain and it is ready for the cuttings.

Place the cuttings in the sand in rows about two inches apart and three-quarters to one inch apart in the rows. After the cuttings are placed in the sand give them a good watering to settle the sand well around each cutting, and after that water them well at least every two days for the first three weeks. If the bench is made as directed and the water drains off as it should, a good watering every morning is not too much; it will keep the cuttings in good shape, with the water contained in the sand always pure, which is the main secret of success in rooting rose cuttings. Have enough heat under the cutting bench to keep the temperature as near as possible to 65 degrees both day and night. Give the cuttings all the light there is, but no sun. Shade them, if possible, by stretching a cloth along the south edge of the bench, so that the cuttings have a good circulation of air at all times without having the sun shining on them. Keep the top temperature as near 55 degrees as possible. As the days are getting warmer now, this will be hard to do, but if the cuttings are kept well watered and have plenty of air a little higher temperature will not hurt them. W. J. K.



OUTDOOR ROSES IN ALABAMA.

I have planted out 100 grafted hybrid tea roses here, in central Alabama, for summer blooming. Will you please tell me how to treat them during the summer? They are 1-year-old stock of Double Killarney and Double White Killarney. Some are in bloom and bud. Should these blooms be removed the first summer? How far should the stems be cut back when removing the blooms? The plants are about six to ten inches high and some have a little sprout about three inches from the graft. Should the flower be cut below this branch or just above? Should any of the shoots that sprout from the graft be allowed to grow?

I also have some own-root, 2-year-old plants of Rhea Reid, which I have just planted. Should they be cut back any? Is there any book I could purchase that treats of grafted roses? H. A. C.

See that the roses do not suffer from want of water, and give them a heavy mulching, preferably of well-rotted cow manure. You should cut the blooms the first season about one-half the growth. In fact, you should cut all of the new growth, whether blooming or not, at least one-half in midsummer, so as to insure a good, strong cut the second year; otherwise you will get nothing but sickly stems on the next year's flowers. Cut the flowers just above the sprout of which you speak. As to the new shoots, leave all those that spring from the graft, but not those that spring from below.

Cut one-half of the wood back on the own-root Rhea Reid that have just been planted, and see that they are well mulched. The best authority I know of on grafted roses is Montgomery's book, which you can purchase from The Review for 25 cents. While the roses are growing, every care should be taken to keep them in good condition. You will find that in our Alabama climate you will have to be careful to keep the stock free from red spider and other insects. I find that just as much spraying is required in the open air as in the greenhouse. W. C. Cook.

GLADIOLI ON THE FARM.

If every farmer who reads the Country Gentleman absorbs the enthusiasm Maurice Fuld put into an article published there May 2, there will be a shortage of gladiolus bulbs this season, but no shortage of cut blooms a little later. According to the heading, "easy culture and rich profits make gladiolus growing attractive." Said Mr. Fuld:

"The gladiolus will grow in any good garden soil, preferably in a plot where grass has been growing and which has been turned under with a lot of manure the fall before. Moisture-retaining soil will grow good flowers, sandy soil will grow clean bulbs, but heavy clay soil will grow heavier and plumper bulbs as well as better flowers.

"Such bulbs as one finds offered in seed books or even by commercial growers in their regular lists are not the stock to be used by the commercial grower, for these are usually known as first size—that is, completely grown bulbs. Second, third and fourth-size bulbs are the best sizes to purchase in the beginning, for they produce excellent flowers as well as additional bulbs to make the stock permanent. Fourth-size bulbs, measuring from half an inch to three-quarters of an inch in diameter, are the best to buy, for they are the cheapest and produce as good flowers as the second size. They cannot always be procured, however, for the growers usually retain them for their own use.

"The ideal selection of varieties is, perhaps, of greater importance than any other feature in making commercial growing of gladioli profitable. Among the florists' sorts America is perhaps the leading variety. This year there are probably not less than 10,000,000 bulbs available, all of which will be planted. The flowers when well grown almost always bring from 3 to 4 cents the spike, even from the wholesale florist. It is true that many gladioli are sold in the wholesale market for as low as 1 cent a stalk, but for the reason only that they are inferior in quality.

"Only quality obtains the best market price. America is an ideal variety to grow, because it is of a marketable pink color, has a good stiff stem and large flowers, most of which open at one time. All these points tell in the selling power of a variety. Clear, delicate colors, such as pink, white and yellow, always sell more readily than the darker shades of scarlet, rose, crimson, lavender and

TRADE EXHIBITION.

The floor plan of the Mechanics building, which will house the trade's display at the August convention, is being sent out, with blank contracts for floor space. The usual flat rate of 40 cents per square foot, with a minimum charge of $20, will obtain; space above six feet six inches from the floor, except for cut flower, plant, greenhouse and other exhibits which necessarily extend above that height, will be charged twenty per cent additional. Wall space without floor or table space, or above the height allowed for exhibition space, will be charged for at the flat rate of 15 cents per square foot, with a minimum of $8.

"First come, first served" is the rule of the secretary in allotting space, and for that reason reservations should be made as soon as possible. The present outlook is for a well attended convention and a strong display, and the indoor exhibit is expected to come up to the high standard being set for the outdoor display.

SECRETARY'S BULLETIN.

The 1914 Button.

The secretary wishes to announce that the 1914 button has been mailed to all members in good standing in the society. If any member has not received same, it may be that he has overlooked paying the assessment for 1914. Upon receipt of the 1914 assessment this button will be forwarded promptly.

There are still a few life membership buttons on hand, which will be sent to any life member upon receipt of request, which should include 75 cents.

Convention, Boston, August, 1914.

The arrangements for the convention meetings and trade exhibition at Boston are advantageous and convenient. The trade exhibition will all be held on one floor, the main floor of the Mechanics building. Meetings will be held on the floor above, in the Paul Revere hall. Adjoining Paul Revere hall are large committee rooms, which have been set aside by the advisory committee for the use of the Ladies' S. A. F., the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and the Florists' Hail Association, for meetings of the American Rose Society and the American Carnation Society, and for the use of committees which may desire to use the same.

Plans, as submitted by the advisory committee, have been mailed to the members. Anyone desiring an extra copy will have same sent immediately upon notification to this office. The inquiries received thus far would indicate that the trade exhibition in Boston will excel any other similar showing made in the history of the society. All spaces on the main floor of the Mechanics building are favorable for any trade exhibit. The entrance and exit marked on the diagram between blocks 56 and 57 will not be used. There will be only one entrance and exit, and that adjoining the secretary's office.

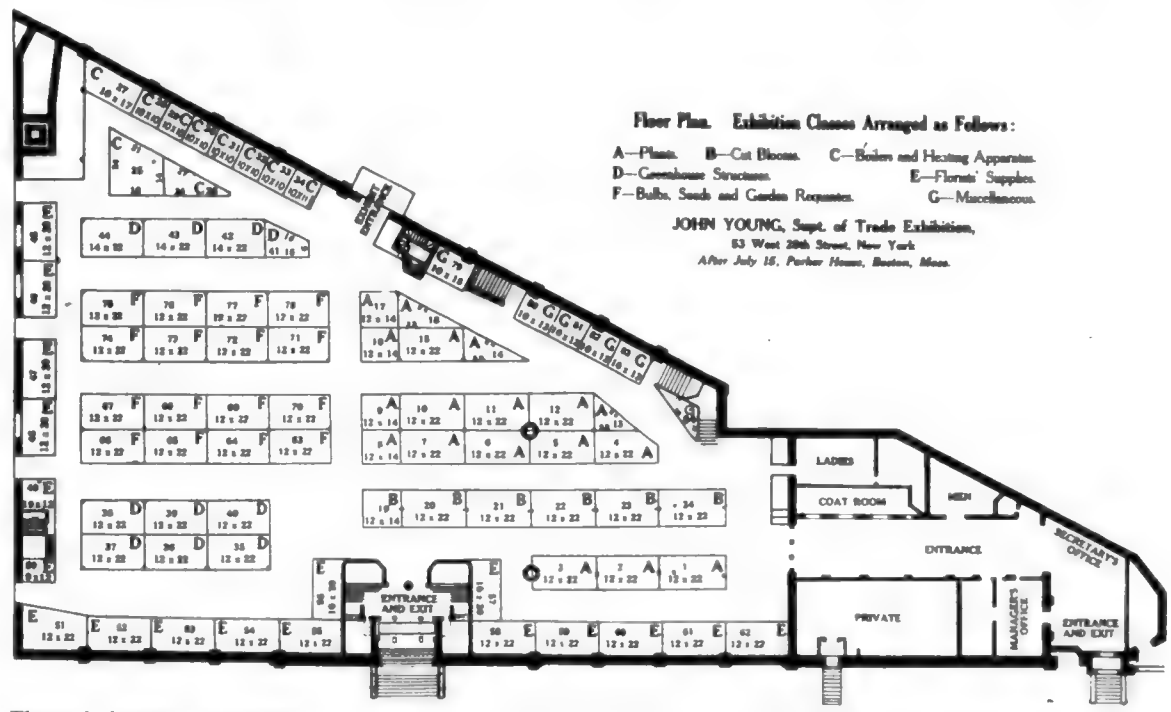
The official sign, including the rental of upright or stand in which to place same, will not exceed the price of $1.25 or $1.50 each. Exhibitors are requested to send in their order for signs, if possible, the same time they reserve space, so that they will be ready for the exhibitor upon his arrival at the hall. The lettering permitted on these signs is: One line for the firm name, one line for the business and one line for the address, a total of three lines.

Selling of goods by persons not having engaged space will not be permitted unless such persons or firms shall have secured a permit or license from the secretary, same not to cost less than $20. When more than one exhibitor joins in the same space, there will be an additional charge of $20 for each additional exhibitor. Twenty-five per cent of the total cost of space must be paid on signing the contract and the balance before the exhibitor takes possession. The flat rate per square foot for space is 40 cents. Minimum charge for space is $20.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that as no objection has been filed to the registration of Carnation Dr. Sam, by Charles L. Baum, of Knoxville, Tenn., same becomes complete.

Public notice is hereby given that as no objection has been filed to the registration of Antirrhinum Janesville, by Charles Rathjen, 813 Center street, Janesville, Wis., same becomes complete.



Public notice is hereby given that Mrs. B. B. Tuttle, of Naugatuck, Conn., submits for registration the orchid described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Name—Lælio-cattleya Tuttleæ. Description—Derived by crossing Cattleya Thayeriana with the pollen of Lælia Perrinii; habit of growth much like Lælia Perrinii; leaf and pseudobulbs dark green, suffused with reddish purple; flowers intermediate between the two parents; sepals and petals light rose; lip nearly entire; in shape like that of C. Thayeriana, nearly white, with the apex of the front lobe deep crimson; flowers four and one-half inches across.

FIBER BOXES GET RIGHTS.

A decision which has just been rendered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, placing fiber-board shipping boxes on an equal basis with those made of wood, in the matter of railroad rates, is regarded as of vast importance not only to the manufacturers of paper used in such boxes but also to thousands of shippers throughout the United States who have discarded wood boxes in preference for the fiber-board boxes in shipping medium or lightweight merchandise. Urged on by the manufacturers of wood boxes, the transportation companies had in many instances discriminated against the fiber boxes, giving lower rates to shipments in wood, but the commission says it fails to find evidence that there are more claims for damage or that greater care in handling is necessitated where the fiber boxes are used. Consequently it is ordered that rates be the same for shipments in fiber or wood cases.

ASPARAGUS DECUMBENS.

Please tell us the name of the enclosed plant and where we can get stock. Tell us, also, where we can get Spencer double-blooming winter sweet peas. N. A. K. & S.

The plant in question is Asparagus decumbens and could probably be had in limited quantities from some of the large plant dealers who advertise in The Review. Seed of the winter-blooming Spencer sweet peas may be had from any of the large seed dealers.

THE SMOKY CHIMNEYS

WHAT THE LAW SAYS.

Legal Liability of Florists.

A florist will ordinarily subject himself to legal liability if he permits the heating plant of his greenhouses to be so improperly managed that dense smoke is emitted into the air, to the annoyance or injury of his neighbors. This statement is sustained by the rules which have been frequently announced by the courts. The leading case on the subject, so far as florists are concerned, is that of Downing vs. Elliott, 64 Northeastern Reporter 28. In this case the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court recognized the rules above mentioned, but held that an owner of property situated near greenhouses was not entitled to enjoin the use of soft coal in the heating plant, since the injury to him was slight and the injunction would work a hardship upon the greenhouse owner, as other fuel was not available at a reasonable expense. Plaintiff claimed that smoke from the greenhouse heating plant rendered ice on his pond unsuitable for harvest.

Decision in Florist's Favor.

In denying his right to legal relief against defendant, the Supreme Judicial Court said: "The defendant's business is a lawful business, and he has a right to use his premises in any manner that will not violate the law. It cannot be said, we think, that the use of soft coal for the purpose of generating steam of itself constitutes a nuisance, though there are many places in which its use is regulated, and there is nothing to show that the business is not a proper one to be carried on in that locality, or that it is not carried on in a proper manner. Indeed, there would seem to be few businesses less objectionable than that of growing plants and flowers for sale. But though the locality is a suitable one, and the business is lawful and carried on in a proper manner, the defendant has no right to materially contaminate the air that comes to plaintiff's premises, and injure his business and property by the presence and deposit of smoke, soot, dust and cinders. Every one has a right to have the air that comes to his premises come as pure and uncontaminated as can reasonably be expected. In thickly settled communities absolute purity is out of the question. And the more varied are the kinds of business, the more will the atmosphere be unavoidably impregnated with impurities. This is one of the inconveniences, if it is an inconvenience, which everyone who lives in a populous neighborhood must suffer. But the fact that the atmosphere is already impure does not justify or excuse a party in adding to the impurity so as to thereby cause still further discomfort to others, or still further injury to their business or property, and conduct which leads to such a result will constitute an invasion of the rights of the parties injuriously affected thereby."

Abating the Smoke Nuisance.

A bulletin issued by the Bureau of Mines of the United States Department of Interior some time ago contains an interesting summary of the status of smoke abatement in the United States. The report is based upon an investigation of conditions in every city in the country. Of the cities having less than 200,000 inhabitants it appeared that about twenty-nine were making more or less vigorous efforts to suppress the smoke nuisance. Of the twenty-eight cities having more than 200,000 population, it is reported that five were making practically no effort toward smoke abatement, but that in three of these fuel oil is used almost exclusively and the smoke problem is not serious. Most of the ordinances are directed against the emission of "dense" smoke into the atmosphere, it being generally understood that an ordinance which forbids emission of "any" smoke is invalid. Readers of The Review will find it worth their while to send to the Bureau of Mines for copies of this bulletin, since it will afford them interesting information not only concerning their duty to avoid discharging smoke into the air, but concerning their rights against nearby manufacturers who permit smoke to be emitted from factories to such extent as to interfere with the operation of greenhouses.

THE OHIO TAX CASE.

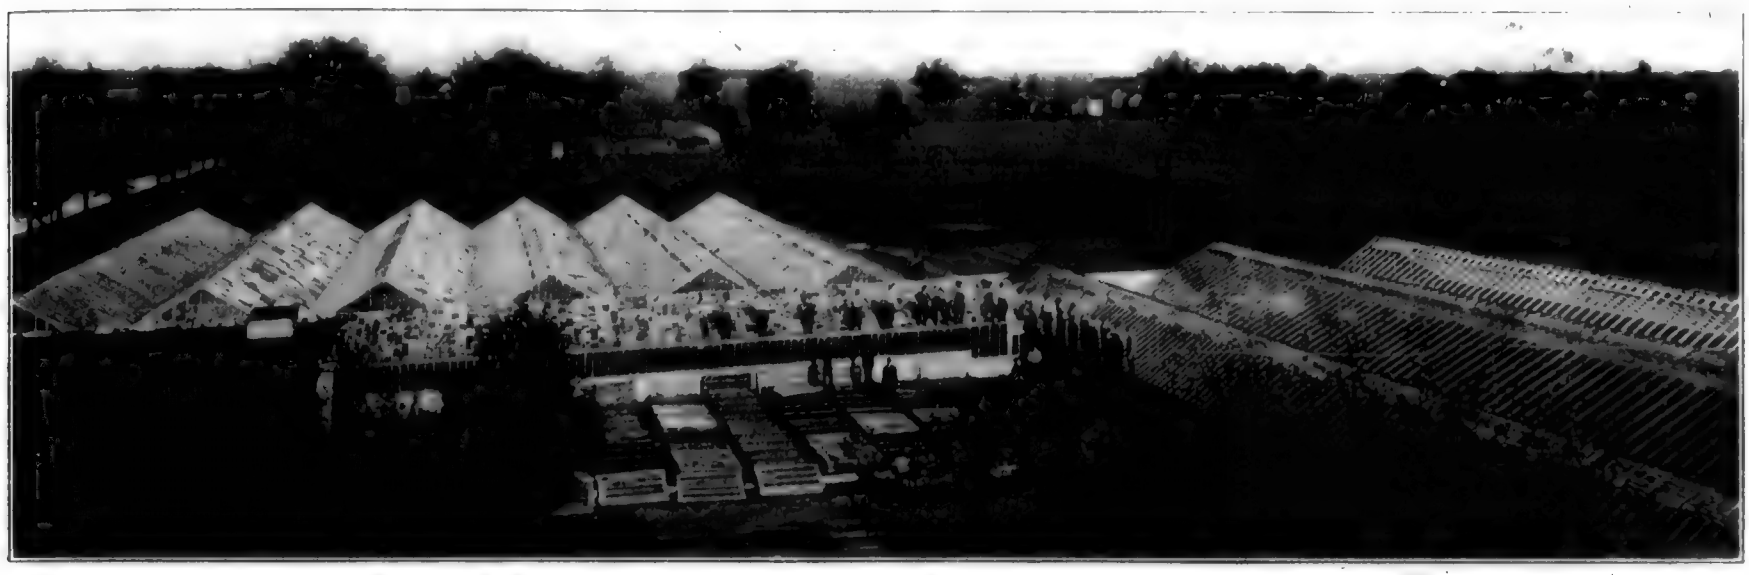
The test case of Ralph Miller, county treasurer, versus the George H. Mellen Co., of Springfield, O., has been assigned for hearing May 18 in the Court of Appeals at Springfield. This is the case which is to determine whether or not the growing crops in the greenhouses and nurseries is assessable for taxation. A decision adverse to the trade interests has been given in the lower court and the case has been carried up by the Springfield Florists' Club, with the aid of cash subscriptions by many other florists through the state. At Springfield $250 was raised. Cincinnati contributed $115. Cleveland raised $210. The total defense fund amounts to $800. Able counsel has been engaged and a vigorous defense has been prepared, as the outcome will be of far-reaching importance to the trade.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

The Propagating Bench.

While it is getting late to root cuttings of many bedding plants, there is still time to insert batches of coleus, alternantheras or other quick rooting subjects which may come in useful in filling late orders. Such plants as snapdragons are producing cuttings in abundance. These root easily now, much better than a month hence. Then, of course, chrysanthemums for single stems can be profitably propagated until June 1. Marguerites, stevias, geraniums and other cuttings also can still be rooted. If you want to increase your stock of acalyphas, pandanus, colored-leaved dracænas and crotons, a good time to put in the cuttings is after the bedding stock has vacated the cutting bench. There is need of more shade and moisture as the season advances. Given these, propagation from now onward is easy, even if fire heat is not used.

Utilize the Coldframes.



At this season the Memorial day bench crops and bedding plants fill the houses to overflowing and, as growth is rapid, they require frequent spacing apart. It is now that coldframes are useful, and growers who have a liberal supply of them are to be congratulated, as they are the ideal place for growing and gradually hardening off all bedding plants. Bedding stock, such as geraniums, coleus, verbenas, heliotropes, ageratums, etc., all grows vastly better in these frames than in greenhouses, and the plants do particularly well if partly plunged, a lessened water supply then sufficing. Remove the sashes entirely during hot days and gradually increase the ventilation at night. Plants hardened in coldframes are better adapted for bedding out than those taken directly from greenhouses.

Peonies.

Peonies now are making rapid growth, thanks to the warmer weather and abundant moisture in the ground. The plants will be much benefited and the flowers improved in size if a dressing of nitrate of soda, dried blood or some other quick-acting fertilizer is worked in about the roots. Keep the surface soil constantly stirred and, as soon as the buds can be handled, remove all but the central one. If, however, medium flowers, which will come in season a little later, are wanted, remove the central bud and leave two side buds. These will not produce as fancy flowers as the main bud, but will have the advantage of coming into flower a full week later, which is sometimes quite important.

Dahlias.

It is never safe to plant out dahlias with young shoots until danger from frost has gone, but divided roots which are dormant or just starting into growth should be planted at once. The ground for dahlias should be thoroughly harrowed and pulverized, but heavy manuring is not necessary. In fact, I have seen just as fine dahlias produced in fields where commercial fertilizer only was used as where heavy doses of barnyard manure were applied. Where there is a general retail trade, a selection of free-blooming varieties will be found useful. Do not make the mistake of growing too many sorts, but plant a dozen or twenty-five of each. It is then possible to get a bunch, when necessary, of one color. The most useful dahlias for the florist are the decorative, cactus and peony-flowered types. Some show varieties, however, such as A. D. Livoni, Yellow Livoni and Charles Lanier, are almost indispensable. The singles are easily the most decorative, but their keeping qualities are not so good as those of other types and they are now little seen. The pompons are useful for cutting, and are quite free-blooming.

HAIL HITS TRIMBLE HOUSES.

A severe hail storm which visited Princeton, Ill., Tuesday evening, May 5, wrought havoc at the range of the W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co., inflicting a loss of between $5,000 and $8,000. The appearance of the establishment after the storm had finished its work is shown in the accompanying illustration. Twenty-two men spent the rest of the week glazing the houses, in an effort to restore the place to its former state. The Killarney and White Killarney which were then in crop were as good as growing outdoors. The mildness of the weather rendered the damage from this exposure extremely small.

BIG LOSS AT ERICKSON RANGE.

The Erickson Greenhouses had about 20,000 feet of glass broken by the hail storm which visited Princeton, Ill., Tuesday evening, May 5. The accompanying illustration shows the houses as they appeared in the process of repair. The loss is estimated to be altogether between $3,000 and $4,000.

This establishment, now owned by Carl Erickson, was started forty-five years ago by N. P. Colberg, who disposed of it in 1902 to the present proprietor. It includes eleven houses, with a total of over 40,000 square feet of glass. The water supply of the range was obtained from the city water works until 1909, when Mr. Erickson installed a gravity tank, pumping his supply by windmill; two years ago a 1,000-gallon Kewanee air-pressure system was installed, and later a 2,000-gallon tank. Two large steam boilers heat the range, and all the houses are lighted by electricity for evening display. Fourteen acres for outdoor culture adjoin the range.

HYDRANGEA FOLIAGE YELLOW.

What can we do to cause the leaves of our hydrangeas to have a good, green color? They are light green and yellow. L. M. S. & C.

The hydrangeas are most likely more or less starved, and the color may be brought back by feeding them with manure water once or twice a week.

SALVIAS DOING POORLY.

I am sending under separate cover a salvia plant and shall be glad if you will tell me what is the trouble with it. As cuttings these were in satisfactory condition. The entire lot is affected in the same way. H. H. C.

Your soil appears to be too heavy and acid. Use leaf-mold, a little finely screened old manure and some sand. Let this form one-half of the total compost and you will thus lighten the soil materially. If you will do this I think you will have no trouble in growing your salvias satisfactorily. C. W.

ANTS ON SWEET PEAS.

Will you please tell me how to stop small red ants from attacking sweet peas, in which they bore great numbers of holes along the roots of the vines? This has caused the vines to wither and die when only a few inches high. I lost practically all my sweet peas in this manner last year, and I believe I understand the culture, as I have been successful with them in previous years. The ants have already appeared on them this year. I tried lime water on them last year, but without success. R. G. S.

Lime water would be of no avail in fighting the ant pest. You need something much stronger to clean them out. You can poison large numbers by mixing a little finely powdered cyanide of potassium with powdered sugar. The ants will eat this greedily. In breaking up the cyanide, which is a deadly poison, keep it inside a small, close cloth bag, for if any fragments should strike the eyes it might be serious. Carbon bisulphide, a small teaspoonful to a hole, making holes four to five inches deep and a foot apart each way, will suffocate these and other soil pests. There also are a number of proprietary articles that will clear out ants and other life in the soil. C. W.

St. Paul, Minn.—Henry Krinke & Son have about 2,600 plants of their new lobelia, named for Mrs. August Swanson, to be used in their spring trade. They have great confidence in its value as a bedding plant and stock sent out has met with a favorable reception. The color is almost royal purple with white eye and the variety appears to be a profuse bloomer.

CLEARING CATTLEYA FLY.

The cattleya fly has become a serious menace. Orchid growers all over the United States are finding their profits swept away by the depredations of this pest. Some of them, indeed, do not recognize the cause of their trouble, so inconspicuous is the insect. The female of the species rarely is seen. The male is an inoffensive looking little black fly; it doesn't look as though it would do anybody any harm. But a family of cattleya flies, or a colony of eggs, soon breeds disaster. The trouble lies in that practically everyone is sure to have his experience with the flies sooner or later, for imported plants bring them in and their presence sometimes is difficult to detect before the stock is badly infested.

But the cattleya fly is by no means the difficult pest to eradicate that many growers think it is. Some of the big cut flower producers have had their experiences with it. There is record of one man who has nine houses of cattleyas whose place was so badly infested that he faced ruin. Several others have let the fly get the upper hand before they realized their danger. But at least half a dozen big growers who had bad cases have cleaned their places. G. L. Freeman, whose business is the importing of orchid plants, says it invariably can be done merely by thorough attention. The first thing to do, according to Mr. Freeman and all other cattleya growers, is to cut off the growths which show the presence of the fly. A swelling indicates its presence. Cut the swelling and you find the cause. The growths must be immediately removed from the house and burned. Anything else merely means more trouble. Three times a week the house should be thoroughly gone over with one of the nicotine preparations. This may be necessary for several weeks, the infected growths being cut off as rapidly as the swellings are detected, and the nicotine treatment being kept up for the benefit of such flies as have escaped former applications. According to Mr. Freeman, no grower who finds his plants infested need despair; but, having cleaned the houses, eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. If Bob Fitzsimmons couldn't come back the fly can, and does.

HEAD ROOM FOR EARLY SNOW.

I have some mum cuttings of Early Snow that are ready to pot up. I want to grow these to single stems, but I have only about four feet of head room. Will they get too tall for this, or had I better top them after they get established? I have never grown this variety before. F. M.

The stock of Early Snow now ready to pot up should not get more than three and one-half feet tall; at least, this variety would not in our soil and under our conditions. C. H. Totty.

OUTDOOR STOCK FOR MARKET.

I am writing to you for advice about the growing of outdoor stock. I live in the extreme south of the state of Illinois. I have had some experience in greenhouse work, but not any in the growing of outdoor stock for the Chicago market. From this part of the state quantities of the common daffodils and jonquils are shipped to Chicago. I have about five acres of land that could be used for the growing of flowers for the market. It seems to me that if the finer varieties of daffodils and jonquils were grown, they would bring a better price. Will you kindly let me know the names of the best sellers among the daffodils and jonquils, and also the names of the best peonies? I should also like to know the names of any other flowers that could be profitably grown for the market.

My plot of ground is exposed to the north. I thought that when planted it could be protected somewhat by planting a hedge of lilacs. What varieties of these are the best to grow for their blooming qualities? C. E. H.

The only difficulty you will have in the growing of daffodils for the Chicago market is the fact that at times the market becomes glutted with poor stock. We grow about 200 varieties of narcissi and find that the good varieties are always in demand. They will require little protection in your latitude.

Sir Watkin, Emperor, Empress and Princeps are all good sellers here, in the vicinity of Nashville, Tenn., and are easily grown. The prices of these are not prohibitive, either. Incomparabilis Stella is cheap and we find it profitable. Poetaz Elvira and its companion, Irene, have been good sellers with us and have done well in the last two years. Glory of Leiden is the best seller, but the bulbs are too expensive. The true Sulphur Phœnix has always proved to be our best money-maker, with N. poeticus King Edward VII, and the jonquil N. odorus rugulosus, as close seconds. Poeticus King Edward VII is much larger than the older varieties and we have it on 2-foot stems in good soil. All of the poeticus varieties are profitable with us.

In planting narcissi, get the ground in good condition early and use plenty of cow manure. They should be in ground that is well drained, and deep plowing, of course, adds to the efficiency of the drainage. The earlier the planting can be done, the earlier the bulbs will bloom. It is better to have the soil all prepared some time before planting, or be careful that the bulb does not come in too direct contact with the manure.

If your soil is sandy and free from lime, or almost so, you should find Spanish irises profitable. They do not usually succeed well in the open in lime soil, though they are profitable here in spite of that handicap. Get named varieties and only good bulbs. Blue, white and yellow are the popular colors.

In peonies I would recommend Queen Victoria, on account of its long-keeping qualities; also Pæonia festiva maxima,

One of the Ways Florists' Supplies Houses Now Cultivate the City Trade.

Duchesse de Nemours, P. rubra triumphans, Felix Crousse and Grover Cleveland. The last mentioned variety is rather high-priced, but it is by far the best red. There are many good pinks, but P. edulis superba, P. delicatissima, Venus and Mons. Jules Elie are about as good as any that can be secured. A good, rich, clay loam is the best soil for peonies.

The common lilac, Syringa vulgaris, and its companion, Syringa vulgaris alba, are hard to beat. Frau Bertha Dammann, Charles X, S. Persica and most of the recent French varieties are good sellers. The French sorts have the added advantage of blooming when they are small plants.

You might find gladioli and dahlias profitable if handled carefully. We find them so. F. B.

OBITUARY.

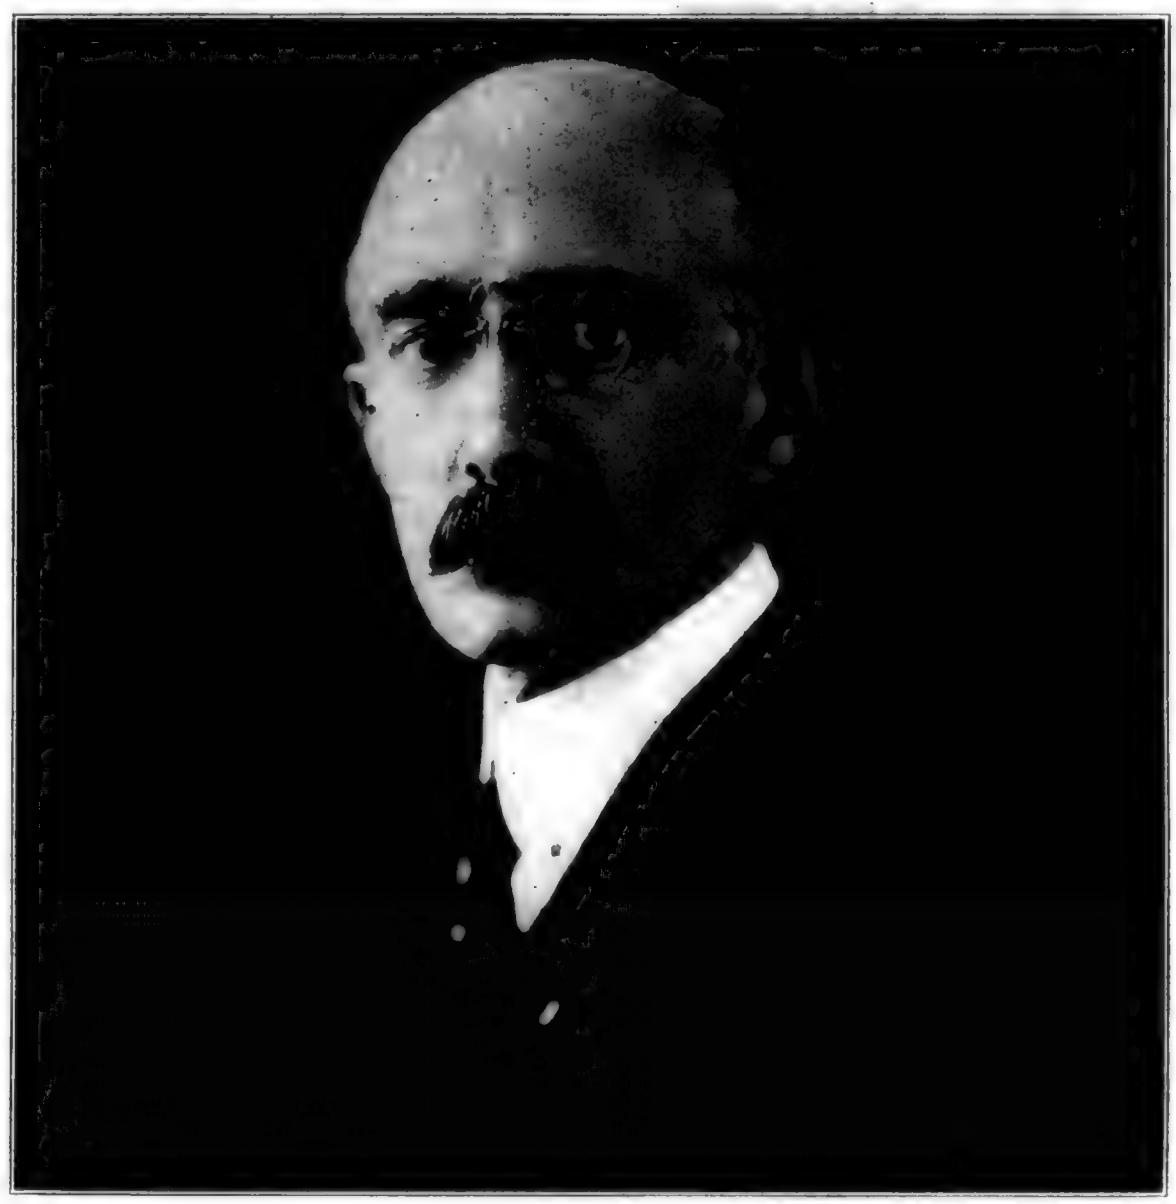
James Slimon.

James Slimon, until recently manager of Vaughan's Seed Store, New York, and for many years with J. M. Thorburn & Co., died Friday, May 8, from an attack of pneumonia, following a paralytic stroke early in April of this year. A wife and three daughters survive. Mr. Slimon was 50 years of age. He was born in Glasgow. A gentleman of splendid ability and most genial personality, he was universally esteemed by all who knew him. At the funeral many floral tributes to his memory from the seedsmen evidenced the respect and sympathy of his many friends.

B. P. Critchell.

B. P. Critchell, one of the pioneer florists of Cincinnati, died at his home, on Knott avenue, Avondale, Monday, May 11, at the age of 71 years. Mr. Critchell was born in England, August 8, 1842. He came to this country when 4 years old. He served with distinction throughout the Civil war, having engaged in sixteen battles. About a half century ago he settled in Cincinnati. During the exposition times, when competition among the florists was keen, he was the most prominent in southern Ohio. Later landscape work occupied his attention and during the Fleischmann administration he became park superintendent. After his term of office had expired he again devoted himself to landscape work. The first attack of paralysis, which disease finally carried him to his Maker, occurred about two years ago. Mr. Critchell was, however, more or less active up to a few weeks before his death. With E. G. Gillett he was a trustee of the Jabez Elliott Flower Market from its inception. Mr. Critchell was a member of various Masonic bodies. The deceased is survived by his widow, Frances J. Critchell, and eight children: William and C. E. Critchell, the latter the well known wholesale florist; Mrs. L. H. Hayes, Mrs. John Tracy, Mrs. Robert Morris and the Misses Bess, May and Celeste Critchell. Funeral services were held Wednesday, May 13, at the family home. There was a large attendance and many flowers.

Eric Bonevier.



Eric Bonevier, proprietor of the Butcher Greenhouses, Providence, R. I., died May 9, after an illness of several months. Mr. Bonevier was born in Sweden and, after receiving his education there, came to this country as a young man. He was first employed as an assistant to gardeners and florists in the vicinity of Boston and Newport. Later he located at Providence and was associated with the late William Butcher for a number of years. After Mr. Butcher's death he conducted the business for Mrs. Butcher until about two years ago, when he took over the business. He was unmarried and leaves a mother in Sweden. He was a member of Rising Sun Lodge of Masons in East Providence.

Julius White.

Julius White, who for twenty-two years conducted a florists' business in Skaneateles, N. Y., passed away May 10, at his home in that village, after a long illness. He was 64 years of age and was born in England, coming to this country in 1866. He is survived by his widow and one son. L. C. B.

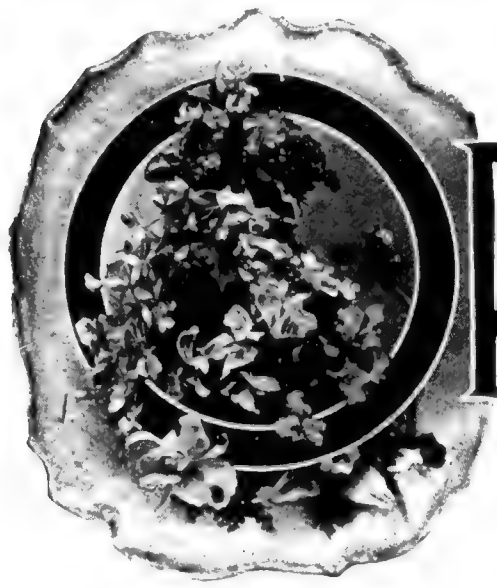
THE MEN YOU MEET



JOHN JEFFERSON WILSON.

WITH the approach of summer the president of the J. J. Wilson Seed Co., of Newark, N. J., turns his thoughts to motor boating. The chug-chug of the motor replaces the symphonies of the orchestra, which, with other music, hold his interest in winter. An all-the-year-round hobby, however, is painting, and Mr. Wilson is an expert wielder of the brush. In business, too, he shows his adaptability. Being born, forty-five years ago, in the north of Ireland, he naturally entered the linen thread business. Twenty-two years ago he crossed the ocean to act as sole agent for Canada of a linen thread house. On its failure, he came to New York, and fifteen years ago entered the employ of J. M. Thorburn & Co., becoming secretary on the retirement of R. R. Mackenzie. Last August he left the concern to establish his own business in Newark.

Champaign, Ill.—D. H. Harrison, for a time in the cucumber growing business with his brother-in-law at Ottawa, is considering the erection of a $40,000 range here for the same line.

Moline, Ill.—At the meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club, held at the residence of Wm. Knees, resolutions of respect for the late Theodore Ewoldt, written by Arvid Anderson, Henry Gaethje and W. C. Wilson, were adopted.

Alvin, Tex.—W. L. Heller, manager of the Alvin Cape Jessamine & Floral Co., says that, owing to the unusually cool, late spring, the crop will begin to move several days later than it did last season, but if the remainder of the month is up to or above the normal temperature, the company, with its increased acreage, will move about as much stock as a year ago. The recent heavy rains have been of great benefit.

Poeticus King Edward VII is much larger than the older varieties and we have it on 2-foot stems in good soil. All of the poeticus varieties are profitable with us.

In planting narcissi, get the ground in good condition early and use plenty of cow manure. They should be in ground that is well drained, and deep plowing, of course, adds to the efficiency of the drainage. The earlier the planting can be done, the earlier the bulbs will bloom. It is better to have the soil all prepared some time before planting, or be careful that the bulb does not come in too direct contact with the manure.

If your soil is sandy and free from lime, or almost so, you should find Spanish irises profitable. They do not usually succeed well in the open in lime soil, though they are profitable here in spite of that handicap. Get named varieties and only good bulbs. Blue, white and yellow are the popular colors.

In peonies I would recommend Queen Victoria, on account of its long-keeping qualities; also Paeonia festiva maxima,

One of the Ways Florists' Supplies Houses Now Cultivate the City Trade.

Duchesse de Nemours, P. rubra triumphans, Felix Crousse and Grover Cleveland. The last mentioned variety is rather high-priced, but it is by far the best red. There are many good pinks, but P. edulis superba, P. delicatissima, Venus and Mons. Jules Elie are about as good as any that can be secured. A good, rich, clay loam is the best soil for peonies.

The common lilac, Syringa vulgaris, and its companion, Syringa vulgaris alba, are hard to beat. Frau Bertha Dammann, Charles X, S. Persica and most of the recent French varieties are good sellers. The French sorts have the added advantage of blooming when they are small plants.

You might find gladioli and dahlias profitable if handled carefully. We find them so. F. B.

OBITUARY.

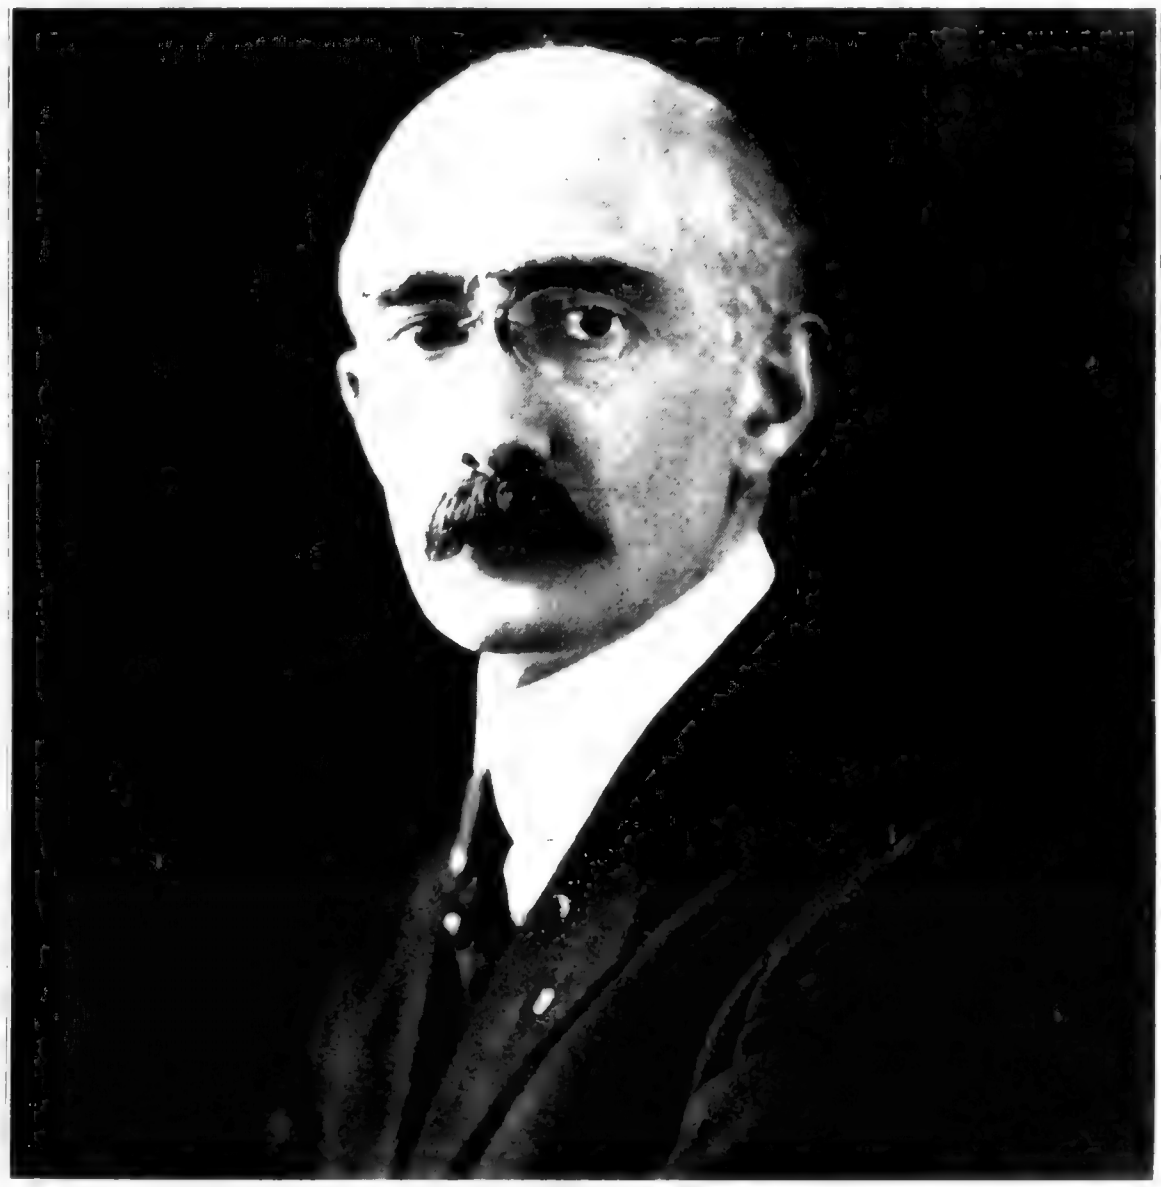
James Slimon.

James Slimon, until recently manager of Vaughan's Seed Store, New York, and for many years with J. M. Thorburn & Co., died Friday, May 8, from an attack of pneumonia, following a paralytic stroke early in April of this year. A wife and three daughters survive. Mr. Slimon was 50 years of age. He was born in Glasgow. A gentleman of splendid ability and most genial personality, he was universally esteemed by all who knew him. At the funeral many floral tributes to his memory from the seedsmen evidenced the respect and sympathy of his many friends.

B. P. Critchell.

B. P. Critchell, one of the pioneer florists of Cincinnati, died at his home, on Knott avenue, Avondale, Monday, May 11, at the age of 71 years. Mr. Critchell was born in England, August 8, 1842. He came to this country when 4 years old. He served with distinction throughout the Civil war, having engaged in sixteen battles. About a half century ago he settled in Cincinnati. During the exposition times, when competition among the florists was keen, he was the most prominent in southern Ohio. Later landscape work occupied his attention and during the Fleischmann administration he became park superintendent. After his term of office had expired he again devoted himself to landscape work. The first attack of paralysis, which disease finally carried him to his Maker, occurred about two years ago. Mr. Critchell was, however, more or less active up to a few weeks before his death. With E. G. Gillett he was a trustee of the Jabez Elliott Flower Market from its inception. Mr. Critchell was a member of various Masonic bodies. The deceased is survived by his widow, Frances J. Critchell, and eight children: William and C. E. Critchell, the latter the well known wholesale florist; Mrs. L. H. Hayes, Mrs. John Tracy, Mrs. Robert Morris and the Misses Bess, May and Celeste Critchell. Funeral services were held Wednesday, May 13, at the family home. There was a large attendance and many flowers.

Eric Bonevier.



Eric Bonevier, proprietor of the Butcher Greenhouses, Providence, R. I., died May 9, after an illness of several months. Mr. Bonevier was born in Sweden and, after receiving his education there, came to this country as a young man. He was first employed as man as assistant to gardeners and florists in the vicinity of Boston and Newport. Later he located at Providence and was associated with the late William Butcher for a number of years. After Mr. Butcher's death he conducted the business for Mrs. Butcher until about two years ago, when he took over the business. He was unmarried and leaves a mother in Sweden. He was a member of Rising Sun Lodge of Masons in East Providence.

Julius White.

Julius White, who for twenty-two years conducted a florists' business in Skaneateles, N. Y., passed away May 10, at his home in that village, after a long illness. He was 61 years of age and was born in England, coming to this country in 1866. He is survived by his widow and one son. L. C. B.

THE MEN YOU MEET

JOHN JEFFERSON WILSON.

WITH the approach of summer the president of the J. J. Wilson Co., Newark, N. J., turns his thoughts to motor boating. The engine of the motor replaces the symphonies of the orchestra, which, with other music, had his interest in winter. An all the year round hobby, however, is painting, and Mr. Wilson is an expert wielder of the brush. In business, too, he shows a scope to [illegible]. Being born, forty-five years ago, in the north of Ireland, he naturally entered the linen thread business. Twenty-two years ago he crossed the ocean to set as agent for Canada of a linen thread house. On its failure, he came to New York, and [illegible] years ago entered the employ of J. M. Thorburn & Co., becoming secretary on the retirement of R. R. Mackenzie. Last August he left [illegible] business in Newark.

Thirtieth annual convention, Boston, Mass., August 18 to 21, 1914.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

IT takes a little longer to build a business on strict credit lines, but, once built, such a business is immeasurably better worth having.

PRINTED letter-heads, used in sending an order, command a degree of respect that would not be accorded the same order written on any handy scrap of paper.

THE talk against "commercializing" Mothers' day is "to laugh." How about commercializing Christmas or Easter? The public wants flowers at certain times. Wouldn't florists be foolish to fail to remind them of those wants?

THERE is a constantly increasing number of women employed in the trade. While some of the big stores in the cities do not employ women outside the office, they have proved more satisfactory than men as salespeople for hundreds of stores where the work is lighter.

IT develops that the supply of prepared magnolia leaves is much less than it was expected to be, with some time to elapse before any of the new crops will be ready. The demand has become extremely large during the last few days, as retailers are preparing for Memorial day.

WHEN FORMS CLOSE.

In announcing new advertising rates of $900 per page the Country Gentleman, weekly, states that "copy and cuts must be received twenty-nine days before date of publication." The Review feels itself lucky if it can get copy and cuts twenty-nine HOURS before it goes to press, and it only charges $30 per page for its space. If advertisers would mail their copy to reach The Review Friday or Saturday instead of Tuesday (the day forms close), it would be possible to give them still better service, because less hurried. The greater part of the week's work now must be done in two days, as the result of the habit advertisers have of putting us off until the last minute.

"RESULTS LIKE THESE."

It should be reiterated that the letters printed from week to week in which advertisers tell of their satisfaction with the results obtained from use of space in The Review are not in any way exceptional or infrequent. The purpose of printing these letters is to encourage those not satisfied with their limited local business to branch out into the wholesale and unlimited field, and also to show those who have surpluses of good stock how they quickly and cheaply can turn the surplus into cash—from waste to profit. Like this:

We are sold out clean, without even one plant left, either of snapdragons or pansies. Also, we are shipping many orders for geranium cuttings this month, some of them extremely large orders. Results like this can only be due to The Review. We enclose our check in payment of last month's account. It is a bill we always are glad to settle, considering the benefits received as being excellent for the price.—J. P. Siebold, Lancaster, Pa., May 9, 1914.

SEE WHAT UNCLE SAM WILL DO.

To show what opportunities are opened up to florists by the parcel post and to what extent use may be made of this service by the trade, C. P. Hughes, of Hillsdale, Mich., sends the following clipping from the Hillsdale Daily for May 5:

"Unquestionably the most unique parcel post package which ever came to Hillsdale was received here this morning and sent on to Quincy. It came from West Branch and consisted of a large bouquet of beautiful pink trailing arbutus, in full bloom, the arbutus having been surrounded by moss and placed in a deep tin pan of water, the tin pan having a handle like a basket, and the whole being lightly covered with pink mosquito netting. The most peculiar thing, in connection with the package, was that, though the flowers had changed trains at Grand Rapids, Jackson and Hillsdale, the pan was still practically full of water, all of the mailmen having taken special care not to spill a drop. The cost of sending the package through by parcel post was just 6 cents."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

This market seldom has seen such a scurrying for stock as occurred at the end of last week. Mothers' day was not better than last year, so far as most of the growers and wholesalers are concerned, for the simple reason that the supply was cut down more than prices advanced. While prices averaged higher than ever before has been known just preceding the second Sunday in May, the increase in the value of flowers did not compensate for the decrease in supply. Of course the grower who was so fortunate as to have a good crop got the benefit, but the average grower is cutting little.

It was a wholly exceptional Mothers' day. This market never has seen anything at this season of the year at all like the present condition, and it probably will be a good many years before anything of the same kind happens again. For Mothers' day there was practically enough stock in all lines except carnations. While prices were held stiffer than in other years, not many buyers were refused flowers unless they called for carnations. The condition seems to have been general through the central part of the country, as orders for carnations were far more numerous and heavier than orders for anything else. Of course the same order appeared in the market several times, the buyer wiring house after house in the hope of getting supplies. Consequently, the demand really was not so heavy as it seemed. No wholesaler, however, could fill more than a small part of his orders for carnations. Growers, however, should remember that the few sales at big prices do not correctly represent the market. At the opening of the week the market was 3 cents and 4 cents. At the close of the week it was 5 cents and 6 cents, with quite a few flowers sold below these rates. While one hears of 8-cent carnations, and even higher prices, the average wholesaler considered it in the interest of the growers to take care of regular customers and to charge only reasonable prices. There is another day coming, and wholesalers did not wish to lose regular customers for the immediate gain of a few dollars.

Short and medium roses sold splendidly when the buyers found it was simply impossible to get as many carnations as they wanted. It was necessary to cut some of the orders for short roses. Practically every flower shared in the Mothers' day demand, as everything sold well in retail stores. There was a splendid clean-up Saturday night, and on the morning of May 10 the market was at its strongest. The outcome seemed to prove the contention that the florists have themselves to blame for the special demand for carnations for Mothers' day. The ease with which other stock sold when the public found that other flowers were cheaper than carnations seemed to prove that the florists have pushed up on themselves the price of carnations for Mothers' day. Usually the supply is much larger than it was this year, but every year the bulk of the wholesale demand is for carnations. If it is so in the future it will be because florists have not heeded this year's experience.

This week opened cold and dark, with little stock in the market and prices well maintained. Everything was cut so close for Mothers' day that good weather sadly is needed. Peonies from the south are coming strongly. Before the end of the present week the shipments will be going into storage in preparation for Memorial day. There are increased supplies of gladioli, and the miniature gladioli, of the Colvillei type, have arrived in considerable quantity. There are still plenty of Easter lilies, but no glut. Callas are about done. Indoor bulbous stock practically is over. There are some excellent outdoor tulips and some good frame-grown jonquils. The southern jonquils are not much in evidence.

Sweet peas are in good supply and are selling excellently; there is nothing more popular in the market. Spanish iris is dropping out. Snapdragon is selling better. Good double stocks go well and the low grade singles no longer are seen in quantity.

Poehlmannville Notes.

A number of inquiries have been received regarding Killarney Brilliant, one or two growers writing that they hear it will not be planted heavily because of some fault that has developed. A. F. Poehlmann says nothing has occurred to raise a doubt that the rose is a winner. Several houses of it have already been planted, with plants grafted at Morton Grove with wood sent from Philadelphia.

What carnation produces the most blooms? That depends on how you figure it. Guy French does not figure his cut per plant, but by the foot. He finds that while Beacon does not give so many blooms per plant as some others, because it can be benched closer it gives more blooms per foot than any other variety. White Perfection is second, by the same standard.

Florists are good public servants and Poehlmannville has many of its offices filled by them. August F. Poehlmann is president of the village. Adolph H. Poehlmann is justice of the peace and chairman of the school trustees. Dick Salm is a village trustee, and Louis Fickenger, outside foreman for Poehlmann Bros. Co., is a school trustee.

Various Notes.

John F. Kidwell is planning to retire from active participation in the retail flower business. July 1 the Wentworth avenue establishment of J. F. Kidwell & Bro. will be taken over by William Kidwell, who for a number of years has conducted the Forty-third street store run under that name. The senior brother will spend his time at the home and Wellworth Farm greenhouses at Downers Grove.

Only two of the Chicago retailers turned a hand to help boost the business for Mothers' day, and yet practically every retail florist in Chicago profited by the increased demand. It is true that stock cost more than it usually does in May, but nobody really was held back by a shortage of flowers. A. Lange and John Mangel devoted their Saturday morning ads to Mothers' day and thereby not only helped themselves but others.

Mothers' day was too strenuous for Ollie Zech, who had not been feeling well for some weeks. He was confined to his bed May 11.

At the store of the E. C. Amling Co. comment is made on the improved sale for snapdragon. Around Easter nobody wanted it, but now it is going well. The pink sells best.

Harry C. Rowe has removed from the corner of Wabash avenue and Washington street to room 205 in the Atlas block, 30 East Randolph street.

The replanting of roses has been completed at Peter Reinberg's, and all the carnation plants were in the field May 9, according to Felix Reichling, who goes out each Saturday afternoon with the payroll.

O. A. Tonner comments on the iris situation this year. Last season the stock sold splendidly at the opening of the season and poorly at its close. This year the conditions were reversed, there being a poor demand at the start and good business now that the season is closing.

At Winterson's Seed Store it is said that there is an excellent demand for small boxwood, but that bay trees are preferred to the larger sizes of box.

Remodeling is under way at the building occupied by A. L. Vaughan & Co. Many improvements are being made and, to conform to a city ordinance, which does not go into effect for some months, the entrance to the basement store has been moved so that the steps do not extend outside the building line, leaving a clear sidewalk. In the course of time it is expected that a similar change will be required in the premises of several other wholesalers, including Kennicott Bros. Co., Winterson's Seed Store, J. B. Deamud Co., and Weiland & Risch.

Miss McNulty, who has charge of Peter Reinberg's office, says that May 9 120 telegrams were sent out stating that carnations could not be supplied at any price. These orders all were from transient buyers, many of them wholesalers in other cities.

That an unusually large quantity of peonies will be sold for Memorial day this year is the belief of Kyle & Foerster.

At the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, May 7, R. E. Moore, coal salesman, was elected to membership.

Mothers' day sales with Kennicott Bros. Co., according to E. E. Pieser, increased over 125 per cent.

done so well in the moving picture business as a side issue that they are thinking of devoting their entire attention to amusement enterprises.

The purchase of a touring car was the principal object of A. L. Glaser's trip from Dubuque May 9.

According to George Wienhoeber, Mothers' day is no good to the Fleischman Floral Co. He says the extra business for the day comes from those who are not regular flower buyers and whose purchases are too small to be profitable—but he admits that his view does not apply to many stores, and that for the average florist Mothers' day has turned out a great help.

A different plan is being followed in planting the J. A. Budlong range this season. The stock is being planted in blocks, all of each variety together, instead of in scattered houses.

Michael Fink, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, met with a fall downstairs at his home May 10. Except for a few bruises and a shaking up, he escaped without injury.

Miss O'Neil, cashier at George Reinberg's, has been confined to her home by illness.

Having found the horse and wagon antiquated, Anton Then has placed an order for a motor truck like the one Sam Pearce has used so satisfactorily. It is the Nelson-Le Moon.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. last week had an exceptional wedding decoration, an account of which will be found on another page.

Peonies frequently have been cut at Batavia in time for Memorial day, but O. Johnson sees little prospect of it for this season.

The North Clark street store of the George Wittbold Co. met the Mothers' day demand for white carnations with original ideas in baskets and bouquets and scored a sale in almost every instance. Victor Young, the manager, followed the tip in The Review and pushed other flowers. He believes that another year will find the white carnation less in demand.

The Market.

Business has been more than brisk for the last week. There has been an unusual amount of funeral work, calling for immense quantities of stock. The supply has been about normal and quality of stock good. Good Beauties are available at modest prices. Other roses are in good supply and the prices right. Carnations are of fine quality, and the supply good. Snapdragons, lupines, valley, iris, forget-me-nots, sweet peas, etc., are all in fairly good supply and move readily.

Mothers' Day.

Mothers' day taxed the local flower market to the limit last Saturday. The demand for cut flowers and plants at modest prices far exceeded the supply, and Sunday morning many people who had delayed ordering had to go home disappointed, after making the rounds of the downtown retail stores. The middle of the morning the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange received another large shipment of stock, and this was quickly disposed of. The call was for everything in the line of flowers except, perhaps, Beauties; these were just a little too high-priced to meet with popular favor. While many white carnations were disposed of at prices ranging from $1.25 to $1.50, carnations and other blooms in colors sold just as well. In fact, the demand seemed to run more to colored flowers. The supply of moderate-priced plants being limited, not many were sold, but if another year we have a better supply of such plants, the sale will be heavy. All told, the few dollars spent in booming this day have been well repaid, and this is but the beginning. In a few years, if prices are kept within reason, Mothers' day will be one of the big flower days of the year.

Jacob C. Bauder reports plenty of orders for funeral work. His houses of carnations are in excellent condition and a heavy cut will be had for Memorial day.

Steckler Bros. are working overtime filling orders for spring planting. This firm enjoys a large cemetery trade, being opposite the Charles Evans cemetery.

Heck Bros., the Wyomissing florists, are busily engaged in their outdoor planting on large private estates. Business has been excellent. Their Spencer peas have been fine.

Lee Arnold, another Wyomissing florist, also finds business good. His bedding stock is in fine condition. Mr. Arnold says he has the "honk, honk fever," and the trade is wondering what the make will be.

Frank Shearer, one of Wyomissing's progressive florists, says the vegetable section of his range is bringing good results. His Enchantress carnations are of the best.

Frederick Frank, the Brookside florist, reports his wholesale business in good shape, with a shortage of cut flowers, although his several houses of carnations are producing heavy crops. His sweet peas, occupying several large houses, are the best to be seen in this section.

Wm. Kern, of Hyde Park, reports a heavy demand for spring plants, his bedding stock being in good shape.

Paul Blachman, Jr., the Ninth street florist, finds business to his liking. Funeral work has been a strong feature here.

H. J. Huesman & Son have kept their working force busy with many large plant orders, bedding plants being their specialty. Several houses of geraniums are in full bloom. H. C. H.

ASHTABULA, O.

A hail storm May 4 inflicted some damage on practically every greenhouse in the city. The total loss is difficult to estimate, but it is put at approximately $1,000. The heavy rain which accompanied the hail was responsible for part of the damage, as it seeped in through cracks in the glass and overflowed the gutters so that it gutted the benches.

Mention The Review when you write.

The downpour was so heavy during the short time it lasted that streets looked like rivers and outside stock was all badly damaged.

More than 100 panes of glass were broken at the Woodman avenue range of Roger W. Griswold and considerable damage was done in the exposed section, where the hailstones filled the gutters and drenched a section of cucumbers.

Nearly 3,000 violet plants, which were outside at Tong & Weeks' when the storm began, were stripped of their foliage before they could be put under cover. About seventy-five panes of glass were broken here.

F. C. Bait reported about 600 tomato plants partly killed by the water. The hailstones were of larger size in this section than in other parts of the city.

Dunbar & Hopkins got off the easiest of all, having less than a dozen panes broken.

Charles H. Gallup's loss also was light.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Eastern Market.

Mothers' day was the feature of the week and white carnations were the feature of Mothers' day. White roses felt the demand slightly. The eastern seaboard within shipping distance of this city contributed white carnations without the number being sufficient to meet the demand, at from $4 to $10 per hundred, the bulk of the choice stock bringing $8 per hundred. Left-overs, splits and undeveloped blooms were all used. Many of the street men went over to New York to find what they could in white carnations. The wholesalers are divided on an important point in this week's report. Most of them assert that other flowers were not wanted for Mothers' day, while one prominent house asserts with equal positiveness that its advertising and pushing other flowers had a marked effect on the sales and that the general demand for all kinds of flowers was far ahead of previous years.

Despite the continued heavy receipts of flowers, the market is in fair shape, although prices are low and irregular. Peonies are coming in more freely, baby gladiolus has arrived and fine double wallflower has been added to the list. Larkspur has been quite a factor. Good yellow daisies sell, but nobody wants white daisies. Lilies left over from Easter are gradually disappearing, either out of the front door or the back, thus relieving the market, but callas continue a burden. Beauties are in lighter supply. Other roses continue plentiful. Colored carnations advanced only slightly in sympathy with white. Sweet peas have been a bit affected by the hot weather, particularly those that are getting shaky; the newer crops are all right. The enormous crop of outdoor lilac is passing over.

timent of the day. The reply of the wholesalers is that the price is fixed by the law of supply and demand. There were nowhere near enough white carnations to fill the orders at the advanced price, even after every avenue of supply had been drawn upon. The wholesalers further say that most young men would not consider 15 cents or even 20 cents an exorbitant price to pay for a fresh white carnation on Mothers' day, nor would a girl feel that it was excessive. Both young girls and young men often spend more for things of much less account, without regret. The wholesalers think that the solution of the problem lies in pushing other flowers and that the retailers can solve this problem to the satisfaction of all concerned if they wish to do so.

The Opening of the Season.

It is a joke in trolley circles that a line leading from noplace to nowhere is one of the best paying lines operated by the P. R. T. This is the Midvale and Frankford. People get on and off everywhere and disappear into the village or country. By getting off at Second street pike and trotting a few blocks south you come to the Aschmann place. The place carries out, in some respects, H. H. Battles' idea of a mart. The front entrance is entirely blocked by an assortment of spring bedding plants selected for the buyers who are clustered about them, so it is necessary to go in the back way. A stroll through the greenhouses shows two things: First, that the entire Easter stock has been replaced by as pretty a lot of spring plants as one could wish to see, and, secondly, that the buyers have not yet succeeded in making inroads to any appreciable extent on these well filled houses of bedding stock.

From Father to Sons.

J. William Colflesh's Sons are justly proud of their father's honored name in floriculture. "Established forty-two years" is the way they express it. They have kept up the place in fine shape. A new King house, two Lord & Burnham houses, a fine lot of hydrangeas in bud, a general collection of spring plants and a wonderful lot of English ivies attest this. Those ivies are great; in 3-inch pots by the thousand, in 4-inch and 5-inch by the hundred. Then there are the trellises, the umbrellas and the standards in ivies just as in roses. There were a lot of other interesting things. One was a house of a fern for cutting, Polystichum Capense, highly prized down the street.

was a blaze of color until the end of the first week in May. The entire garden was planted in tulips, each bed a variety by itself, the festoons in yellow and white hanging from globes of pink, a glorious sight. The east end rejoices in pansies and daisies planted with marvelous good taste. For example, what could be richer than a great circle of purple and lavender pansies, surrounded by a broad band of Bellis perennis?

Various Notes.

Joseph G. Neidinger and Mrs. Neidinger sail on the steamer George Washington, May 16, for an extended trip to Europe. This is Mrs. Neidinger's first trip, her husband's third, taken in the interest of his business.

The necessity of flowers is shown in recent notable events. Handsome floral pieces were sent by J. J. Habermehl's Sons to the funeral of a great railroad magnate. His successor's desk was covered with flowers in honor of his election to fill the vacancy.

Edward Neville spoke before the Germantown Horticultural Society, May 11, on "The Flowers of Lebanon." This was the first meeting held in the lecture room of the free library, Vernon park.

Letters received from H. Bayersdorfer announced his arrivel in Europe early this month.

Fred Cowperthwaite will speak, May 19, before the Collingwood, N. J., Civic Improvement Association on "Beautifying the Home."

The Johnson Seed Co. reports a lively demand for cauliflower, cabbage and spring plants.

William J. Baker has made the Baker firm as well known in the west as in the east.

A fair for the sale of plants, flowers and garden implements will be held in Rittenhouse Square May 20. The proceeds are for charity.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., is enjoying what probably will prove to be the most tremendous business in the history of the spring rushes.

A fair will be held May 22 at Wyck, in Germantown, for the sale of plants and flowers. The proceeds are for the woman's horticultural college at Ambler, Pa.

Berger Bros. had exceptionally fine white carnations for Mothers' day.

Richard P. Humphried, Jr., has arrived at the Rosedale Flower Shop.

Letters received from B. Eschner from Europe state that he has secured some splendid novelties for the fall line of the M. Rice Co. Phil.

Hebron, Neb.—Mothers' day this year was equal to the best Memorial day on record. Mrs. Mary F. Lindsey says the public is beginning to understand the "bright flowers for mothers still in the home" and that the call is much better distributed.

The Market.

The last week was an up-and-down affair—the first of it full of sunshine and good cheer, the middle gloomy and depressed, with the accompaniment of rain, and the end, thanks to Mothers' day and the delightful spring weather, a fairly encouraging termination. However, it was not the complete clean-up anticipated, and there was an abundance of everything left over for Sunday and to start the present week.

White carnations were the banner card on Friday and Saturday, and large quantities were shipped out of town, in addition to an enormous local trade. Prices for these in some cases touched $6 per hundred for small qnantities, but $5 per hundred may fairly be announced as the top quotation, and stock had to be select and extra fine to hold this valuation. Some of the white carnations sold as low as $3 per hundred Saturday afternoon. The outlook for Mothers' day at that time did not indicate any special demand for other varieties of carnations.

Roses of all varieties held at about the quotations of a week ago. American Beauties, when perfect, sold at $20 to $25 per hundred. Much of the stock was low-grade. The quality of all other varieties of roses was satisfactory; shipments are heavy and the tendency of prices is downward. The same may be said of orchids; for most of them $35 per hundred is the top figure, except for the select gigas. There seems to be no limit to the supply. Valley has advanced to $3 per hundred and lilies are also improving slowly. Callas do not advance, however, nor does bulbous stock of any kind. There is no end, apparently, to the daffodils and tulips, and an almost summer profusion of

Club Meeting.

Because of rain the attendance at the monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club, May 11, was something less than 100. The exhibits included a fine display of W. A. Manda's new Calceolaria Stuartii, a seedling of rugosa and hybrida, its color golden yellow, flowering from early spring until October. The award was a certificate of merit. For a vase of seedling geraniums Mr. Manda received a vote of thanks. R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., exhibited several pots of the new geranium, Maryland, for which a certificate of merit was given.

F. H. Traendly, for the flower show committee; J. B. Nugent, for the dinner committee, and C. W. Marshall, for the outing committee, made reports. The club's picnic is to take place, July 1, at Glen Island. F. R. Pierson, for the flower show committee, reported renewal of this year's contract with the Grand Central Palace for a show from March 17 to 23, 1915. Messrs. Traendly, Manda, Totty, Schultheis and Koehne were designated as a transportation committee for the S. A. F. convention. A boat trip is in prospect.

The following were elected to membership: C. N. Durrie, Elizabeth, N. J.; Wm. Entenmann, Jersey City; Alfred H. Fisher, Winfield, L. I.; Wm. H. Mallon and S. G. Milosy, Brooklyn; Edw. C. Vick, Newark, N. J.; Herman Mamitsch, Englewood, N. J.; L. Bonnet, J. B. Deamud, Richard Holloman, P. G. Josephson and Harry Ramm, New York city. Of these, P. G. Josephson was present and spoke briefly. Louis Gleitsman was proposed for membership.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, and his son, R. A. Vincent, were present and the latter delivered an excellent stereopticon lecture on the geranium. Many new and all the widely known varieties were shown by means of colored slides and the pictures, representing a cost of over $300, added much to the interest of the talk. The Vincent firm this year has an output of over 2,000,000 geranium plants. After the son had received a vote of thanks, R. Vincent, Jr., made an eloquent address on affiliation with the S. A. F.

The next meeting of the club will be held June 9.

Various Notes.

Hitchings & Co. are building four new greenhouses for L. B. Coddington, of Murray Hill, N. J. The houses are about 38x136; one of them is 21x122, the size conforming to the space in connection with the old range. These are all iron-frame houses, with a departure in construction; the rafters are twelve feet six inches apart instead of eight feet four inches, and the glass 20-inch instead of 16-inch. All are equipped with ventilating apparatus, and a device registering the exact space the sash is open. Mr. Coddington's immense output is handled by H. E. Froment.

Lord & Burnham Co. has lately acquired a 17-acre plot at St. Catharines, Ontario, next to the big plant of Yale & Town, the hardware house of Yale lock fame, and has already broken ground for the erection of the Canadian factory. Mr. Morgan, of the New York office, is temporarily associated with the firm's office in Boston.

Mrs. John Gunther celebrated Mothers' day in a unique manner, inviting ten of her old school chums, who have

A visit to the nursery of Bobbink & Atkins at this time is a revelation. The shipping is at its height and is enormous, far in advance of any season in the firm's history. A dozen immense trucks are busy constantly carting boxes to the trains. The force of workers has been doubled and night and day work has become a necessity. It will be a month before the spring shipments are completed. J. Austin Shaw.

BALTIMORE, MD.

The Market.

Business during the early part of last week was decidedly poor, but toward the end it increased, bringing the entire week up to the average for this time of the year. Beauties were in good crop and sold well at fair prices. Roses in general are not so plentiful as they have been, although enough for the demand, fair prices being realized for good stock. Lilies and callas still remain plentiful, with little demand. Peas are moving slowly and are deteriorating, owing to the warm weather; short stems are in evidence in the majority of shipments.

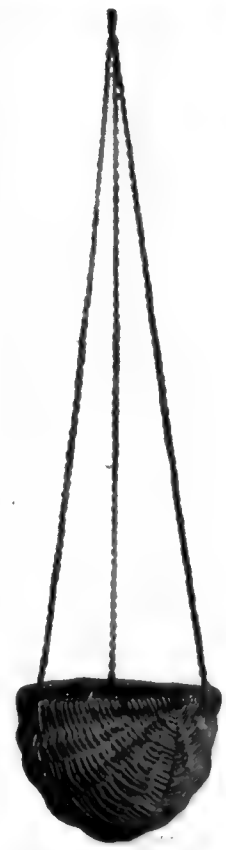
Carnations are still holding up well in quality, but have only a fair demand. White was in good demand for Mothers' day and, of course, the supply, while large, was inadequate for the demand. No special demand was experienced in any other flowers other than the usual Saturday one. This means the general public did not observe this day to any marked extent. Many of the retail stores expected record-breaking sales for this day, but while business was good, nothing extremely unusual was noted. Greens still remain scarce, with no prospect of improvement.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held May 11. There was a fair attendance. The committee appointed to arrange for the trip to Boston in August reported progress. Prof. T. B. Symons, of the Maryland Agricultural College, extended an invitation to visit the college May 30 in connection with the summer meeting of the Maryland Horticultural Society. Prof. Symons also gave an interesting talk on aphis and other insects and remedies for them.

Some of the retailers reported having been approached by the authorities in regard to having traders licensed to do business. After a general discussion the matter was laid over until the next meeting. The question box brought up the matter of wholesalers selling plants at retail at wholesale prices. It seemed that some of the firms doing business in and around the city have been doing this, to the detriment of retail business.

Various Notes.



Forty florists of the city coöperated in a quarter-page Mothers' day advertisement in the Baltimore News, Friday evening, May 8, using as a basis the ideas published in The Review for April 30. These represented about one-third of the florists here; the others preferred to advertise separately. The publication of the advertisement was preceded by articles in regard to this day, got up jointly by the florists and the paper.

The wholesale houses are receiving some fine frame-grown valley from a well known local grower.

G. A. Lotze, of Glenburnie, recently purchased a Ford automobile for pleasure trips. As he is an ardent disciple of Izaak Walton, the car will serve him well on his numerous fishing expeditions about the country.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, and Richard A. Vincent were visitors at the New York Florists' Club Monday, May 11, where the latter delivered an illustrated lecture.

GLADIOLI ON THE FARM.

purple; in fact the beginner should avoid these colors in the early stages of his industry.

"Good pink sorts of commercial value are: Pink Beauty, because it flowers weeks before America; Pink Augusta, if grown late for September and October blooming; Hollandia, because all flowers are open at one time on the stem; and the gem of all, Mrs. Francis King, the greatest money maker in producing either flowers or bulbs. Good commercial white varieties are scarce, and though some are on the market they are so costly as to make them unavailable for commercial growing. The most popular so-called white sort now sold is Augusta. Its main feature is that all the flowers on the stem open at one time. Invariably it produces more than one flower stem from a single bulb, and this is another reason why the growers like it. Next in popularity is a variety called May, which, in my opinion, should be pensioned and forgotten. The pink flakes on white ground produce anything but a beautiful color.

"Fully seventy-five per cent of the commercial growers confine their efforts to some or all of the sorts mentioned above. It is my opinion that the man who shows enterprise and invests in some of the finer newer sorts, which, when available in quantities, will supplant all the present sorts, will be the man who is going to reap the greatest reward in gladiolus growing in the future.

"Panama, a new pink sort, probably will supplant America in a few years. Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Jr., is another winner in pink that will surely be a rival of Panama in the future. About fifty thousand bulbs of this sort were available last fall on the wholesale market. By February 1 not a bulb could be bought wholesale. Rochester White is the coming white sort, as pure as driven snow. Niagara is going to be the leading yellow sort in the future."

COMPOST FOR CUCUMBERS.

Is it a benefit to a compost heap to put in lime, hard-wood ashes and bone meal the first time the pile is turned? Please state the right proportion of each for compost to grow cucumbers.
J. J. S.

No, it is not a benefit to add lime, wood ashes and bone to cucumber soil when first turned, or, for that matter, to soil for any other plants. Lime is useful in correcting acidity, but it releases too much nitrogen if manure has been added to the soil. While fine bone may be added to the last mixing, I have always found that well-rotted cow or horse manure gives far better returns. Cucumbers do better in a light soil than in a heavy one, if the light soil is well enriched. C. W.

STARTING A MUSHROOM BED.

I should like to inquire how to start a bed of mushrooms. Please state when to start them and give full particulars about their culture. A. I. G.

The growing of mushrooms is something of a lottery unless you have just the right place for them. They are hard to grow in the hot months unless a cold cellar or underground dug-out of some kind can be had; insect attacks ruin many of the mushrooms in hot weather. Your difficulties will be greatly lessened, therefore, if you do not begin operations until late summer or early fall. If you start a bed so that you can spawn late in September, it should give you mushrooms early in November.

If you have a cellar which can be darkened and where an average winter temperature of 55 to 60 degrees can be kept up, you can grow good mushrooms. They can also be grown under greenhouse benches if protected from drip and if light and air are excluded as much as possible. Hot water or steam pipes, which cause a drying heat, are bad for mushrooms.

Start by saving fresh horse manure daily. If you do not keep horses, probably you can obtain the manure from some livery stable every other day. Throw it up in a heap outside, discarding the rougher pieces of straw. Turn the heap daily to prevent burning. Add to it one-third as much screened pasture loam as you have manure; this tempers the heat and prevents burning.

When the rank heat has subsided, make your beds. Spread out a layer of fermenting material and pound or tramp it hard. Then add more, pounding again, and so on until the material is nine to ten inches thick. When the heat of the bed has subsided to 85 or 90 degrees, put in the spawn, either Pure Culture or English Milltrack; the former starts earlier, but I like the mushrooms of the latter better. Chop in pieces the size of a walnut, make holes twelve inches apart each way and put in one of the pieces of spawn. Cover lightly with manure, but do not fill in and pound until eight or ten days later, when the mycelium will be running. Cover the bed ten to fourteen days after spawning with two inches of loam; I like that from an old pasture, passed through a ¾-inch screen, best. Pound this firmly, then cover the bed or bench with hay, straw or excelsior and leave this covering on until mushrooms appear, which is sometimes as early as three weeks and at other times as long as three months. If at any time the beds appear very dry on the surface, water at a temperature of 100 degrees can be applied. Watering can only be looked upon, however, as a necessary evil.

The manure used in making up mushroom beds must be moist without being mushy. If dry and burnt it is worthless for mushroom production. While it is being prepared, moisten any dry portions each day when turning. When apparently exhausted, mushroom beds are often renewed if water is given at a temperature of 120 degrees after a top-dressing of fresh loam has been applied, covering the bed with hay in order to warm it up as much as possible. Rounded beds give a greater spawning surface than level ones.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1913, to December 31, 1913, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 20%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders	$566.00
Less 20% allowed senders.. .. .	113.20
Net value of orders..... .:.	452.80

Here is an addition of $452.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

Yours respectfully,
J J Beneke

The Market.

The weather has been fair the last few days and much more spring-like after the cold snap of last week. Flowers of all kinds are over-abundant. Especially so are roses, which are sold for a song. Since the warmer weather has set in, roses do not hold up so well, but are wide open in a few hours and lose their beauty. Mrs. Aaron Ward and Mrs. Russell are about the best keepers. Mrs. Taft is rather weak and pale in color. Melody and Hillingdon are small and almost useless. Bon Silenes are in excellent condition. Killarneys are good, the white far surpassing the pink variety. Richmond is fair and Milady good, although the supply of both is somewhat meager. Beauties are still first-class. The prices on these have dropped, and they are now much more reasonable than they were a short time ago. Lilac and flowering dogwood sprays have come from the south to add variety to the list of spring flowers. Blushing Bride gladiolus has made its appearance and is dainty in combination with other flowers. Violets are getting poor since the coming of warmer weather and will soon be at an end. Sweet peas are plentiful and, with valley and roses, are largely used for corsage work. Gardenias and orchids are fine and sell well.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club was held May 5, at Kasting's hall. There was a poor attendance on account of the inclement weather. Joseph Streit reported that, since the bowling season had closed, the committee had no report to make. There was no definite date set to accept the invitation of the King Construction Co. to visit the plant at Tonawanda. The club left the matter in the hands of President Wallace Eiss, and he is to set the date and make all the arrangements. It probably will be early in June, since a large number of local florists wish to see the lilac display at Highland park, Rochester.

The event of the evening was an illustrated talk on "Landscape Development," by George E. McClure, Jr., which was interesting and instructive. Mr. McClure showed the landscape development in cities, parks, private estates, home grounds and gardens. Special slides showed Italian and Japanese formal, sunken and aquatic gardens. The club is indebted to Otto Gillis for the use of the electric lantern which made the pictures possible, and to Mr. McClure for the unusually interesting talk. As usual, refreshments were served.

Various Notes.

F. J. Baum, of Kingsley street, is busy in his greenhouses. He is rushed with spring planting and outdoor work these days.

William F. Kasting was in Albany last week working for an appropriation of the state legislature for a range of glass at Cornell University for the study of floriculture.

ago. He was out for a few hours and returned with forty-five pounds of pike. His friends claim his story sounds somewhat fishy, but he swears he is telling the truth and can prove it.

Mrs. James Bates, of Akron, N. Y., was a visitor last week.

Charles E. Guenther is in Europe for the summer.

S. A. Anderson had an artistic wedding display window last week. The model bride with veil, etc., was the center of the picture. She carried a shower bouquet of valley and cattleyas and stood just in front of the prie-dieu, beside which rested two baskets of pink peas and valley, tied with pink ribbon, for the flower girls. On the left was a mantel decoration of pink snapdragons, Killarney roses and Farleyense ferns. A colonnade of white pillars surmounted with Easter lilies and white snapdragons gave the entire window a distinctly decorative aspect. A white wicker bell garnished with apple blossoms hung from the ceiling. Arm bunches for the bridesmaids, of pink roses, and a bunch for the matron of honor, of Ward roses and blue ribbon, added to the effect. The shepherd's crook was also displayed. The whole window had an air of elegance about it and attracted large crowds every day.

There was a big Mothers' day trade.

The Market.

The great glut that marked the local market the week previous was still with us in the early part of last week, when there was so much stock and so little doing that prices again stiffened in all grades. Commencing May 7, prices began to rise, as advance orders started to come for stock for Mothers' day. May 9 as high as $5 and $6 was asked for carnations in hundred lots. Sweet peas have shortened up somewhat; still there are more coming in than the trade can consume. Roses have been plentiful of late, including all grades of Beauties. The Killarneys and Richmond are leaders in this market, with the demand for the fancy grades good at any time. Easter lilies still are coming in large lots; so are callas, but slow sale was reported on the latter last week. Gladiolus spikes are coming in heavily and promise to crowd the market sooner than ever this season; the stock is all of good quality. Miniature gladioli are plentiful, with slow sales. Valley has sold well, owing to the large number of weddings last week. Most of the retailers are now kept busy with the plant trade, which they all report is heavy this season, as everybody is in a rush to have his planting done at once.

Various Notes.

The County Growers' Association held its regular monthly meeting May 5. The association is now a year old and the annual election of officers took place, resulting as follows: President, Frank Vennemann; vice-president, C. E. Cerny; secretary, Joseph Deutschmann; treasurer, W. J. Pilcher. The trustees elected were A. H. Ahner, Hugo Gross and F. W. Ude, Jr. The secretary's report showed the association had done good work for its members during the year and the treasurer also presented an encouraging report. The meeting was well attended and much important business was transacted.

Henry Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., was in the city May 9 with a big load of bedding plants. He is sending a nice lot of cut stock to this market.

W. S. Wells, who had charge of the nursery stock at Vandevoort's, has closed this department and is back at his retail store at Chouteau avenue and Sarah street.

Fred W. Bruenig had a bad accident last week. While cranking his automobile he broke his right arm; with the busy planting season at hand, he is in anything but a good humor.

Arrangements are almost completed for the Florists' Club's twenty-eighth anniversary banquet, which is to take place June 28. The trustees, who have charge of the affair, say that all final arrangements will be made this week at the club meeting. Hotel Jefferson has been selected for this event.

R. J. Windler, state vice-president of the S. A. F. for eastern Missouri, will have charge of the transportation and other arrangements for the trip to Boston to attend the convention. Mr. Windler has been hustling of late with duties pertaining to his office.

Hugo Schaff, who has charge of the planting for the board of education, has started with a force of men planting the flower beds at the different schools throughout the city. He says that to oversee about sixty places is no easy job.

Frank Weber, of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., says his firm has had a heavy business this year and the season is about over. He will try to have a good representation of nurserymen from here at next month's meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen, which will be held at Cleveland, O.

be held in July by the Florists' Club. Suggestions as to the place for holding this event are now in order. The trustees will make all arrangements.

Leschner Bros., of Webster Groves, who represent a number of Holland bulb growers, say they have had a good year's business.

Dave Geddis, of Vandevoort's, reports that he has the decorations for the Bates-Garneau wedding, the society event of the season. The church decorations will be an exact reproduction of the decoration by Carbone, of Boston, as shown in the illustration in The Review of April 30.

The big wind and hail storm May 5 caused considerable loss to the florists in the southern part of the city. Those who lost glass were: Wm. Schray & Sons, F. Fillmore, Meier Bros., Chas. Beyer and John Held. The last named suffered the most, losing about 300 lights of glass. Considerable damage was also done to trees in the parks.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, was in the city May 11, having been called for jury duty at East St. Louis, Ill. He reports that Mrs. Guy left for Cincinnati last week on receipt of a telegram that her father had been badly hurt by an automobile.

The regular monthly meeting of the Retail Florists' Association will take place May 18, at 8 o'clock. Important business will be transacted and members are requested to attend.

A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, spent a day here last week. He was on his way to Corsicana, Tex., his former home, for a few weeks' rest, and at the same time he will train his arm to pitch the S. A. F. ball team to victory against Boston next August.

Sam Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, spent a few days here last week. J. J. B.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The demands made by Mothers' day and the suffrage and anti-suffrage demonstrations served to clean up the market in fine shape last week. The former created a great shortage of white carnations. Fired by the eloquence of George H. Cooke, displayed at the May meeting of the Florists' Club, the price of these flowers was held down to a minimum. Gude Bros. Co. sold their entire production at $4 per hundred at wholesale, while their retail price was 10 cents each. In addition to this, upon hearing that permission had been granted the members of the police department to wear flowers, they sent, without charge, a supply of both white and colored carnations and when the supply of the latter was exhausted, gardenias were substituted. In order to fill all demands for white flowers, they sold to their regular customers gardenias at the same price they would otherwise have paid for carnations. Mr. Cooke sold all the carnations he could pick up at anywhere near a fair price at 25 cents per dozen at retail. When prices soared last year it was said that such action would quickly kill the whole proposition.

Club Meeting.

George H. Cooke, president of the Florists' Club, roundly scored those commission houses and growers who greatly increase the price of carnations for Mothers' day. At the regular monthly meeting of the club, held at 1214 F street, northwest, Mr. Cooke told the members that this day is one full of sentiment and should not be commercialized. Mr. Cooke failed to get much support, one of those present stating that he forgot sentiment when trying to make a living. However, it was urged that all members endeavor to induce the observers of Mothers' day to purchase other white flowers to wear in memory of departed mothers and colored Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., addressed the club on the coming convention to be held in Boston in August. In appreciation of the kindly interest which he has always taken in the local club, Mr. Vincent was unanimously elected an honorary member.

Plans were discussed for the holding of a flower show in this city in the early fall. A committee, of which Fred H. Kramer is chairman, and William H. Gude and R. L. Jenkins are members, was appointed to devise ways and means.

Various Notes.

John H. Small & Sons have offered as a prize in the athletic events to be held in connection with the annual shad bake of the Washington Board of Trade, a $5 palm, while Gude Bros. Co. and Fred H. Kramer have each offered like value in cut flowers. O. A. C. Oehmler will present a $3 box of flowers to some lucky winner.

Plans have been completed for the holding of the third annual rose show under the auspices of the Brookland Brotherhood and the Rhode Island Citizens' Association and others May 26 and 27. The judges selected are Dr. Walter Van Fleet, Department of Agriculture; George W. Hess, superintendent of the United States Botanic Gardens, and Mrs. Edwin F. Sweet.

More stock in these lines could easily have been used. The cut, owing to the exceedingly inclement weather of last week, was not up to expectations.

This week roses are in better supply and generally are of good quality. The same is true of American Beauties. The carnation supply still is short, owing to the fact that the blooms had been cut so closely for Mothers' day. As a result prices are practically as high as those of the end of last week. Lilies continue more or less of a glut, but the quantities are not nearly so large as they have been since Easter. Sweet pea receipts are more or less limited and generally are of a more or less indifferent quality. Valley and orchids are in good supply. Some fine Parrot tulips are to be had. Other offerings include miniature gladioli, antirrhinums and iris. Greens are in good supply and enjoy a fair call.

Various Notes.

Only a quorum was present at the last club meeting, so only routine business was transacted.

R. Witterstaetter was fortunate in having a good crop of white carnations, and of his new variety, Conundrum, for Mothers' day. He also disposed of many hydrangeas that day.

C. E. Critchell reports the first spring shipments of southern ferns and huckleberry.

C. J. Ohmer, at West Palm Beach, Fla., has planted and shaded another acre of plumosus, reports E. G. Gillett.

Miss Margaret Weiland, of Evanston, Ill., is visiting her sister, Mrs. P. J. Olinger.

Ed. Bossmeyer, of C. E. Critchell's, was on the sick list the early part of the week.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The market, Monday morning, May 11, was as clean as the proverbial hound's tooth. Wholesale houses experienced a Mothers' day cleaning such as they have not seen for months. Carnations led, roses, snapdragons, stocks and baby gladioli running close. There was no call for Easter lilies. Pot plants, such as azaleas, hydrangeas and spiræas, cleaned out early.

Various Notes.

At the May meeting of the Florists' Club it was decided to accept the committee report and move the quarters of the club to the new room at the Hollenden hotel. The June meeting will be held at the Hollenden. F. A. F.

In sending The Review our check we want to say that the advertisement is a humdinger for getting business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

We have disposed of nearly 100,000 carnation plants this spring. Please discontinue the ad in The Review. The plants were fine, but we think much of the success in moving so many of them was due to your valuable paper.—The Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-second annual convention, Washington, D. C., June 23 to 25, 1914.

EDWIN LONSDALE, of Lompoc, Cal., was a visitor at Salt Lake City, Utah, last week.

A NOTICE of the death of James Slimon, well known in the seed trade in New York city, appears in the obituary column of this issue.

IN the north shore wealthy suburban district above Chicago tulips made a good show in late April and early May. And, strange to relate, there seemed to be as many Keizerskroon as all other varieties put together.

THE greatest tulip exhibit ever possible anywhere outside Holland will be a part of the national exhibit of the Netherlands at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco in 1915. Two acres will be devoted to the tulip beds.

THE way the gladiolus bulbs are cleaning up is not only a pleasure but a surprise. The market was demoralized in January, but steadily has gained strength as the season has progressed and the appearance now is that there will be no surplus, not even of America.

THE Colorado Seed & Nursery Co., Denver, handles everything from seeds to bulbs, tree seeds and cut flowers. The corporation has $25,000 capital stock. C. R. Root is president and manager. The other officers are: Vice-president, W. F. Horlacher; secretary and treasurer, Lewis Malone.

THE price of French Romans appears to have settled at 110 francs for twelve to fifteen centimeter bulbs. This means a cost of $25.50 at New York, and about $26 at Chicago, from which it appears that a great deal of business has been booked at prices which will not meet the jobbers' overhead expenses.

ROBERT W. WARD, formerly with Currie Bros. Co., of Milwaukee, now is with the Page Seed Co., of Greene, N. Y., and making a business trip through the New England states. Mr. Ward was not only well known around Milwaukee in the seed trade, but came to the front in organizing the Milwaukee and District Soccer Football League.

SENATE KILLS FREE SEEDS.

In the Senate, May 9, the provision for the congressional free seed distribution of 1915 was stricken from the agricultural appropriation bill.

Following the recommendation of the secretary of agriculture, when the House committee on agriculture brought in the annual appropriation bill the congressional free seed distribution was eliminated, the appropriation being turned to other purposes better calculated to advance the agriculture of the LINE 'EM OUT!

To say lily bulbs to us is like telling Honus Wagner to "line 'em out" or Matty to "put it over"—they are leaders in their line, we in the lily bulb line. No matter how much the other fellow may argue against us, the florists admit that Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs are the best—you take no chance when you buy them—the quality is the best to be had, as all the largest growers now buy Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs. Send your orders in early, so we can make shipment from any of the following cities, from which we will make deliveries this fall:

NEW YORK	BOSTON
PITTSBURGH	PHILADELPHIA
NASHVILLE	GRAND RAPIDS
CHICAGO	CINCINNATI
OMAHA	MINNEAPOLIS
BUFFALO	TORONTO
PORTLAND	SAN FRANCISCO
VANCOUVER	DENVER
GALVESTON	ST. LOUIS

For Cold Storage purposes, can store in the above cities for delivery any time during 1915—a saving of freight, getting delivery from near you—but to obtain this convenience you should order early.

United States. On the floor of the House the appropriation was inserted by amendment to the bill. The bill as passed by the House and as it reached the Senate carried the usual appropriation for free seeds for congressmen for 1915. The Senate committee, to which the bill was referred, struck out the free seeds paragraph and reported the bill practically as it came up to the House. There was a vigorous debate when that section of the bill was under consideration in the Senate May 9, but when the issue came to a vote the action of the committee was sustained.

Within a few days the agricultural appropriation bill will have passed both branches of Congress, one branch having provided for the free seeds and the other having cut them out. The bill will then be up to the committee on conference. It is not yet quite time for seedsmen to sing the Hallelujah Chorus.

DELIVERY OF INFERIOR SEED.

Two Legal Remedies.

In general, two remedies are open to a buyer of seeds which prove to be of quality inferior to that contracted for; he is entitled to rescind his purchase after discovering the defective condition before sowing, or he may retain the seeds and claim the amount of damages resulting from the seller's breach. This rule has been applied by the Alabama Supreme Court to a purchase by a merchant of onion sets which proved to be in bad condition when delivered. (Firth vs. Hollan, 32 Southern Reporter 494.) The court said: "There is an implied warranty that the sets delivered shall not only answer the description, but that they shall be salable or merchantable. * * * The defendant, upon discovery of the condition of the sets, had the right to rescind the sale within a reasonable time and return; or retain them and avail himself of the damage he had suffered, either by bringing his cross-action for the breach of warranty, or by proving their real value and abating the recovery of the price pro tanto."

Must Prove Unfitness of Seed.

But under a contract to raise a seed crop from stock seed furnished by the purchaser, to be paid for at a fixed rate for every pound of "clean and satisfactory" seed, upon receipt thereof and ascertainment that it "is vital and fit for seed purposes," it was held by the Kansas Court of Appeals that the purchaser could not arbitrarily reject clean and vital seed, fit for seeding purposes, under a claim that the same was not satisfactory. (D. M. Ferry & Co. vs. Ballinger, 60 Pacific Reporter 824.)

The Seeds Did Not Grow.

Under the general principle of law that if an article proves to be worthless for the particular purpose for which it was ordered and intended by both buyer and seller, and to be totally useless for any other purpose, there can be no recovery of the price, it was held by the Kansas City Court of Appeals, in the case of Johnson vs. Sproull, 50 Missouri Court of Appeals Reports 121, that where flax seed was sold to be sowed with a view to raising a crop to be sold to the seller of the seed, and the seed did not grow, though treated with good husbandry, the whole consideration for the farmer's promise to pay failed, and no suit could be maintained on a note given by him for the amount of the purchase money. The court said: "There was on the part of plaintiff an implied warranty that the seeds were of a kind that would grow."

Justified in Rejecting Seed.

That a buyer of cotton seed for seeding purposes was entitled to refuse to receive seed not coming up to the quality contracted for was decided by the Mississippi Supreme Court in the case of Gloster Oil Works vs. Buckeye Cotton Oil Co., 40 Southern Reporter 225.

The principles announced in the cases reviewed above must, however, be applied subject to those other rules of law mentioned in previous articles of this series, relating to the buyer's duty to discover obvious defects when he has an opportunity for inspection before completing his purchase, and to the right of the parties to exempt the seller from liability by adopting a non-warranty clause in their agreement. PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Typical summer conditions prevail around the bay. It is somewhat early to see the profusion of roses and carnations. American Beauties are abundant and low in price. Excellent Bridesmaids are available, as are fine Aaron Wards and the best long-stemmed Prima Donna of the season. Outdoor-grown Ulrich Brunner is perhaps the most popular rose, because of its excellent quality. Cattleyas are much improved. A few early gigas are offered, but the best flowers are Mossiæ and a few light Trianæ. We had more peonies during the week than heretofore this season. They have fine, long stems and prove a good seller. Nearly every shop window has made the Spanish iris its chief decorative feature, the brilliant colors being always attractive. There is naturally a profusion of Cecile Brunner roses at this time. Sweet peas are wholesaling at lower prices and retailing likewise. They are 50 cents per dozen bunches on the market. The bunches are larger than heretofore. There is a great quantity of statice procurable and also quantities of all kinds of greens.

Particularly typical of the summer season is the liberality of the growers in making up their maidenhair bunches. They are larger than they have been for years. All this is a tribute to our excellent weather, even though the quantity of stock on the market is not always beneficial to the retailer.

Various Notes.

At the regular meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, May 2, at Saachem hall, Redmen's building, an interesting lecture was delivered by Prof. Gregg, of the University of California, on "Soils and Fertilizers." The idea of an educational number at each of the meetings has been a great factor in interesting members of the society. Exhibits were made by Richard Diener, of Mountain View. Mr. Diener has for many years specialized on carnations. His Seedling No. 25 is, he claims, the largest in the world. It certainly is a mammoth flower and has a stiff stem which, in growing, Mr. Diener says he does not support. Another exhibit of interest was a collection of outdoor roses by John Gill, of Berkeley. They were in the main varieties that are grown in the east under glass. This is another tribute to our wonderful California climate. Particularly meritorious was Mr. Gill's Irish Elegance. Prof. Stevens, of the University of California, exhibited a collection of unusual shrubs which he thought should be used more in landscaping about the bay. Mr. Schillig, one of the members of the society, also exhibited two fine vases of Frau Karl Druschki and Ulrich Brunner.

Another interesting day spent by the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was the occasion of a visit to the Charles C. Moore country place in Santa Cruz. The invitation was through the influence of Hiram Grimshaw, who for years has made the development of the estate a wonderful success. The ranch is situated in the foothills of the Santa Cruz mountains, overlooking the Pacific ocean. Over 150 members of the society left San Francisco at 8:10, May 3, on a special train, arriving at Santa Cruz at 12 o'clock. On their arrival they were met with vehicles to take them to the Moore retreat, where recreations were enjoyed throughout the day.

The Retail Florists' Association, which had its first meeting May 4 at the Native Sons hall, is preparing to systematize and regulate the conditions about San Francisco for the mutual benefit of the trade. Although the newly incorporated body has as yet made no definite plan of procedure, they will undoubtedly stick together and make their work one of general benefit to the trade. There is no reason why this should not be done, especially as all other lines of commercial trade are well organized and act in harmony.

F. H. Henry, of New York, is here on his way to Japan to negotiate several large deals which he has pending.

Podesta & Baldocchi recently showed an unusually attractive window of oriental poppies arranged in baskets. Mr. Podesta has just purchased a fine new Pierce-Arrow car, which is giving him no end of amusement, and which he used on his trip to the Moore estate.

Albert O. Stein is preparing a surprise in the way of a handsomely decorated table for fourteen guests, which he is reserving for the annual banquet at the Fairmont hotel.

Henry Maier, of the Hillsborough Nurseries, Burlingame, has been sending in some of the finest Boston ferns that have ever been produced on the Pacific coast. Mr. Maier's progress in the management of the affairs of the Hillsborough Nurseries has ranked him among the leading growers about the bay.

W. A. H.

Hogan, Kooyman & Co., of Oakland, have opened a cut flower, bulb and seed store in the California Flower Market building, where they will handle their wholesale business.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Trade is up and down, but mostly down just now. There is too much outdoor stock of a mixed character for good flowers to sell well and, while it helps the retailers to make a good display, there is not much money in it. There are some wedding decorations and the usual quantity of funeral work, but the transient business is dull and there is little going on in a social way. Hotels and rooming houses of the better class are practically empty of their best customers, the tourists, and this reflects upon the florists' and all other business. Everything in the way of flowers is plentiful and cheap and the demand for the best quality of stock is so poor that growers are disgusted with the prices obtained. June weddings may help some, but just at present it looks as though the season was going to end up a poor one.

Various Notes.

Edwin Lonsdale, the well known superintendent of the Burpee seed ranch at Lompoc, was a visitor this week, but had to leave again almost at once to visit a relative who was sick at Salt Lake City, Utah. Mr. Lonsdale says they have made good progress in roguing the sweet peas, but they are getting some trouble again this year with aphis. He has already used one ton of tobacco powder on the "varmints" this season and probably will use another.

At the Freeman-Lewis store the force has been kept busy with several good wedding orders. C. Lewis has taken a home at the Beach for the summer and will go to and fro daily.

Murata & Co. say that the out-of-town business is far better than local trade. Mr. Murata has purchased a 1914 Buick.

Henry Morton, son of Charles Morton, of the Los Angeles Flower Market, drove to San Diego last week in his father's Buick. Mr. Morton is still having considerable trouble with his throat and is taking the advice of a specialist along this line.

T. F. M. Williamson makes a fine show in his windows, his Gladiolus America being particularly good just now.

Mr. Burch, of the Harris Seed Co., San Diego, has been in town looking up stock.

There was rather a small attendance at the monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society May 5, but an interesting and enjoyable discussion took place as to the merits and demerits of the school system of instruction. W. W. Felgate, of Sierra Madre, is slated for a paper on soil management for the June meeting.

Miss Rohr is said to be thinking of giving up her store on Washington street on account of ill health.

Howard & Smith make an elegant showing all the time in their big store at Ninth and Olive streets, the fine flowers shipped in from the Montebello nurs-

The Market.

We are just betwixt and between seasons. Consequently, there is little doing. The cold weather which closely followed Easter has steadily prevailed, with only a few days' exception last week, when it warmed up almost to an uncomfortable degree. Florists are all looking forward to, and preparing for, a big rush during the last two weeks of May, which will be more strenuous than usual because of spring planting having been held up by the cold weather. What spring stock comes into the market is of good quality generally, and in the matter of quantity the growers seem to have the market correctly gauged. In cut flowers, roses, carnations, sweet peas, snapdragon, Spanish iris and mignonette are about the whole of the local supply. Bulbous stock is about through, although a few growers are still cutting some fine tulips. Von Sion and Golden Spur, which were a glut a week ago, are not now to be seen.

Various Notes.

Frank Koch has just about completed the planting of five houses of cucumbers for June marketing. The old gentleman, who is 70 years of age, lost his wife about three months ago and, it is understood, wishes to retire from active work.

Peters Bros. have a crop of fine cucumbers. They are planning the erec tion of several houses this summer.

Olsson & Benson, whose partnership operations began May 1, are sending in some of the finest pink snapdragon seen this season.

Mrs. L. E. Thornburgh, who for some time has conducted a store at Hillyard, a Spokane suburb, has opened a combined flower shop and confectionery on Post street. She has installed a new refrigerator, which is cooled by artificial means, a refrigerating plant in a grocery and meat market next door supplying her.

M. Lehman, formerly in the employ of the Brown Floral Co., Canton, O., is now with Hoyt Bros., on Post street.

Recent visitors were Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Van Doren, Post Falls, Idaho; Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Donart, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, and Geo. Schimmel, of the Knapp Co., Inc., New York. L. B. H.

The Market.

The weather is extremely mild, and business is in much the same condition. With a decrease in the number of social affairs, the demand for flowers has materially diminished, and aside from funerals and an occasional wedding, there is little demand. The market is overcrowded with flowers, especially roses; the warm days brought on the crop rapidly. There now is the largest cut of Beauties that has been seen for years, and they go mostly for window displays. Carnations, while not so plentiful, are hard to keep moving. Sweet peas show the effect of the heat, which necessitates a sharp cut in the prices. Orchids are in fine form, with a sluggish market. The shipping trade is gradually dropping away just at a time when we could serve best.

Various Notes.

H. Bornhoft, of Seattle, Wash., spent several days here last week renewing old acquaintances.

The regular meeting of the Sweet Pea Society was held at the Multnomah hotel, to conclude plans for the show to be held in July. The exhibits will be open for competition to amateurs and commercial growers alike. Captain George Pope is president of the society. The dates and locations will be announced later.

A. A. Graver, of Salem, Ore., called on the trade last week. He has a store in connection with other business. For the present he has about 4,000 feet of glass, but will add to this as the business justifies.

The Holden Floral Co., which recently leased the William Sibson place, has incorporated for $5,000. The company has about 40,000 feet of glass, and will grow carnations, roses, bedding plants and flowers for the wholesale trade. The incorporators are John Holden, Frank Chervenka and John Kollock.

S. Lubliner is now in his new location, in the Portland hotel. He has a good store, centrally located, with every facility for handling his increasing trade.

George Spencer spends his Sundays trolling for salmon. So far his luck has not been encouraging. E. R. C.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Business is showing a slight improvement over previous reports, and while not so busy as they would like to be, most of the florists are wearing a more cheerful look. Stock of a few varieties is scarce, but there are plenty of others to take their places. Carnations for Mothers' day were in strong demand, and the supply short. Roses are fairly plentiful and outside stock is now coming in, but the demand keeps good. Peonies are plentiful; the old red officinalis, as usual here, is about the best seller. Spanish iris is plentiful, as are Blushing Bride and Peach Blossom gladioli. Geraniums and other bedding stock are moving fast, and if prices are pretty low, there is compensation in the fact that there will be few left over.

Various Notes.

Miss Fowler, who wields the pen in the office of the H. B. Burdett Co., has aspirations in other walks of life, as may be seen by her success in winning the $25 first prize for a life story in the Sun last week. Out of 180 stories sent in, hers was judged to be the best.

C. Hoffmeister has been planting about a mile of window-boxes on the Bon Marche's premises, at Second and Pike streets, during the last week. The appearance lends an attractive air to the locality and the example is being followed by the Clemmer theater opposite, which has had rustic looking boxes put up and filled by the Woodlawn Flower Store.

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results. —Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

In the interests of the city beautiful, the J. W. Adams Co., of Springfield, Mass., is setting out young maples along several streets of that city, under the direction of Tree Warden George W. Hayden.

Two tracts of land, one north and the other south of Woodmont, Conn., have been acquired by the Elm City Nursery Co., of New Haven, Conn. Work will be started at once, so that the land may be ready for nursery purposes as soon as possible.

The joint exhibit of decorative plants, ornamental trees and shrubs staged by the American Nursery Co. and the Japanese-American Nursery Co., of Los Angeles, at the Pasadena show, drew more than ordinary attention by its effectiveness.

An addition of thirty acres of land is being made at the grounds of the Griffing Bros. Co., at Nona, Tex., where this concern already had forty-two acres of nursery stock. The company is setting out 200,000 trifoliata oranges brought from Florida.

The report of the Iowa Horticultural Society for the year 1913, including the transactions of the society's meeting last December and of the meetings of the auxiliary societies last year, has been prepared by the secretary, Wesley Greene, and is now being distributed.

The licensed nurseries of the state of Tennessee for 1914 are 352 in number, according to the annual report of the state entomologist and plant pathologist, G. M. Bentley, which has just come from the press. Twenty-five certificates were withheld, mainly on account of the presence of strawberry root-louse, and 108 nurserymen of the state will have no stock for sale this year because of the drought. The business of the Tennessee nurserymen last year aggregated $3,500,000, all but one-eighth of which was done outside the state.

An examination will be held May 25, by the U. S. Civil Service Commission, to secure eligibles for appointments as orchardists at $720 a year in the Bureau of Entomology of the Department of Agriculture, for service at Vienna, Va. The duties of the position will be general outdoor gardening and fruit growing and general greenhouse work. At least two years' experience in gardening, the use of coldframes and hotbeds, work in greenhouses, experience in growing deciduous fruit nursery stock and the care of orchards is requisite.

We have always found The Review a top notcher as to results received from wholesale advertising of nursery stock.—Atlantic Nursery Co., per D. W. Babcock, Mgr., Berlin, Md., January 16, 1914.

According to the records of the New York Central railroad, 880 carloads of nursery stock have been shipped from the nurseries at Rochester, N. Y., within the last six weeks. If the cars were in a single train, they would cover a stretch of track six miles long.

NURSERYMAN THE GOAT.

When State Boards Disagree.

The state inspection of nursery stock is at best a sorry affair, so far as the nurseryman is concerned, but when the inspectors of various states cannot agree among themselves as to whether or not stock is infested or diseased, the nurseryman is distinctly in a hole. In other words, he is the goat, and gets caught either going or coming. The injustice of the case is well illustrated by a recent disagreement of the Louisiana and California state boards.

Early in January the Neuchatel Nurseries, of Burlingame, Cal., purchased 100 gardenias from Fred Ziegeler, Jr., of New Orleans, La. The stock was inspected and passed by the boards of both Louisiana and California, and was received in first-class condition. In fact, the Neuchatel Nurseries were so well satisfied with the gardenias that an order and payment for twenty-five more of the same stock were sent January 29. This order was filled with stock similar to that sent in the first shipment; the Louisiana board had approved the stock and it was therefore dispatched to California by Wells Fargo & Co., which, following the invariable rule of express companies, saw to it that there was an inspection certificate attached before the consignment was accepted for transportation.

White Fly Comes Aboard?

Perhaps some white flies crawled into the box while it was in transit; then again perhaps they didn't! At any rate, the California inspection board found white fly on the gardenias on their arrival in that state. The shipment was therefore promptly confiscated and destroyed.

The fact that a previous shipment of the same stock had been inspected and passed by the same officials a short time before was a matter of no consequence to the state board of California, no matter how the case looked to the nurseryman. The plants were infested with white fly, said the inspectors, after they had examined them carefully; therefore the shipment was doomed to the flames.

Who Pays?

The Neuchatel Nurseries, evidently misunderstanding the limited functions of inspection boards, wrote to ask who was to stand the damages in such a case and how redress was to be obtained. The California board, which, it is quite plain, knows its duty and does it like a man, but unfortunately knows nothing more, replied that it had only enforced the law in this case, in which there was no option, and beyond that could give no further information.

The Neuchatel Nurseries was in a quandary—and so are we! According to the California state board, Mr. Ziegeler had shipped infested stock. The Neuchatel Nurseries certainly could not be expected to pay for infested stock—to make firewood for California officials. But, according to the state board of Louisiana, Fred Ziegeler, Jr., had consigned good stock, free from pests, and for that stock he was entitled to payment. This is a free country, by all means, and all men are entitled to their own opinion, of course; even though they happen to be on the inspection boards of different states. And while these others are exercising their freedom of opinion with sublime disregard of the question, the nurseryman is free to ask, "Who pays?" The answer, however, is not free; it is not, at present, forthcoming at all.

This is only one of many similar cases that have been reported in the last few months.

KANSAS APPLE SEEDLINGS.

The growing of apple seedlings in the valley of the Kaw, or Kansas, river is the subject of an excellent article in the May 2 issue of the Country Gentleman, and the writer, H. W. Doyle, gives a clear and fairly full account of "Where Apple Trees Come From," occasionally quoting F. W. Watson, the nurseryman of Topeka, Kan., on various points. The process is described from the purchase of seeds in France to the sale of seedlings to American nurserymen. In connection with this last step, the sale of apple seedlings, the writer says:

"The market is exceedingly unstable and the prices vary greatly with the yield, grades and the demand—from $1 to $10 per thousand, from $3.50 to $5 being a fair average. A net profit of $75 an acre is considered a quite good return, and the average acre production is from 100,000 to 150,000 seedlings. The estimated cost of growing an acre of seedlings is $100. Foremen are paid $100 per month, pullers $2 per day, graders, packers, wheel hoers and cultivators $1.75 per day, and weeders from 75 cents to $1 per day. The seed costs, on the average, about $14 or $16 per bushel. Then there are the expenses of cellars, houses, tools, horses

The Market.

With thousands of carnations sold on Mothers' day, the local florists are preparing for Memorial day. Conditions point to the fact that cut flowers will not be used in such large quantities as in previous years, as the customary bouquet will be replaced by the galax wreath, with one side carrying a cluster of wax flowers.

Numerous teams laden with potted plants have made their appearance on the streets and the owners report an excellent business.

Various Notes.

The S. S. Kresge Co. is doing excellent business on a large stock of pansies in baskets and is booking orders for Memorial day wreaths.

Mineral Spring Greenhouses report everything in good condition for Memorial day. T. F. B.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Mothers' day brought an abnormal demand for white flowers, particularly carnations, causing a slight stiffening in price. For the first time the day was generally observed, owing largely to the advertising done by a number of the local florists. Business for the week was good, the warm spring weather accelerating the call for cut flowers.

Various Notes.

Small Easter lily plants with one, two and three buds and blooms offered by Macnair for Mothers' day found ready sale. More than 3,000 were handled.

Joseph Koppelman has purchased the greenhouses of Mrs. Hannah Olsen in East Providence, known as the Brookside Greenhouses, and will take possession June 1. They will be in charge of Con Sullivan, for many years grower with Timothy O'Connor.

John A. Macrae has just registered a ten horse-power Cadillac motor truck.

Edward M. Pope has filed a statement with the city clerk that he is owner of the Providence Horticultural Co., 265 Broad street.

T. J. Johnston & Co. have purchased a new twenty-two horse-power Ford truck.

John Foster has removed from 16 Fenner street to 462 Westminster street.

Max Viller, formerly with Johnston Bros., now is with Galvin in Boston.

W. H. Lowe has started in the florists' business at Edgewood.

Maurice Torgen, formerly with Joseph Koppelman, now is with Johnston Bros.

Mr. Lamont, formerly with the J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., at Auburn, now is conducting his own greenhouses on Public street, Providence.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business held up well last week. The demand May 8 and 9 was good; not so good as some of the growers expected, but better than a year ago. The great trouble was that growers held back on cut flowers and threw too many on the market May 9. They evidently imagined the demand would be equal to that of Easter or Christmas and forgot that this is a comparatively new flower day, which must be gradually built up, not through any injudicious bolstering of prices, but by using every legitimate effort to popularize the buying of flowers on this occasion.

Carnations sold well. Fancies made $6, whites going the best, though colored ones were worth nearly as much. Large numbers were sold at $4 and $5, but prices tumbled toward night. Roses sold well at from $2 to $6 per hundred, only a few fancies making $6. Special Beauties made $15 to $20 per hundred, but could scarcely be classed as Mothers' day flowers. The main demand was for small lots of carnations or roses, or small baskets, few large orders being given.

Since Mothers' day business has been fairly good. Carnations have taken a considerable tumble and roses are lower. The snapdragon surplus still is heavy. Good sweet peas, valley, bachelor's buttons and yellow marguerites are in demand. Lilies are of slow sale. Callas are nearly over. Spanish iris is getting druggy. A considerable quantity of Gladiolus Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride is coming in; also smaller lots of America, Mrs. F. King and other large sorts. Some double violets still arrive, and Dutch bulbous flowers, thanks to the cool spring, are lasting wonderfully and selling well. Some of the growers expect to have tulips and narcissi from inside until Memorial day. Hardy ferns continue scarce. Adiantum and asparagus trade is dull. Bedding plant business is starting up.

Various Notes.

F. W. Holbrow, of Dorchester, was the first to bring Gladiolus America to the local market. Of this he has some grand spikes. He is just finishing his Emperor and Victoria narcissi, but has a fine field of yellow marguerites and sweet peas.

P. J. Donahue, of the Boston Rose Co., has taken the agency for the American Beauty roses of Paul M. Pierson, Scarboro, N. Y. He is receiving splendid lots of Hadley, Killarney, White Killarney and Hillingdon roses from the Montgomery Co., Hadley, Mass.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report largely increased sales for Mothers' day, the whole force working until 10:30 p. m., May 8, to get out orders. Memorial day goods are now moving rapidly.

Owing to the tearing down of the building on Somerset street, where he was located, Duncan Robertson now makes his headquarters at the Boston Coöperative Market. He is handling fine snapdragons and yellow marguerites from Elijah Cartwright, of Wellesley.

William Hannan & Sons, of Dorchester, have splendid lots of Gladstone and Queen Alexandra spiræas for Memorial day; they also expect to cut 2,000 bunches of candytuft.

William R. Morris will plant another house of Richmond roses next year; he will also add Killarney Brilliant to his list. He is getting Hillingdon, Richmond, Killarney and White Killarney of fine quality.

In addition to Nelrose snapdragons, F. W. Fletcher now has a fine lot of yellow marguerites. He reports heavy sales of Nelrose.

P. L. Carbone has taken the Eagleston shop, at Hyannis, Mass., formerly occupied by Eagleston Bros., and will carry there a full line of his new importations of fountains, sundials, bird baths, basket flower bowls, alabaster ware, glass ware, etc. Among his latest arrivals is a superb lot of alabaster ware.

S. J. Goddard started planting out his carnations May 7 and W. R. Nicholson May 10. Most of the growers are busy at the same work this week, the weather at last appearing to be more settled.

Penn did a splendid Mothers' day business. Baskets of roses were made a feature. Roses and carnations were the best selling flowers.

The Boston Retail Florists' Club had a meeting and dinner at the Bellevue hotel, May 5, and elected twenty-five new members and the following board of officers: President, T. F. Galvin; vice-president, H. R. Comley; secretary, Benjamin Green; treasurer, Julius Zinn. The club used prominent advertisements on front pages of seven leading Boston daily papers, calling attention to Mothers' day.

Harry Quint used an electric sign in the center of his large show window for a week before Mothers' day, which read, "Wear flowers Mothers' day, Sunday, May 10." He sold 5,000 carnations, in addition to other flowers.

Joseph Cavanaugh, one of the best known street venders of Boston, well known for twenty years to the trade, died May 8 at the City hospital, Boston, after ten days' sickness from pneumonia. Interment was at his old home in Brunswick, Me. His friends in the trade sent several fine floral souvenirs.

Thomas A. Cox, of Dorchester, is able to be around again after ten days' sickness brought on by a severe cold.

Carl Everburg, of Woburn, has acquired the store of the Worcester Conservatories, Worcester, Mass. His son and daughter will manage it.

Galvin reports an increased business for Mothers' day, with the orders mostly of small size. His funeral business has been excellent. I noted a superb pall cover of double violets for the funeral of Mrs. Fairbanks, of Clinton, May 9.

McAlpine & McDonald report a first-class call for flowers for Mothers' day. Their business grows finely and obliges them to work late each evening.

Edward MacMulkin, in addition to store trade, is now busy on landscape orders; he makes a specialty of the latter work.

ITS OWN SALESMAN

Greenwich, Conn., April 30, 1914.

Mr. G. S. Ramsburg,

Dear Sir: Will you please send me three packets of seed of your Silver Pink Snapdragon, for which money order is inclosed. I wish to state that I bought my seed from you last year, and it certainly turned out splendid. I planted two large benches and have been cutting since Xmas, and they now are a perfect mass of bloom. Several of my gardener friends have admired the beds and they intend sending their orders to you this season.

Yours faithfully, BENJAMIN DISLEY,
Supt. to J. H. Flagley, Esq.

The above is another boost for the one great money-making snapdragon. There are others, and some good ones, but RAMSBURG'S SEEDLING SILVER PINK has the field for productiveness—two blossoms to one of any variety in existence. Its color is soft and delicate—that silvery sea shell pink that sells first wherever a snapdragon is wanted. It is the abiding shade of pink, not an apology for the color.

Plants at $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1,000. Seed $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. All orders cash or C. O. D.

Beauty, Chrysolora, Proserpine, White Pottebakker, Joost van Vondel, Couleur Cardinal, White Joost van Vondel, Flamingo, White Swan and Prince of Austria. It is a pity that the Darwin and cottage tulips are not used here.

W. A. Riggs, of Auburndale, has just finished his Dutch bulbs for the season. He has a grand lot of ten weeks' stocks for Memorial day and is now busy with geraniums and other bedding plants.

Do not forget the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club May 19, with the lecture by Prof. F. W. Rane, on "Forestry in Massachusetts and Abroad," illustrated with stereopticon views. S. A. F. and other important matters will come up for discussion, and a large attendance is hoped for.

C. L. Pierce, of Holbrook, is sending in a nice lot of large-flowered gladioli to Lester H. Mann.

Peach Blossom gladioli and Nigella Miss Jekyll are being handled by W. H. Carr from the Fruit Hill Greenhouses, Providence, R. I.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. reports an excellent Mothers' day business. Carnations were the best sellers, but roses were a close second.

Welch Bros. Co. noted a considerable increase in sales due to Mothers' day. They are now busy on Memorial day supplies. A recent importation of bay trees contains some excellent specimens both of pyramids and standards.

Large gladioli and Spanish iris from Herman Waldecker are at present noteworthy.

Fred L. Sly, of South Stoughton, and H. F. Calder, of Norwood, still are sending in fine double violets.

A number of collections have been planted in the convention garden and more are being received daily. All who have trees, shrubs or perennials for this garden should send them along at once. No bedding plants should come until after May 20. W. N. C.

GREENWICH, CONN.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society held in Doran's hall May 10. Five new members were elected and one application for membership was received. A letter was read, from the secretary of the National Association of Gardeners, regarding the coöperation of the local societies with the national body. The matter will be taken up in detail at the next meeting.

New Rose, Killarney Brilliant

THE MOST VALUABLE ROSE INTRODUCED IN MANY YEARS.

We consider this new rose—a sport from the original pink Killarney—the most valuable rose that has been introduced in many years. It is well named Killarney Brilliant, on account of its brilliant color.

It is a great improvement on the original pink Killarney; first, because of its much more brilliant color, it being almost crimson in bright weather, while in midwinter—in dull, cloudy and foggy weather,—when the original pink Killarney loses its brilliancy and becomes badly faded, Killarney Brilliant is as bright and deep a pink as the original variety at its best. In addition to its great superiority in color, the flower is almost twice as large, having from twenty-five to forty full-sized petals.

It has the same desirable color that Killarney Queen possesses, but has double the number of petals, making it a very double and a fuller flower; and it is also very much more productive, having the same habit of growth and the same freedom of bloom as its parent.

We have watched Killarney Brilliant growing during the past winter, planted in the same house with the original and the double pink Killarney, and when those varieties faded so as to be almost unmarketable, Killarney Brilliant was superb. We are thoroughly convinced that it will immediately supplant the original Killarney as the standard market variety, and that every up-to-date grower will be compelled to plant it, on account of its great superiority. A prominent rose grower, who has seen it growing, says it is the only rose he has ever seen that needs no advertising; it sells itself.

BEGONIAS

We desire to call the attention of prospective buyers of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and Begonia Lonsdale. Begonias have been one of our specialties for years. This year we are growing more Begonias than ever before, being the largest Begonia growers in the world of the above varieties. This branch of our business has been built up on the quality of the goods we have delivered to our customers. We desire that each and every Begonia grower send us his order, or at least a share of it, for comparison sake. Don't delay. Orders booked now will be delivered in June. All plants to be twice shifted and shipped from 2½-inch pots. All of the very highest quality.

BEGONIA LONSDALE

We have a large stock of this light sport at the same prices as quoted for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. This variety is considered far superior to the original type, making a finer shaped plant and holding the flowers much better. A Greatly Improved Begonia Cincinnati

The above variety is a German introduction, and we have tried it for three years. The feature of the evening was an illustrated lecture on "Gardens," by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston.

Features on the exhibition table were the magnificent Spencer sweet peas exhibited by Thomas Ryan and Adam Patterson. The judges made the following awards:

Collection of tulips from A. Whitelaw, vote of thanks; Cattleya Schroederæ from A. Kirkpatrick, highly commended; calceolarias and gloxinias from Jas. Linane, vote of thanks; Carnation Brooklyn from W. H. Watermoulki, vote of thanks; Lælia purpurata from P. W. Popp, vote of thanks; antirrhinums from Wm. Graham, highly commended; gladiolus from Thos. Ryan, vote of thanks; antirrhinums from John Conroy, highly commended; night blooming cereus from Paul Dwenger, vote of thanks; sweet peas from Adam Patterson, cultural certificate; sweet peas from Thos. Ryan, cultural certificate; calceolaria plants from Jas. Stuart, cultural certificate; Mrs. Russell roses from Wm. Graham, cultural certificate.

At the next meeting, to be held June 12, there will be a competition among assistant gardeners at arranging table centerpieces composed of outdoor flowers and foliage. The Michell silver and bronze medals will be awarded to the winners.

The summer show takes place at Portchester June 19 and 20. P. W. P.

Middletown, Pa.—E. W. Creep has worked up a private strain of pansy that he considers exceptionally fine.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Pittsburgh continues to have more rain than is wanted just now, as it interferes with the growers getting their carnations out. They are really a month later than usual and many of them have not their stock out yet.

The flower market is filled with stock of all kinds. Lilac is fine and plentiful, but a drug on the market. The wholesalers were stocked up until the latter part of the week, when Mothers' day helped to clean up. There were not enough carnations for Mothers' day, but the wholesalers divided their stock among their customers and everyone fared fairly well. Prices were not so high as in previous years. Most of the retailers made a great effort to get their customers to use other flowers and succeeded well. Another year there will be less trouble, it is believed.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams made up small baskets of mixed flowers and advertised them for Mothers' day. It proved profitable and her customers were well satisfied.

Cards appeared in many windows advertising Mothers' day. Some read:

Wear a flower Mothers' day;
A bright flower for a living Mother;
A white flower for a remembrance;
Any kind of a flower is appropriate.

The A. W. Smith Co. says these special days are getting better each year. This year Mothers' day was much better than in previous years. This company specialized in dollar boxes of flowers and had an enormous run on them.

The trouble over the shortage of carnations comes mostly from the small shops and dealers who make little effort to sell their customers the things they can give them their money's worth of. Many of the special day buyers only know carnations, and most of them go away because they have to pay three times the regular price for what they want.

The Botanical Society visited Neil McCallum's place at the West End park May 5. The members were introduced to the immense display of hardy and wild flowers collected here and found Mr. McCallum a great host, with a wonderful fund of knowledge and stories about his friends the plants, botanically, mythologically, medicinally and otherwise, all of which proved entertaining and instructive.

P. S. Randolph & Sons must have found the plant business up to their expectations, as they are considering increasing the size of their range.

The J. S. Crall Co., of Monongahela, reports that the sale of bedding plants is on and indications are for a big clearance.

The E. C. Ludwig Floral Co. built a large house last year and is considering adding to it. That building bug is dangerous if it ever bites you; it has kept many a man with his nose to the grindstone.

Wm. Turner, of Wilkinsburg, says his last advertisement in The Review brought wonderful returns. He not only sold all his stock, but is still receiving orders that he cannot fill.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is running strong on Cattleya Mossiæ and yellow daisies, which are the finest seen in the city.

The Ludwig Floral Co. has added a seed department. Julius is in his glory—he is the man who can tell people what to plant.

The city authorities are after the street venders and have almost put them out of business.

Friday, May 8, a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Murray McGrew.

Walter A. Faulk has sent out notices to the trade announcing that he has purchased his brother's interest in the firm of Faulk Bros., at 37, 148, 149 and 150 Allegheny Market, and will continue the business under his name.

GREAT FALLS, MONT.

That Mothers' day, as The Review has pointed out, is what the florists make it was demonstrated here this year. The Electric City Conservatory extensively advertised the day and tremendous sales were the result. Carnations sold out Saturday noon and, although the supply was large, an equal quantity more could have been disposed of. Roses and other flowers also sold better than last year and baskets and plants showed the possibilities of the day. As last year, the demand was heavy on white, although not so strong as on former occasions. Sunday brought a heavy rain all day, which checked a tremendous lot of transient trade and saved many disappointments, which would have come from a scarcity of stock.

Chas. A. Burrell.

La Fayette, Ind.—Prof. H. B. Dorner brought his class in floral decoration from Champaign May 9 for a two days' inspection trip, which included the Dorner store and the greenhouses of F. Dorner & Sons Co., also Purdue university and other local points of interest.

SEATTLE NOTES.

Pacific Northwest Rose Society's first show has been issued. The show is to be held June 13 and 14, in tents on the lawn adjoining the Henry building, on Fourth avenue. There is but one class open to florists, but it is hoped all the florists will assist in making this first show a successful one, as it always means increased business for someone in the trade.

Morris Kennedy, who assists Ralph Richardson, at Brighton, has had a severe attack of tonsillitis. I am glad to report that he has almost recovered.

Miss Schnapp, at the Paris Florists', was superintending E. Matria in the construction of a casket cover of roses and carnations when I called.

The cucumber market is none too good, and prices compare most unfavorably with last year's. T. W.

WHAT TEXAS PAYS.

tions had sufficient funds to keep them in a business-like way they would be glad to conduct experiments that would enable the florists of this state to acquire a knowledge of how to produce those plants that they now ship into this state by the thousands and for which we pay out an enormous sum.

The taxable value of the nurseries and greenhouses of this state, according to the valuation given in the assessments, is $1,752,520. That is the valuation placed by the owners of the property. If the real value could be ascertained it would amount to something like $5,000,000 invested in horticulture in this state. That industry, then, is certainly worthy of the assistance of our legislature; it is worthy of the attention of the master minds of the department of agriculture and the Agriculture and Mechanics College of our state.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Geo. A. Relyea has sold his business here. He has at present no definite plans for the future.

Chetek, Wis.—Mrs. C. M. Andrus is building a greenhouse and will enter the greenhouse business, growing flowers and vegetables for the local market.

New Castle, Ind.—Myer Heller, president of the South Park Floral Co., sails May 16, from New York, on the Imperator, to spend a fortnight or more among the rose raisers of France, Germany, England and Ireland.

Mansfield, O.—L. E. Berno, manager of the Berno Flower Shop, says Mothers' day was beyond all expectations and will eventually be another Easter. At this store they could not meet the demand, and all colors of flowers sold well.

Ashtabula, O.—The partnership of Dunbar & Hopkins, after an existence of twenty-one years, was dissolved May 1, and its property and obligations taken over by the Dunbar-Hopkins Co. The business will be continued under the same management, and the stock is held by members of the two families. The officers are: President, C. W. Hopkins; vice-president, Alden W. Hopkins; secretary, E. A. Dunbar, and treasurer, Robert A. Dunbar. The company has contracted for the erection this summer of a range at Woodman avenue and the Pennsylvania railroad tracks.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Everyone in Minneapolis had all the business that was wanted for Mothers' day. The cold and cloudy weather created a shortage of roses and carnations, the supply of white carnations being exhausted early May 9, with none to be had at any price. Business in general is good, the only complaint being as to the supply of salable stock.

Club Meeting.

At the monthly meeting of the Florists' Club May 5, the convention association, which handled the local details for the 1913 meeting of the S. A. F., presented its final report and was dissolved. After all obligations had been met the association turned back to the club a surplus, with the recommendation that a part go into the treasury of the club and that the balance be set aside as a reserve fund to be employed from time to time to meet the initial expenses of flower shows or similar educational undertakings. The club accepted the report and created a board of trustees for the reserve, consisting of C. F. Rice, C. N. Ruedlinger, Hugh Will, W. D. Desmond and Theodore Wirth, their terms to expire one each year in the order named.

In winding up the affairs of the convention association, Chairman Wirth was given a vote of thanks and John S. Mitchell was elected an honorary member of the Florists' Club in recognition of the thorough manner in which he handled the finances of the association.

J. G. T.

UTICA, N. Y.

Mothers' day here was a great success. Although the newspapers suggested a white carnation as the emblem for Mothers' day, every color was sold out before Sunday noon. Not even a single bloom could be found in any store after noon. The rush started Saturday afternoon and continued until late in the night. Sunday every florist was busy as a bee, which caused C. Brown, proprietor of the Utica Floral Co., to remark "there won't be a stem left," and that proved true. Following the advice of The Review the Utica Floral Co. had a large sign in the window reading:

MOTHERS' DAY
Wear flowers for her sake.
Any kind is appropriate,
But wear the kind Mother likes best.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

'Trade for Mothers' day was the best ever, from all reports. Everything in the way of a flower sold at a good price. White carnations were, of course, in greatest demand, but it was only a matter of a few hours before they were cleaned out and then the people began to buy all other flowers. Carnations were cleaned up early in all colors, with roses a close second. There was a good supply of roses, but not nearly enough to fill the wants. Sweet peas also were cleaned up early. Valley was in good supply, from outdoors, and proved a fine seller. Even cut geranium blooms and snapdragons off potted plants were sold when the flowers were gone.

Potted plants sold well and quite a number of geraniums were moved, also some good hydrangeas and potted roses. The call for bedding plants is increasing and it looks as if there might be a heavy business in the next few weeks. Geraniums are abundant and, as usual, the demand is heaviest for them.

Various Notes.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is coming along nicely with its new rose house, 37x400. J. M.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

Mothers' Day.

Acting on the suggestion contained in an April issue of The Review, the local florists combined in advertising Mothers' day and thereby were able to use much larger space. The advertisements contained no names. This way of advertising seems to be extremely effective, for it takes away the appearance of commercializing the day. Not only was the idea taken from the article in The Review, but even the copy for the advertisement was obtained there, being a reprint of the text of a mailing card that was commended by The Review as so worded as to distribute the call to all lines of cut flowers and plants. Judging from the number of boxes of cut flowers, and the number of plants, sold for this occasion, the advertising campaign certainly proved a great success, and with little expense to the individual florist.

Outdoor work is behind, weather conditions not being favorable. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful and business on the whole is excellent.

DIRT BANDS—Experience in Using Them

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver ordered 5000 Dirt Bands in December, 40,000 in January, and 20,000 in March.

Samples, postage paid. Prompt shipment.

CYCLAMEN.

200,000 GIANT FLOWERING CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS AND BLOOMING PLANTS.

For the last 16 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed-bearing cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers that don't have to be petted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five-petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize winner. Received first prize at the Cleveland show and first and second at Toledo, early November, when blooming cyclamen were scarce.

STRONG AUGUST SOWN SEEDLINGS, once transplanted, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Cash with order. Cultural directions with all orders.

C. Winterich, Cyclamen Specialist, Defiance, O.

PEONIES.

PEONIES FOR PLEASURE.

The little brochure "Peonies for Pleasure" gives full information of the history of the peony, the only plant that has a registered list of named varieties for over 1400 years.

"Peonies for Pleasure" tell how and when to plant, the soil and plants to use, fertilizers and how to apply. It names the early, medium and late varieties for long succession of bloom. It describes the old and new, the aristocrat and the plebeian of the peony family.

The early red, white and pink peonies of our grandmothers' gardens are almost the only ones generally known. Dear patrons, these are the plebeians of the family; if you wish to know the aristocrats, send for this little treatise.

To all interested in the peony a copy will be mailed on application.

Now is the time to order peonies for fall delivery. Our price list for fall 1914 now ready, also our catalogue of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

SALVIAS.

SALVIA BONFIRE.

10,000 Salvia Bonfire from selected seed. We grow all our salvias from seed, not cuttings, thereby avoiding a hard, woody plant that blooms early but stands still balance of season. These salvias were all shifted from 2-in. to 3-in. last week of April, are now making a nice growth and, while they will not bloom as quickly as plants from cuttings, when they do come you have something that satisfies your customers, and that is what you want. Price, $3.00 per 100 whether you take 100 or 1000. Cash with order.
F. E. Cremer, Florist, Hanover, Pa.

Salvia splendens, transplanted, 60c per 100; $5.00 1000 while they last. These are not a spindly seedling or a rooted cutting forced "to death," but a well grown plant with a strong and healthy root system, with plenty of soil adhered to it so it will stand shipping. See my vegetable plant ad.
H. J. Potomkin, R. 3, Muncie, Ind.

Genuine white salvia, same type as Bedman or Bonfire, but pure white. These are extra fine, ready for shift at once, many of them will produce a cutting at once. Try them! We guarantee these to come white, as we have grown them three seasons, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000. 500 at 1000 rate. Cash or c. o. d., please.

Zanesville, O.—C. L. Humphrey describes Mothers' day business as "great." Of course, all the carnations were sold, but a great many sales were made of potted giganteums and hydrangeas, both Otaksa and the new French varieties. Geraniums in 5-inch pots sold easily. It was much easier this year to sell other colors than white than it has been before.

Brunswick, Ga.—After thirty days without rain and midday temperature as high as 88 degrees, a heavy hail storm, accompanied by a strong wind and driving rain, visited this place May 7, doing considerable damage to outdoor stock, such as dahlias, gladioli, etc. C. Birmingham, Ala.—At the last meeting of the Birmingham Horticultural Society, April 28, Hugh Seales, A. J. Koenig, G. E. Luffman and W. H. Kessler spoke on the proper plants to be started in gardens and window boxes at this time of year, and Secretary D. P. Durban prepared lists for distribution. A large number of women were present, whom the florists hope to get interested in a "city beautiful" movement.

First volume just off the press. Remaining volumes will be issued as soon as possible. The following are a few of the features to be found in this new work:

KEY TO IDENTIFICATION OF PLANTS.

This is a device to enable one to find the name of a plant. The name thus found is quickly referred to under its alphabetical location, where full information will be found in regard to it.

SYNOPSIS OF PLANT KINGDOM.

This is one of the most important features of the new edition. It constitutes a general running account of the classes, orders and groups of plants, with a brief sketch or characterization of 215 of the leading families comprising those that yield practically all the cultivated plants. These family descriptions give the botanical characters and the number of genera and species and the ranges.

THE GLOSSARY.

This is an analysis of all technical terms that are used in the work and in similar works.

TRANSLATION AND PRONUNCIATION OF LATIN NAMES.

In Volume I is inserted a list of between 2,000 and 3,000 Latin words used as species—names of plants, giving the English equivalent or translation and the pronunciation.

CLASS ARTICLES.

Special effort has been made to secure the best cultural advices for the plants requiring peculiar or particular handling.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

There are 24 colored plates, 96 full-page sepia halftones, and more than 4,000 engravings which serve as guides in the text.

GENERAL INDEX.

The final volume will contain a complete index to the entire work, enabling the reader to locate volume and page of any subject he has in mind. With the Index, Key, Synopsis and alphabetical arrangement of the Cyclopedia, any reasonable question asked by the consultant will receive a ready answer.

This work consists of six large quarto volumes, more than 3,600 pages, 500 collaborators, approximately 4,000 genera, 15,000 species and 40,000 plant names. Price, $6.00 per volume; $36.00 per set. Can be paid for one volume at a time.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

CHEAP GAS FROM WATER.

Can We Get It at 2 Cents per M?

A recent issue of a Kansas newspaper, the Topeka Capital, contained the startling announcement that Fred Gowen, a florist of Marion, Kan., had discovered a new and simple process for decomposing water, thus producing hydrogen, the purest of fuels, and that the gas, when thus "manufactured" from water by the apparatus which Mr. Gowen had invented, would cost less than 2 cents per thousand cubic feet! The newspaper article gives the announcement to the world in the most commonplace, matter-of-fact way, as if the writer were not aware that the new process, if really carried into effect as described, would apparently solve the fuel problem for all time and revolutionize many forms of industry. The article reads as follows:

"Fred Gowen, a Marion young man, has just announced the invention of a process for the fuel problem. By means of a special motor and generator, Mr. Gowen is able to produce pure hydrogen gas from a decomposition of water at the extremely low cost of 2 cents per thousand cubic feet. The use of this discovery will be restricted to the special motor, owing to the fact that the present type of motor is unsuited for burning pure hydrogen gas. The generator can be readily attached to an engine, furnace or lighting system.

"It is understood that Mr. Gowen has disposed of his invention and all the apparatus necessary for the production of the gas to an eastern manufacturer for a cash consideration of $125,000 and a yearly royalty of something like $25,000. The Gowen line of generators and motors will be placed on the market within a short time and will be available for use on automobiles, launches, stationary and marine engines and heating and lighting plants.

"Mr. Gowen is a Marion county product. He was born at Peabody and until last August was engaged in the florists' business at that place. He has conducted a similar business here since that time."

As the Inventor Tells It.

When questioned as to the accuracy of the foregoing article, Mr. Gowen replied that it was substantially correct, with the exception of the statement that his invention had been sold. "The process has not been sold," he said; "neither have the rights in any of the apparatus. Several offers to purchase have been made, but so far no deal has been consummated, though it is likely that one of the offers will be accepted soon.

"The possibility of decomposing water," he continued, "and thus obtaining the two gases, hydrogen and oxygen, has been known to scientists for many years, but the processes formerly used for producing these gases were extremely expensive and could only be carried on by one well versed in physics. I have been conducting my researches and experiments for about twelve years and have succeeded in formulating a process which solves the great problem in a way that leaves little to be desired, and makes the production of these gases from the decomposition of water a commercial possibility.

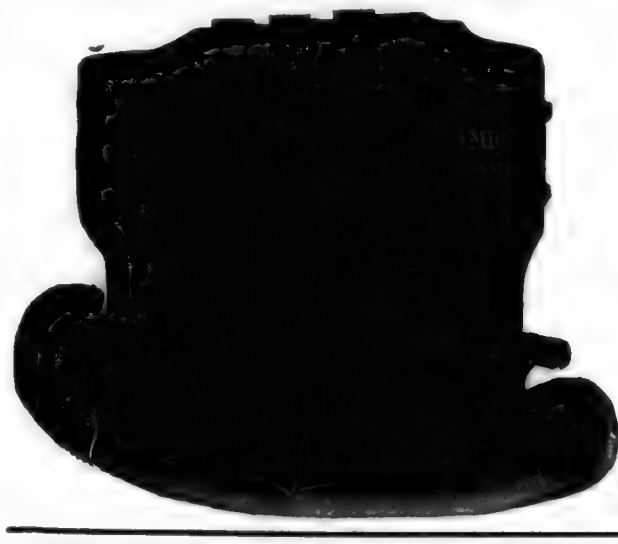
"The only gas of real fuel value is hydrogen. Coal gas, natural or manufactured, wood, oil and alcohol are all fuels because of the hydrogen gas they contain. Hydrogen gas, then, must be considered the prime factor of fuel value and its production as being of greatest importance from an economical point of view.

"The decomposition of water for the purpose of producing hydrogen gas, by my process, is extremely simple, perfectly reliable, and economical to the utmost degree, costing less than 2 cents per thousand cubic feet of hydrogen gas released. The generator which is used for this process is applicable to every purpose in which a fuel is required, and can easily be used for the heating of boilers and furnaces, for the operation of engines and for illumination. The hydrogen is generated only as required, thus insuring perfect safety from fire or explosions at all times, and any mishap to the motor or whatever is using the fuel, or to the generator, would simply result in a failure of the generator to decompose the water.

"In regard to the heating of greenhouses, which is the vital problem with florists, I will say that this process is readily adaptable to all such requirements; but I am working on a system which will eliminate the use of boilers or furnaces and which will utilize every heat unit in the hydrogen gas for heating purposes.



"Water decomposed by this process yields H_2O_1, and when this is fed to the combustion chamber of a boiler or heating apparatus of any kind, or to a motor, chemical combination takes place and on combustion results in water vapor, which, when condensed, yields water. Thus the water may be used repeatedly, the generator decomposing and the water forming again as combustion takes place. This process is similar to the action of steam heating systems, where the steam, after leaving the boiler, is condensed in the heating coils and returns to the boiler in the form of water.

"It is the carbon, sulphur and other elements contained in the various fuels that make a chimney necessary to carry off the by-products which cause so much loss in heat units. Hence the use of pure hydrogen gas as a fuel, and of pure oxygen gas as a supporter of combustion, makes the use of a chimney superfluous, as there are no by-products of combustion."

THE SITUATION IN COAL.

In the reports of the condition of the coal trade the salient points are about the same as they have been for some weeks. On the one hand is the dullness of the coal market, because of the general depression in business and the large quantities of coal still remaining in storage. On the other hand is the restriction of the output at the mines, due partly to the feebleness of the demand and partly to the continued trouble between the miners and the mine owners. The following summary of the situation is quoted from the Black Diamond:

"Railroads and other steam users having limited consumption of coal are finding that their storage piles will run

GREENHOUSE HEATING

Here are two actual cases: One range of 15,000 sq. ft. of glass, steam system, uses 80 tons of coal per season—efficiency good. Another of 31,000 sq. ft. of glass, hot water, uses 250 tons—efficiency very low. In both cases boilers fair. Good installation and management in one case; in the other, management has no chance, the plant being just "thrown together." We can put economy and efficiency into your heating system. Heating booklet free.

longer than they had anticipated. They are still relying upon these storage piles in the main, the need for additional coal being easily taken care of by current production in the few mines that are running on short time. The current use of domestic coal is light, because the weather is warm. The retail dealers are short of money and are not buying coal for storage purposes.

"The anthracite situation has been extremely dull, but this week brought an improvement in the east, where buying increased a little, but is still below normal. Trade is lighter now than it has been since discount prices were established in 1903.

"Only West Virginia is shipping to the lakes. Even the small amount of coal now being forwarded is congesting the lower lake ports, first because boats have no downbound cargoes and are not running, and second, because if boats were available storage capacity is congested in the upper lakes regions.

"The river trade is extremely dull, first, because there is small demand in that direction, and second, because the spring rainfalls have been so light that the boating stage on the river is of shorter duration than at any time in years. This gives no outlet for the coal production of western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

"Generally the contracting for coal is delayed because labor troubles have cleared in no important point. Indiana is and Illinois will shortly be out of the woods. It is expected Pennsylvania's delay will not be long. Ohio will be shut down for a good while, because there is no agreed basis for a cost of production, there can be no selling price and therefore there can be no contract. Meanwhile steam users everywhere are supplied with coal from their storage piles and are not buying in the open market."

Dubuque, Ia.—The departure of Lent was the signal for the reawakening of business, according to A. L. Glaser, who reports Mothers' day as big, with the prospect for a record-breaking Memorial day and a good June. Bedding work is sure to be heavy this year. Mr. Glaser, who has used motor delivery for some time, has purchased a touring car, intending to drive it himself.

WHEN YOU BUY—GET A KROESCHELL
THE BOILER OF GENUINE EFFICIENCY

Get the Kroeschell First

Several years ago Mr. Ponting corresponded with us in regard to the Kroeschell Hot Water Boiler, but was persuaded to install two sectional cast iron boilers which were claimed to be superior to the Kroeschell.

In the meantime we placed a number of Kroeschell Boilers in the immediate vicinity of Mr. Ponting, and he could not help but notice their great efficiency, and last year, while at the convention, he placed his order for his first Kroeschell. The following letter speaks for itself:

"We like the Kroeschell Boiler very much. It gives entire satisfaction, and it is so easy to fire. I will trade you the two cast iron sectional boilers for another like the Kroeschell I have."

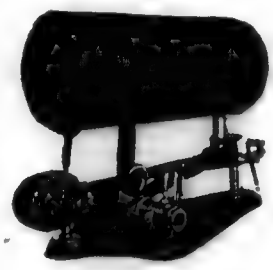
(Signed) FRED PONTING.
July 16, 1913, Cleveland, O.

Every Boiler of the Highest Standard

MATERIAL—Governed by Kroeschell specifications—the best that money and brains can produce. WORKMANSHIP—the kind that is an inspiration to all boiler makers. BOILER EFFICIENCY—determined by actual tests under working conditions. BOILER RATINGS—honest and true blue—guaranteed actual working capacities.

Get the Kroeschell First

In 1911 I purchased a No. 1 Kroeschell boiler to heat our uptown plant and can truthfully say that this boiler has given entire satisfaction, as it does the work so easily.



At our other place we had a large cast iron sectional boiler; two years ago we cracked two (2) sections and but for the mild weather would have lost everything before we could make repairs. That experience was enough for me to show me that the cast iron boiler man has the best of it when I went to him for new sections, as they could only be gotten from him, and he made the price to suit himself. So this year (1913) I thought I would take no more chances, so we just installed a No. 5 Kroeschell. I can get better results with the Kroeschell than with any other boiler I have ever fired. I believe if the Kroeschell were better known amongst the growers generally they would use no other.

"RICHARDSON" GREENHOUSE BOILERS

Were first put on the market many years ago. They were quickly recognized as possessing special adaptability to greenhouse requirements and have been sold to florists in steadily increasing numbers as the greenhouse industry has expanded.

A boiler must be a good boiler—and made by a strong, dependable manufacturer—to have withstood the stress of competition for so many years.

The "Richardson" line has developed with the needs of the trade. The "Richardson" now is made in sixty sizes, round, end feed, side feed—all sectional—for hot water and steam. They are low priced, but, better yet, they are fuel savers.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

The cut flower trade since Easter had been rather dull, but Mothers' day worked wonders. Each year this day is being more fully observed by the public, with a demand so great that it cleans up everything in the cut flower department and has even started in on pot plants, such as ferns, blooming plants and even plants for Mother's flower bed. A certain number of people still have the idea that nothing but white carnations is appropriate for this occasion and they can't be told anything different; consequently, the white carnation supply is soon exhausted and the customers are obliged to resort to something else. Carnations sold at a higher price than ever this year, bringing $1, $1.50 and $2 per dozen, while in many instances the quality was quite poor. Our local florists all agree that Mothers' day has done wonders for the florists' business. The weather continues favorable to an increasing demand for bedding plants.

Various Notes.

Owing to the fact that the Ringling Bros. circus was in town May 7, the Dayton Florists' Club postponed its regular monthly meeting until a week later.

The Dayton Floral Co. has recently purchased an automobile truck. This proved to be of valuable assistance for Mothers' day, as the company had an exceptionally good trade for this occasion.

The Heiss Co. displayed an exceedingly artistic show window at its retail store on Main street last week. It was arranged as a woodland scene, with orchid plants in full bloom. This company, too, had a good Mothers' day business. R. A. L.

"I WISH TO SAY."

John L. Ratcliffe, of Richmond, Va., not a large city, has for several months carried a 2-inch card in the Retailers' Department of The Review. This is what he said in a letter May 6, 1914:

I wish to say that I have received eminently satisfactory results from my ad in The Review. There are several cities larger than Richmond not yet represented in the Retailers' Department. Not only would it pay the most progressive man in each of those unrepresented cities but it would be a convenience to the whole trade to know where orders safely can be sent.

Carnation plants are nearly all set out in the field and bedding stock is well on its way to distribution.

The price of white carnations for Mothers' day put enthusiasm into the growers. One of them referred to it as being one of the days when there is "real velvet" in carnation growing.

B. F. Barr's giant pansies, shown with the aid of goldfish bowls, showed size that has never been attained in reality, but it was a clever "ad." Their dollar baskets of Spanish iris, daisies and other seasonable cut flowers were ready sellers. Chas. F. Edgar is the manager at this place.

The Rosery has shown baskets of delicate pink lupines that for daintiness could not be surpassed.

Thousands of people have visited the establishment of Geo. W. Park, at La Park, to see his wonderful planting of tulips, some 200,000 being in bloom.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club has furnished flower seeds for all the children who have garden plots in the section set aside for them by the city. For a number of years heretofore they have been raising vegetables and now will have an opportunity to learn the joys of flower gardening. The varieties supplied are of easy culture and adapted for cutting. The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be May 21.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

Mothers' day this year has beaten all holiday records outside of Christmas and Easter, and judging by the astonishing amount of business done last week, the day has to be regarded as one to be conjured with by all in the trade for all time to come. The glorious weather brought in a splendid crop of Beauties and all orders were filled with the exception of carnations. Over a dozen extra packers were at work in the shipping room at the Dale Estate.

E. A. LIPPMAN

MANUFACTURER OF

GREENHOUSE SHADING

No. 6 High Street, MORRISTOWN, N. J.

AFTER twenty-five years' experience in Greenhouse work, with Lord & Burnham Company, in the glazing and painting department, I am convinced that what is most needed in this line is a good shading, and I am pleased to advise you that I have the real thing, which I am sure you will find to be just what you are looking for.

This shading is beneficial to the painted wood, as it does not contain any gasoline or naphtha which would destroy the paint. In addition, it is beneficial to the glass also, for you will find that when the shading is removed the glass retains its former brilliancy.

As to its application, this is a very easy matter. It can be either sprayed on or put on with a soft brush. For real good work, however, I would recommend the use of a soft brush.

Another advantage of this shading is that when it is no longer needed, it can be removed without any difficulty, leaving the glass, as before stated, with its original brilliancy.

I am making this up in gallon cans, in three shades—light green, light blue and pure white. When ordering, kindly mention the color desired.

I trust that you will kindly favor me with a trial order to prove its worth, after which I have no doubt whatever but that you will continue its use.

The Market.

So far as cleaning out stock is concerned, Mothers' day was the best holiday we have seen for a long time. The demand for carnations was continuous and insistent, the public seeming to think this flower was the only one to use. The supply of this stock, which was already scarce, was soon exhausted and the trade then turned to roses, daisies, snapdragon, tulips and, in fact, everything in the flower line. The sales for Mothers' day did not reach the total to which they would have risen had stock in general been in sufficient supply, but on the whole the business was satisfactory. Wholesalers report that May 8 and 9 were hard days and the greater part of the work was turning down orders which poured in continually and which could not be taken care of. The carnations and roses were in fine condition and brought top-notch prices. Bulbous stock is still in the market, but getting poorer all the time. Sweet peas were scarce, but the stock was in fine shape.

Various Notes.

Thomas Cassidy, well known because of his long association with the C. C. Pollworth Co., has opened a flower store and dining room on Milwaukee street. His location seems to be a good one.

The new greenhouses of Patrick Cudahy, millionaire packer, at Cudahy, Wis., are becoming a fact. We understand there will be four houses 54x260 feet. These houses will be devoted to the production of carnations, American Beauties and roses. Mr. Cudahy is also going in for dairy farming and will therefore be well supplied with fertilizer in his new venture. G. W. Scott has been engaged to take charge of the greenhouses.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. sustained quite a loss May 4, in the death of Miss Marie Rahn, who had been employed in their office for over a year. Miss Rahn's death was sudden, as she was ill only about a day. She is sincerely mourned by all who knew her, as she had a sunny disposition, was lively and well liked by all.

Harry Balsley, of the Detroit Flower Pot Co., Detroit, visited Milwaukee May 9, on a business trip. Theo. Tellefson, of Cambridge, Wis., was also a visitor last week. H. J. S.

IF YOU ONLY KNEW what a good eave the METROPOLITAN PATENTED is, you would use no other. It is made of cast iron and will not rust. That part of your greenhouse which in other constructions is the weakest becomes the strongest. Not this alone, it is ice-clearing and carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and it is so constructed that almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw, abou' two inches from the end, is all that is necessary to secure the bars. For side stationary glass, wood headers are absolutely unnecessary, thereby causing no shade. Zinc glass stops are not necessary—the eave is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping. Let your next house be built with a Metropolitan Patented Iron Wall Construction. You will never regret it. Our price and service are right.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

The Market.

During the last two weeks business has shown decided improvement. There has been a large supply of all varieties of flowers and prices have been low, but since May 4 there has been less surplus and a greater call. The first gladioli of the season made their appearance last week. Fine snapdragons, in pink, white and yellow, have also been seen. With the approach of Mothers' day, carnations tightened up and prices reached $3 to $5 per hundred; there was a stronger call than could be satisfied.

The sale of nursery stock is about over and bedding plants are beginning to move.

Various Notes.

The W. E. Day Co. recently made an attractive window display with the polyantha rose, Orleans, in bloom, with two large vases of snapdragons on either side of the window, one of yellow and the other pure white.

Thomas Christian again is at his store for a short time each day. He soon will be able to be on the job as before his illness.

The floral section of the E. W. Edwards & Son department store has been busy during the week. In addition to the regular work with cut flowers and designs, Mr. Bultman has had several large wedding decorations that have taken considerable of his time and thought.

Theodore Foederer has leased the greenhouse property of Mr. Dumas, of Fulton, and will operate it in connection with the store which he recently opened in that town. He reports business as being good.

Plans for the June rose show to be given under the auspices of the Syracuse Rose Society are well under way.

It is estimated that some 20,000 carnations were used in Syracuse in the observance of Mothers' day. The florists have shown increased activity in advertising and making a display in connection with this day. Many out-of-town orders were handled and, likewise, many were sent by local florists to the dealers in other cities for delivery in those places.

C. R. Brown has completed his large vegetable range and has it planted. His service house is 20x100 and is a model of convenience. He has installed a Superior boiler and erected a brick chimney fifty feet high.

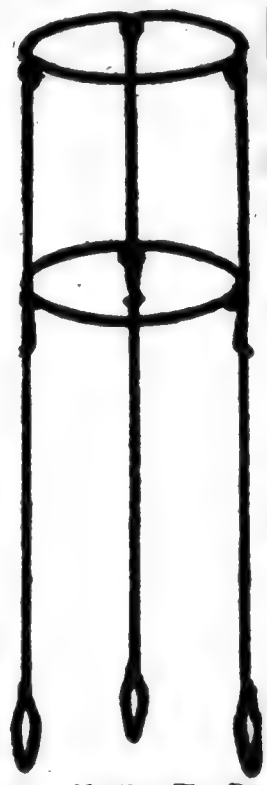
The Lord & Burnham house, 40x200, at the range of the Baker Floral Co., is nearly finished. This house was started April 28, by the men from the factory, and with the loss of three days by rain in the meantime, they have completed the wood and iron work, while the glazing and painting are well in hand. Mr. Baker reports that they will plant this house with carnations. They are beginning to make heavy shipments of geraniums and vincas. L. C. B.

MONINGER OPENS NEW YORK OFFICE.

The New York office of the John C. Moninger Company was opened May 1st on the eighth floor of the Marbridge Bldg., northeast corner of Broadway and 34th St., New York City, with Mr. A. Hammarstrom as manager.

Mr. Hammarstrom was, for about twelve years, with the Lord and Burnham Company, connected with the New York and Chicago offices. He is widely acquainted throughout the Eastern territory and well known in the greenhouse line.

The John C. Moninger Company for some years had contemplated establishing an office in the East. The new sales office is close to the Pennsylvania Terminals and the subway is just in front of the door. It is an ideal location for their office.



The New York office will have all of the Eastern States for territory. They will start out with considerable business to take care of.

Since opening, the office has booked an order for a large Iron Frame house 60x300'.

All correspondence for the Eastern States and the contents of the files have been moved from Chicago to New York. All customers located in the East, from now, write direct to New York regarding purchases, estimates or catalogues. For the present, all orders will be handled through the general office in Chicago, where the factory is located.

The Company hopes the new office will enable them to give even better service to their Eastern customers and friends. If we can be of any help to you through this new office, just write us.—Adv.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

A slight improvement has been noticed in trade during the last week. Mothers' day is becoming more popular each year and the amount of business done this year was quite satisfactory. Carnations seem to be the leading flowers for this occasion; the supply was somewhat limited, but the quality was good. White carnations were far in advance of the pink or red varieties. A choice selection of American Beauties and other roses was shipped into town. Sunburst, Mrs. Taft, Milady, Richmond and Aaron Ward were especially fine and cleared well. Prices have been quite reasonable the last few weeks. Violets are over for the season. Sweet peas, both ordinary and orchid-flowering varieties, are selling well for both corsage and funeral work. A large quantity of outdoor grown bulbous stock is arriving daily and is cleared at low figures. Some fine yellow, white and pink snapdragon is in the market and sells readily. Pink and white German stocks are coming in larger supply now. Easter lilies and callas are not having a great demand. Valley is in fine condition and maintains a high quality throughout. Pink lupine is an addition to our usual stock. Pansies sell well. There has been a good demand for yellow and white daisies of late. The supply of green goods is about normal.

Various Notes.

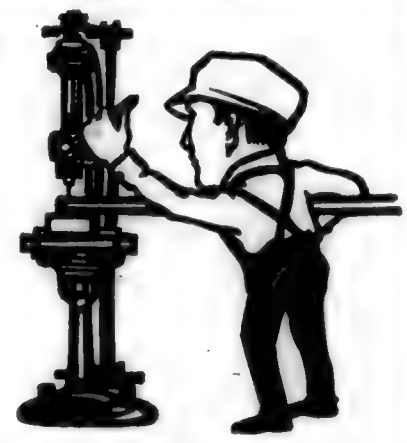
Salter Bros. have been showing some fine marguerites in the window of their East Main street store. Business with this firm has been quite good the last few weeks.

The bedding season has commenced in earnest and all growers are busy. With favorable weather the greenhouses should soon be cleared out. Some good aster plants are on the market.

Mrs. Edwin P. Wilson, who has been seriously ill at her residence, is now making good progress, but is much weakened. She is still confined to her bed.

A large newspaper advertisement for Mothers' day was inserted in five of the city papers by the coöperation of the downtown florists. Besides this each one had his individual advertisements, which brought good returns.

Among the seedsmen, Crosman Bros. are turning out a large quantity of stock; Mandeville & King are having busy times; A. W. Gilman is quite busy, as also is the firm of Jas. Vick's Sons.



The Maurer-Haap Co. is doing a good business in the florists' line. Importations of shrubs and trees are being disposed of fast. Seeds and plants are selling rapidly.

Saturday morning, May 2, Henry Vilmorin, of Paris, arrived in Rochester as the guest of W. H. Dildine and Charles H. Vick. At 7 p. m. an informal dinner was tendered Mr. Vilmorin by Messrs. Dildine and Vick, at the Seneca hotel. The following gentlemen were present: John Dunbar, Charles W. Crosman, W. H. Dildine, Judge H. F. Remington, A. W. Gilman, Dr. Howard W. Allen, George Arnold and Charles H. Vick. Mr. Vilmorin left for Montreal Sunday morning.

James Vick's Sons are showing an immense quantity of both flower and vegetable plants grown in their own houses from their well known seeds.

The President Talks More About the Iron in Our Houses

IN our last talk we had considerable to say about the task our engineers had in figuring exactly how strong a house should be made to both support itself and stand the strains of snows and blows. But there's a lot more to it than that.

Our engineers also make up a series of drawings that show exactly where each bolt hole shall go. These things are not left to the factory foreman. Not by a long shot. What's the use of having an expert engineering department to figure the necessary strength of a house and then let your factory men destroy part of the strength by putting the bolt holes in points that will weaken the structure? Every time you make a hole at a wrong part you take out iron and lessen its strength just that much. So you see our engineers must not only know the exact strength of iron in various sizes and shapes—but must also know how to figure the best location for bolt holes.

All this may seem very fussy to you, and quite unnecessary—but the fact remains that no blows or snows have yet tumbled over one of our houses.

One thing sure—you can depend on depending on Hitchings and "we go anywhere for business."

MAKING THE MOST OF MEMORIAL DAY

The Purpose of this Article is to get 10,000 Florists to think about ways of increasing the May-end sales of Flowers and Plants

IF the trade pushes Memorial day with the enthusiasm that was put into Mothers' day, sales will take another big jump next week. But it is unreasonable to expect the business to come without effort. Those days are over.

"Mothers' day will be what you make it," The Review told the trade. It was. Of course the efforts of the pushers did something to help those who were content with taking such business as might come their way, but the big gains were made by those who advertised; the greatest success was where everybody advertised. It will be so again next week.

Our Opportunity.

Memorial day this year affords a double opportunity. Falling on Saturday, Sunday will see almost as large a use of flowers for cemeteries as does the day set apart for the decoration of graves. It is the trade's opportunity.

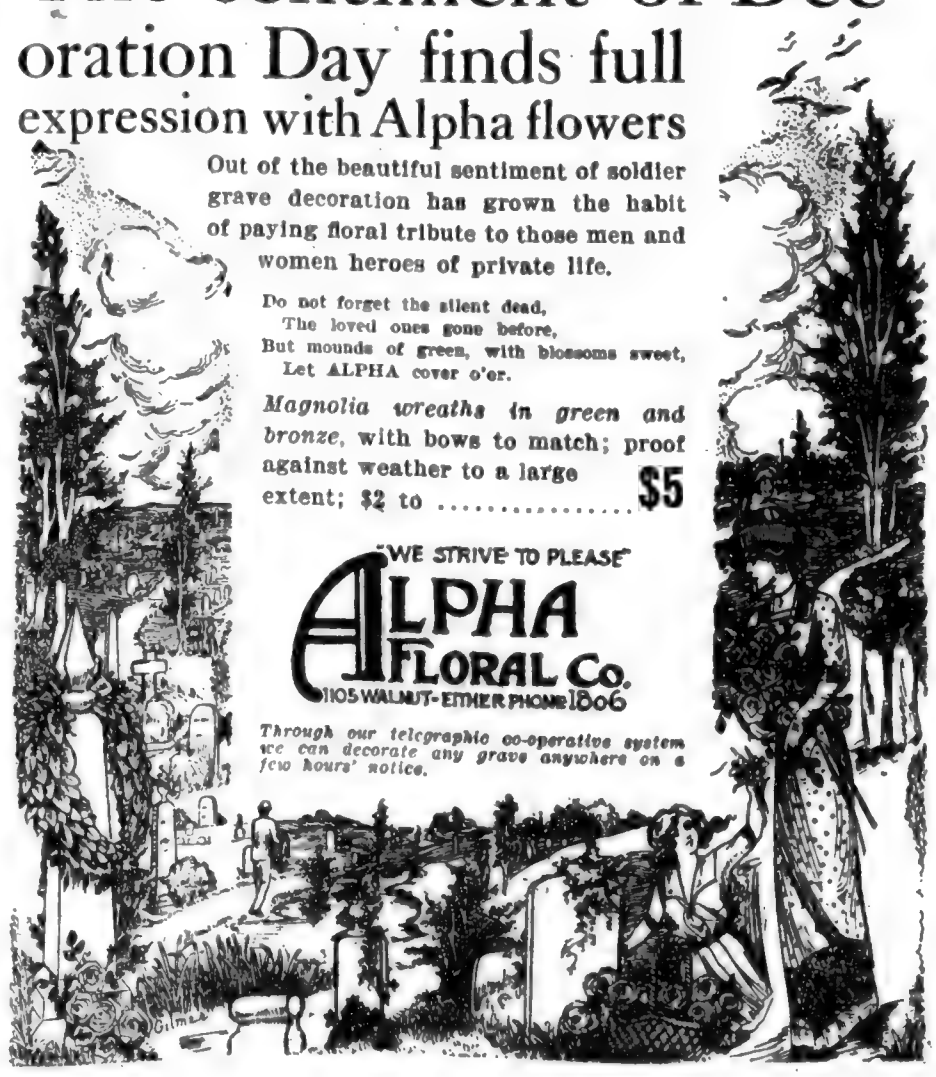
As the sentiment of Memorial day finds its best expression in the use of flowers, so does the thought of florists find reflection on the printed page. The retailer who thinks advertises, one way or another, and you can tell what he thinks, and how accurately his mental equipment works, by the advertising he uses. You can pick out from the ad the man who advertises just because his competitors do, and you can pick out the man who has a definite idea of what he wants to accomplish by his advertising. You can pick out the man who progresses.

Memorial day did not amount to anything so long as it was confined to the decoration of the graves of those who participated in "the late unpleasantness," but the business began to jump as soon as the public took it up. That the public participation in the decoration of graves was of great importance to everyone in the trade a few florists were quick to recognize and to stimulate this general observance of the day has been the chief aim of some of the most effective advertising that has been done.

WHEN A GOOSE lays an egg, she just waddles off as if she was ashamed of it—because she is a goose. When a hen lays an egg, she calls heaven and earth to witness. The hen is a natural born advertiser. Hence the demand for hens' eggs exceeds the demand for goose eggs, and the hen has all the business she can attend to.—Andrew Lang.

Different Styles of Ads.

A study of the Memorial day ads used last year by retailers in three widely separated cities, reproduced in this article much reduced in size, will illustrate the point. The student will recognize several distinct styles, and he will note that some of the advertisements carry the ear-marks of home manufacture while others bear the impress of the professional advertising man.



These sample ads were submitted to an advertising man for comment. He prefaced his notes with the statement that, just as "the proof of the pudding lies in the eating thereof," so the test of advertising is in the results it brings. An advertisement not commendable when judged by expert standards may nevertheless bring excellent results—only the results would be likely to be better if the advertisement were without faults. Also, in judging an advertisement it should be considered that the writer of it was influenced by facts within his own business of which others have no knowledge. Here are the friendly comments:

A Critic's Comments.

Alpha Floral Co.—Excellent design; would have been stronger if the advertiser's name had been omitted from the third line, making it read "The sentiment of Decoration day finds full expression in the use of flowers;" would gain by the omission of the verse; setting the higher price in large type puts emphasis on the more expensive wreath, which may or may not be what the advertiser intended; the telegraph delivery sentence is plain and to the point.

A. Lange—Well worded, but difficult to read because of poor display; position of the cut divides the matter so that one must study the text to get its sequence; liberal use of costly space nullified by faulty arrangement; "Flowers * * * * telegraphed to any destination" fails to convey the idea.

George Wittbold Co.—A good example of the department store style of advertising as applied to the florists' business; too much matter to get the attention of the casual reader, but lists a large variety of stock and tells the prices of it all; evidently the work of a man of experience in general lines of retail merchandise advertising; well designed, but not a style that can be used effectively by the florist who has no greenhouses at his back.

Lacks Definiteness.

Penn — This advertiser evidently knows his way about; he knows exactly what he wishes to accomplish and how to make it equally clear to those who read; carefully and expertly written and well displayed; would serve as a model for advertising of its kind, but the use of artificial material for a flower store feature is one that probably would not coincide with the ideas of the man who is first of all a florist and only secondly a merchant.

Samuelson—Straight to the point; would be better for a little educational talk about the sentiment that attaches to the day and the use of flowers; seems to have been prepared by one who knows so much about flowers and their uses that he forgets others are not so well informed; might well include telephone call, methods of delivery, etc.

Mangel—Shows up the name in good shape and emphasizes quality and price, but looks like the ad of a man who uses space just because his competitors do; doubtless good on the theory that any advertising is better than none, but the space might be much more effectively used for a definite proposition, easy to understand and easy to accept.

Make Up Your Mind.

Successful sales promotion, either by newspaper advertising or other means, necessitates, first, a definite idea of what is to be accomplished. No man can build a big business without an ideal, and no sales manager can accomplish worth-while results on the catch-as-catch-can principle. An advertiser, to get permanently successful results, must first have a definite general selling plan and then prepare his advertising copy to fit his selling plan. One store seeks to increase its sales by handling the little vases that hold only one flower, while others do not handle such lines for the definite reason that the additional sales would not make up for what they would lose through good patrons going out with nothing except the inexpensive articles; they are afraid they would be educating their trade down instead of up. Show windows, store arrangement, delivery system, bookkeeping, telephone service, advertising—all these should be correlated in a definite selling plan fitted to the needs of the one business in which it is to be used. It requires thought, but it's worth the effort, for "the man with the purpose gets there."

TO CLEAN COLEUS.

Will you please tell me the best remedy for the white pests on coleus. I have about 4,000 plants, all of which are infested. J. E. S.

For maggots at the roots use Vermine, one part to 300 parts of water, or a weak application of carbon bisulphide. The first remedy will be the most easily applied. For mealy bug on the foliage use cold water directed through a fine spray nozzle. Lay the plants on their sides and give them one turning over to thoroughly clean them. A great number of the bugs can, however, be blown off if the stream is carefully directed among the plants. Coleus foliage is easily injured and for this reason I would not advise the use of any of the soap or oil sprays, as one which would kill the bugs would, in all probability, seriously damage the foliage at the same time. C. W.

MISS POEHLMANN'S SUCCESS.

Thousands of florists are interested in this item and the accompanying illustration through having met Miss Virginia Poehlmann and seen her dance at S. A. F. convention social affairs, while other thousands will be interested because of their acquaintance with Mr. and Mrs. August F. Poehlmann and the fact that one of the trade's most profitable and widely grown early white mums is named after their dancing daughter.

It was at the Rochester convention in 1910 that Miss Virginia, then still in short dresses, first danced her fancy steps for florist friends, at an entertainment given by the Ladies' S. A. F. Since then she has made great progress, dancing many times in public, for her skill as a toe dancer has brought her scores of invitations to appear before the social organizations of which her mother is a member.

May 16 the Cook county public schools held Achievement day exercises at the Art Institute in Chicago, the purpose being to recognize and stimulate the efforts of pupils who make independent progress in some subject outside the curriculum. Miss Virginia, now a pupil in the eighth grade at Morton Grove, gave her toe dance in costume and, as Chicago daily papers said, "created a sensation." She was one of those awarded medals.

THE OHIO TAX CASE.

The Court of Appeals convened at Springfield, O., May 18, for a length of time to announce the docket, and then left to take up some outside work. The tax case in which all Ohio florists are interested was announced for the first case Monday afternoon, May 25, and will in all probability be heard before Judges Crowell, Donnelly and Kender. Roy McGregor, who is in charge of the case for the trade interests, says there is nothing else new in connection with the case other than that the vegetable growers of the state are becoming interested and promise to lend support in any way they can.

SHADING FOR GREENHOUSES.

What is the character of the paint used on greenhouse glass to obstruct the rays of the sun? Should the shading be removed during the winter months? Will whitewash answer the purpose when applied with a spray pump? H. E. R.

Various preparations are used for shading greenhouses during the summer months, according to the class of plants grown and the density of the shade required, but any preparation that is used for this purpose should be of such a character that frost will remove it, for little or no shading is needed during the winter, even for ferns and palms, and flowering plants in general are better off without any shading, except at such times as it may be necessary in order to prolong a crop.

Where an extremely light shading is wanted, a mixture of turpentine and boiled linseed oil, in the proportion of one pint of the boiled oil to one gallon of turpentine, answers well, and stands the weather for a considerable time. A heavier shading is composed of two pounds of whiting, one pound of white lead and one gallon of kerosene. Either of the foregoing mixtures should be applied to the glass with a long-handled whitewash brush.

A mixture that is frequently used for shading carnation houses in the summer, and chrysanthemum houses after the flowers are open, is composed of whiting and water, to which is added about one gill of linseed oil to one gallon of the mixture, the oil being thoroughly mixed with a syringe, in order to incorporate it in the whiting and water. This preparation may be applied with either a syringe or a spray pump.

Whitewash is the cheapest shading preparation in first cost and is easy to apply, either with a brush or a spray pump, and it does not permit so large a proportion of the heat rays to penetrate the glass as is the case with most of the preparations already noted, but it has the serious objection of injuring the putty and thus making a roof become leaky much sooner than it otherwise would.

A mixture of white lead and gasoline, of the consistency of milk, has also been frequently used for greenhouse shading, but the first cost of this preparation is more than that of the others that have been mentioned.

W. H. T.

Tewksbury, Mass.—Albert Roper has had several bids for the greenhouse, 57x200, which will be erected this year on land adjoining his present range, but the contract has not yet been given out.

FLOWERS AT POST FUNERAL.

The funeral of the late C. W. Post at Battle Creek, May 14, called for an unusually large quantity of flowers. The Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago, made a splendid great casket cover of American Beauties, as well as a number of big pieces, and its manager and an assistant made the trip to the Michigan city with them, taking charge of the flowers at the funeral. Muir and Lang each sent one large piece from Chicago and Breitmeyer sent several pieces from Detroit, but the greater number of the designs were of local workmanship, the orders falling to S. W. Coggan and Joseph Case, who each had numerous telegraph orders as well as the home orders. The accompanying illustration shows the flowers as arranged in the church. It is reproduced from a photograph by a staff photographer for a Detroit daily paper who was fortunate enough to get the only negative that shows the casket cover in its place.

THE CASKET CROSS.

An aristocrat among funeral designs is the casket cross of lily of the valley. The pall, or blanket, is a more commonly made casket cover, but where enough money is to be put into the design there is nothing better than the cross of valley. Of course the use of the design prevents the opening of the casket, but this also is true of the blanket when made the full length of the casket. This point must be understood between florist and customer before the blanket is started, and before an order for a casket cross can be taken. The cross is made on a wire frame made specially for the purpose. The proportions are not the correct proportions of the cross; compared with the length of the piece, the arms are shorter than they would be for any other purpose. The frame is made for mossing and should be shaped to fit the casket, with the ends bent downward so that they clasp the top of the casket in such a way that the cross will not fall off even though the casket be more or less tipped about in the handling.

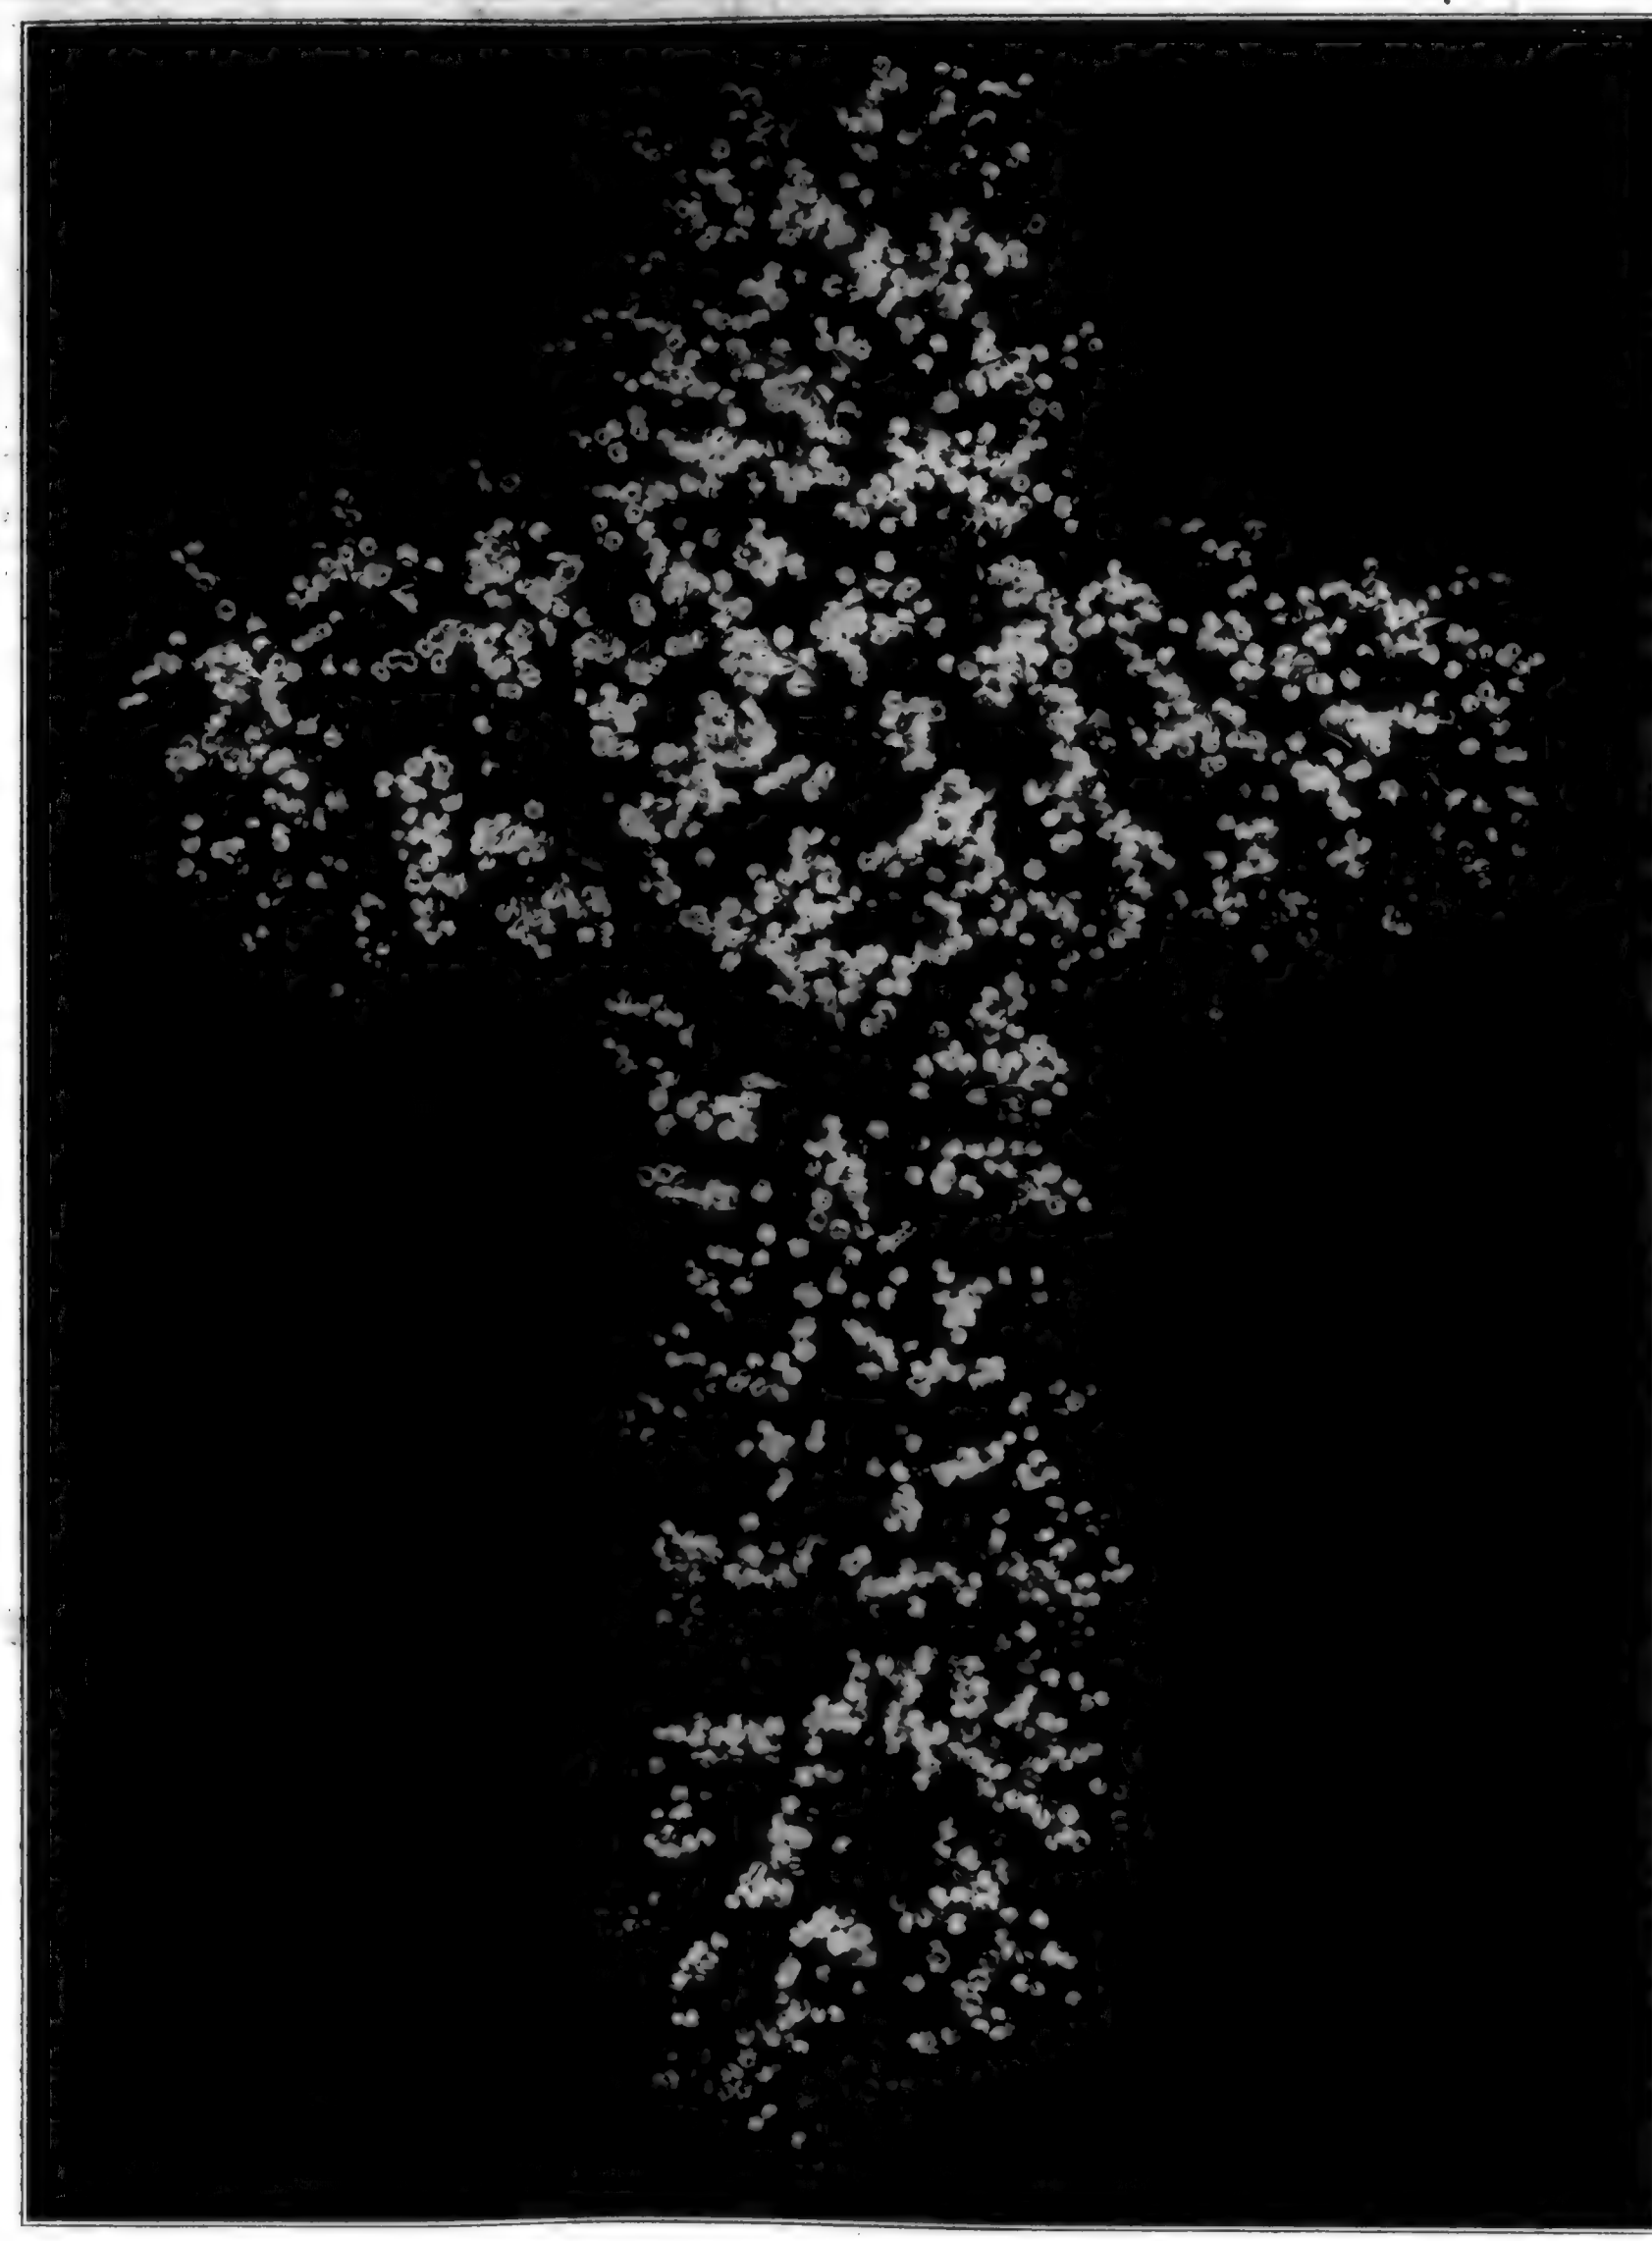
Some retailers make the casket cross of valley stemmed without foliage. It consumes a great deal more material, but it is only a matter of personal preference whether the style is better than the one shown in the accompanying illustration, where the valley was stemmed with its own foliage and set into the design at considerable height, so that a more or less loose effect was produced. The design is the same as the standing cross of valley except that it is made of casket size and with the object of presenting its best appearance when in a horizontal position. One point to be guarded is the bottom of the design. Not only must no wire show, but the projections must be taken care of so that no damage will be done the casket.

USING ARTIFICIAL FLOWERS.

I wish to take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the splendid helpfulness of The Review. Sometimes I feel I could not run the business without the helpful hints and articles I find in The Review.

As Decoration day draws near the problem of a suitable and salable wreath for that day presents itself. Would you kindly, through the columns of The Review, give me some suggestions along this line? Would you advise the use of artificial flowers? We never have used them, and yet sometimes the temptation to do so is strong. We have tried to wax roses and carnations for wreaths, but without much success, the flowers scarcely lasting any longer than fresh ones. Could you give us a recipe for waxing flowers? Perhaps we did not go at it right.

What would you suggest as the best way to decorate a magnolia wreath for Decoration day? Waxed flowers, fresh flowers, or artificial ones? We have never sold artificial flowers and would hate to begin now, but perhaps, after all, it is the best solution of the way to decorate a wreath for Memorial day. We thank you for an early reply through the columns of The Review.



G. A. T.

The Review does not favor the growing use of artificial material by florists, yet the fact that its use rapidly is becoming more general seems to show that it serves a purpose. It is difficult to see where sentiment attaches to the use of a cemetery wreath of paper, cloth or wax "flowers," but the fact is that in certain sections even tin wreaths can be sold to people who will not buy wreaths of real flowers. It is not a long step from the use of perpetuated foliage, like magnolia leaves, to the substitution of cloth imitations for flowers.

The sale of cemetery wreaths for Memorial day attained no important proportions until the prepared magnolia leaves came into use, and, if one's customers prefer the wreaths trimmed with one thing rather than another, there probably is no good reason why they should not be given what they want. Few florists, however, will bother to wax natural flowers; it isn't worth while; they will sell either one thing or the other.

Not long since a gentleman from a southwestern mining state visited The Review office. His card read "Florist," but it developed that he sold only funeral designs of wax flowers; distance from a satisfactory source of supply and other considerations made it impossible to sell anything else, he said. But he added that he hoped the day was not far distant when his people would want the real article, and get it. He has the right idea—he sells what he can and he looks and works for better things. No florist should offer artificial stock where flowers would be bought if shown.

BON VOYAGE TABLE DECORATION

An exceedingly valuable as well as novel table decoration is that shown in the illustration on this page. It was furnished for a bon voyage party given recently at the Virginia hotel, Columbus, O., in honor of two society women who were shortly to sail for Europe on the steamer Rotterdam. A miniature reproduction of this vessel formed the center of the decoration. This miniature steamer, the property of the Holland-American line, and at the time temporarily in Columbus for display, is seven feet in length and valued at $2,300. Canvas, hand-painted in water colors, represented the ocean waves on which the steamer rode. Killarney roses, marguerites and asparagus fern were the flowers used on the table. Miniature steamer trunks, labeled with the name of the boat and also with the names of the guests, were given as favors. The man who conceived and carried out this decoration was F. M. Brownewell, decorator for the Livingston Seed Co., of Columbus, O.

DIVIDING U. S. ROUTES.

Competition among the express companies to get the railroad contracts which will be relinquished July 1 by the United States Express Co., it is said, is keen, notwithstanding the expected injury to be done the express business by the parcel post. When the United States express liquidates it will throw open several railroads, among which are the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, the St. Louis & San Francisco, the Baltimore & Ohio and the Lehigh Valley. These lines are said to represent the cream of its business. The Wells-Fargo and the American are expected to divide the business, the American concern getting the eastern and the Wells-Fargo the western. The Frisco business may go to the Adams.

A TEXAS LEAGUER.

The florists at the Texas convention passed a resolution thanking The Review for its efforts and coöperation in our work of organizing. Personally, I think the issue of May 7 is the most attractive issue ever published since I have been taking the paper.

L. J. Tackett, of the Southwestern Horticulturist, has been appointed press reporter of the Texas Florists' Association, and I hope that you will take the matter up with him immediately, as he will from time to time send you news items.

We had a most enthusiastic meeting in Waco, and we feel that we have a great field before us.

We ask your coöperation, and hope that you will give all news items as much publicity as possible.

MANDA CASE REMANDED.

A claim by W. A. Manda, Inc., against the United Express Co., for damages sustained through the freezing of a carload of plants shipped from Orange, N. J., to Boston for exhibition at the National Flower Show of 1911, was recently before the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals. The plaintiff's contention at the trial was that the transportation of its plants by the car shipment in question had been unreasonably delayed by the express company, and that the car had not been kept properly heated during the journey to Boston, and, because of this, as well as the delay, the plants had been frozen and damaged. The trial judge directed the jury to return a verdict in plaintiff's favor for $710, and the express company appealed to the Court of Errors and Appeals, which reversed the judgment on the grounds that the judge should have left the question of the amount of damages to be determined by the jury, and that certain evidence offered on the part of the express company was improperly excluded. On the latter point the Court of Errors and Appeals said:

"The defendant also offered to prove that the car in which the shipment in question was made contained a stove, and that one of the plaintiff's employees accompanied the plants, presumably for the purpose of keeping a fire going in the stove, and that the connecting railroad company which was to haul the car containing the stove refused to attach it to a passenger train if a fire was kept burning in the stove; that Manda was notified of this fact, and authorized the fire in the stove to be dumped, and the car sent forward without a fire being kept up in the stove. It is difficult to understand upon what theory this offer of proof of authority given by Mr. Manda in respect to a matter seemingly so material to the plaintiff's right to recovery of damages for the freezing of the plants in question was rejected by the court. We think the court fell into error in so doing. Finally, from the mere fact that the plants were injured, even on the case which was permitted to be put in evidence by the court, it did not necessarily follow that the defendant company was responsible. It was for the jury to say, under the circumstances in evidence, as to the manner the plants were taken and loaded by the plaintiff from its greenhouse to the car at Orange while the plants were in its custody and care, and their subsequent unloading and transportation by the plaintiff at Boston to the flower show there, whether or not the injury complained of did not occur on those occasions, while the property was in plaintiff's own possession."

In concluding its opinion, the court adds this significant statement:

"Important questions relating to the construction of the federal interstate commerce law may arise upon a retrial of the issues, when the additional evidence which we have held to be admissible shall come in. It would, we think, be premature and unwise to attempt now to anticipate them." S.

ORCHIDS

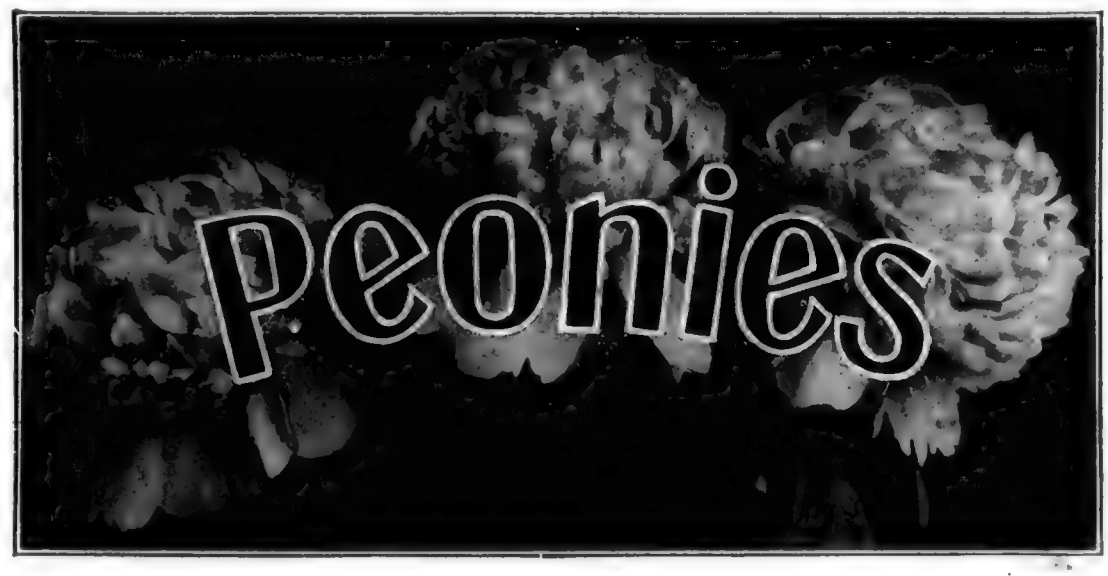
Shading.

Up to the present we have not been favored with high temperatures; in fact, it has been unseasonably cold most of the spring, with considerable cloudiness and precipitation. Under conditions such as have prevailed, orchids which were lightly shaded will have fared the best. It is during the prolonged cold and sunless spells of weather that those who have movable lath blinds have a great advantage over those who paint kerosene and white lead or some similar shading on the glass. But while light shading has advantages for cattleyas and lælias, phalænopsis, cypripediums and miltonias want a heavier shade, as do calanthes, dendrobes and odontoglossums. An hour or two of direct, bright sunshine after this date may do serious injury to them. Streak shading has some advantages. This consists simply of painting strips three to four inches wide and leaving similar widths clean. It is easy to make brushes that have sufficient width to cover 16-inch glass.

Feeding.

Plants now are nearly all in more active growth and water supplies must be increased. It is, however, always safer to let the plants go a little on the dry side rather than the reverse. Cattleyas, recently potted, are making roots more freely, but water these with care. Do not imagine, because some active roots are pushing, that the plants need a daily soaking. All cattleyas, lælias, cypripediums, cœlogynes, in fact all orchids, are benefited by a light spraying overhead daily at this season, when the weather is clear. Apply this sufficiently early so that the plants will be dry before sunset.

The subject of feeding orchids gives rise to antagonistic views. Some denounce it as extremely harmful and show plants of astonishing vigor which have never been fed. Others will produce plants which will win applause and we are told that feeding did it. When practitioners thus differ who is to decide? There is surely some middle ground on which all can or should meet.



The most rabid opponents of feeding for orchids must agree that without manure water it would be impossible to produce the fine calanthes, phaius, cœlogynes, cymbidiums, sobralias, zygopetalums and cypripediums. The writer's experience has been that careful feeding much benefits all these plants. Dendrobiums, odontoglossums and phalænopsis will appreciate weak doses of cow manure water, but applications of Cookson's formula are just as good. Well established cattleyas and lælias with receptacles filled with active roots are undoubtedly benefited by weak doses of liquid manure while in active growth. I know some growers who use Clay's fertilizer in water with good results, but it should be remembered that only strong, well rooted plants should be fed.

Cattleya Fly.

I was pleased to read the article in the Review of May 14 regarding the cattleya fly. The varieties of cattleya on which the fly usually comes are labiata and Trianæ. The first named has usually been the worst offender, but Trianæ of late has been just as bad. Anyone receiving new cattleyas would be well advised in cutting off all growths just starting and burning them. This is a radical remedy, but it is the best one we have. It takes courage to chop off all these nice leads, but it will pay in the long run. If all are cut off the chances are that most of the flies are killed. If one or two fine growths are left to develop and hatch a few broods of these arch enemies of cattleyas, it will be a painful and discouraging task to control them.

Fumigate with strong nicotine. Lay sticky fly papers among the plants; these will catch quite a few. Look over the growths carefully at least twice a week. Never fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas. Cattleyas are apparently tough subjects, but cannot stand gas. The months of April and May are those when this fly is most in evidence, but many hatch in March and at other periods during the year. Such long bulbed varieties as Portia, Bowringeana and Skinneri are rarely, if ever, attacked.

COLD STORAGE FOR PEONIES.

Please tell us, through The Review, about the best method of holding peony blooms for Memorial day, where they come too early. Where cold storage is employed, please state the best temperature.

F. B. R.

The question gives no information as to the quantity of stock or the conditions under which it is to be handled, so that a reply can be only general in character. If the stock is only a small quantity and to be held only a few days, for local trade, if not too far developed it can be put in water and stored in any cool basement where there is pure air. If a larger quantity is to be cared for, space can be procured in a public cold storage warehouse. One of the warehouses at Chicago sets aside a big room for peonies each season, running it at 36 degrees, but no special temperature is needed; all cold storage warehouses contain apples and the peonies will keep with the apples if properly cut, bunched and wrapped. The cold-storing of peonies on a large scale is an art that begins with the selection of the varieties and ends only with the marketing. It is an art at which few are proficient. The average grower's stock brings more money, in an average season, if sold at once than it does if given a term in cold storage before being put on the wholesale market.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

Representatives of the American Peony Society, Horticultural Society of Chicago and the Chicago Florists' Club held a meeting at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, May 14, to complete arrangements for the annual exhibition of the American Peony Society, which will be held in Chicago this year, under the auspices of the local organizations. Those in attendance were Wm. A. Peterson, of Peterson Nursery; Carl Cropp, of Vaughan's Seed Store; Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co.; Thomas Wallis and M. Barker. The Art Institute was selected for the exhibition, which will be held June 12 and 13, this date being subject to change as weather conditions affect the local crop. C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, Ill., was appointed manager of the exhibition, and all inquiries referring to premium list, prizes, etc., should be addressed to him.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

HIGH PRICES AND HOLIDAYS.

Is There Any Remedy?

Every holiday that brings a big demand for flowers brings at the same time numerous complaints against the resulting high prices. No one is stronger than the florist in the belief that high prices are a detriment to the success of these special flower days, so far as the florist is concerned. But that does not prevent a certain proportion of the public from thinking the flower dealer is a barefaced robber, and some go so far as to call him by that name. The trade is doing some studying in an effort to avoid the conditions that give rise to these hard feelings. The suggestion to this end is as worthy of florists' thoughts as the defense of the present situation in the subjoined reply to a complaint on this score.

The Federated Churches of Cleveland, an organization of much strength in that city, addressed the following letter to the leading florists of the place. The capacity of the organization for injury to the trade, as well as the publicity given to the charge of high prices in the daily papers, led F. C. W. Brown, manager of the J. M. Gasser Co., to take this opportunity to put the other side of the case before this influential body. The letter sent by the Federated Churches of Cleveland read as follows:

The Complaint.

"The attention of the Federated Churches has been called to what many believe to be an overcharge for carnations just prior to Mothers' day. We have been requested to ask leading florists in the city if they will not cooperate in making it possible for large numbers of men and women to purchase carnations at a reasonable price.

"It is in no spirit of criticism that this communication is addressed to you, but only in response to a request that has come to this office, urging us to call the attention of the florists of Cleveland to the fact that overcharges have been made in the past by some florists.

"We are sure that you will coöperate in making the most of Mothers' day for Cleveland."

The Reply.

In the following letter, Mr. Brown met the charges made against the florists in this matter, setting forth the exigencies of the case so fully that it must lead members of the trade to inquire whether a remedy cannot be found for any of them:

"Flowers are no longer a luxury, but have become a public commodity, and the amount of capital invested in their production and distribution would, if put in statistical form, be quite surprising to the great majority of the public.

"The business of growing and selling has been put on the same basis as the production of any other commodity, and while perhaps there is more or less sentiment attached to many of the purchases of flowers, if the grower is to pay his staff of from one to 1,000 employees, or to pay his coal bill, which at many of the larger establishments runs from $300 to $1,000 in a single day, or to pay a fair amount of interest on the capital he has invested, which in single companies amounts to over half a million dollars, he must somehow overlook the sentimental feature of the business and, borrowing a phrase, come down to brass tacks.

Coming Down to "Brass Tacks."

"'Brass tacks,' in this instance, is bowing to the law of supply and demand, which we all realize regulates our commercial existence.

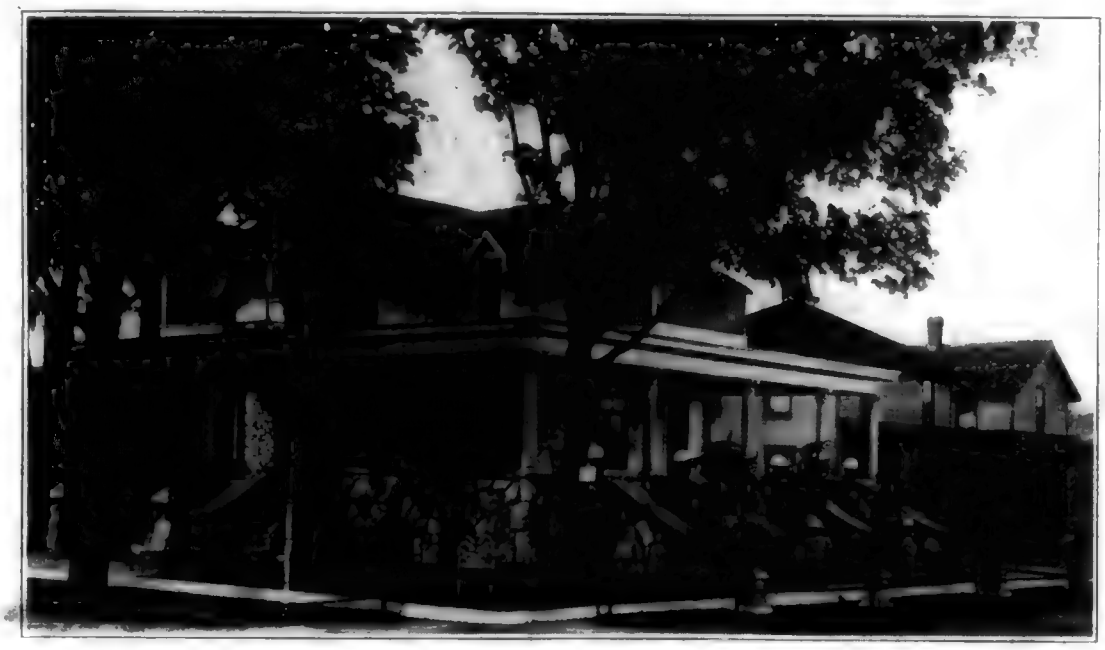
"For the sake of clear understanding we will deal with the flower you have particularly mentioned, the carnation. If you are a flower buyer, you know that there are many times when carnations are sold at retail for as low as 30, 40 and 50 cents per dozen. At such times the flowers are sold at a loss to the grower, for he must receive that sum to pay the actual cost of production. So it should not be hard to understand that there must be times when a greater price is necessary to make up for the losses incurred. Therefore the law of supply and demand does the equalizing.

"The grower sells at a loss when his supply is greater than the demand, thereby increasing the demand and having his output consumed. When the supply is less than the demand, he increases his price, not curtailing the demand, but so arranging that the price is equalized in the rise, at a standard whereby he is permitted to continue growing, so that the public may be supplied with what it desires.

"We desire to point out to your society that flowers are not like a great many other kinds of merchandise. It is not possible in the quiet season to store up and put away the blooms for a time when there is a demand for them, and while it is true that nature has given us a little control over the plants, so that we can force an extra amount of blooms for special days when flowers are in great demand, we have not yet succeeded in forcing nature to yield a crop to compensate us in a day for the year-around care, attention, space and expense incurred in bringing to the public our stock in trade.

"We are not even as fortunate as the dealer in fruit, who can, by means of cold storage, bring his wares from the side of the world that is given summer sunshine when we are given winter snows. You buy peaches for 75 cents per basket in August, but you do not grumble at paying 75 cents each at Christmas time for an even inferior fruit brought from Africa, if it seems essential that you should have them. We cannot bring carnations from Africa.

On the Sentimental Side.



"Now, if you will permit us to wander from the mercenary standpoint back to the sentimental side of the question, we will quote from a letter published in the Plain Dealer of May 8, under the heading of 'Mothers' day.' The letter refers to three little boys who wanted to buy carnations on Mothers' day:

"'At the third place we went to, we told them we wanted some carnations awful bad, and couldn't they let us have just a few for 30 cents, and they took us out in a back room, where they had some that were not exactly fresh, and they gave us four of those for 30 cents.'

"Aside from being proud of our florist who truthfully told the little boys that the carnations were not perfectly fresh, we want you to remember that the children were able to procure carnations.

"Do you realize that on such a day as Mothers' day, or, in fact, on any special day, there is an abnormal demand for flowers, a demand that really doubly exceeds the supply, and if flowers were and could be held to a low, standard price, a few people would buy in such quantities that the masses, the three little boys above quoted, would find, when they went to purchase, that all flowers had been sold to a few who had more money than they and had the foresight to order in advance.

"Your letter also voices a sentiment unfortunately quite common with the Residence and Office of Carl Hirsch, Hillsdale, Mich.

Show House of John A. Keller, Lexington, Ky.

buying public; that is, that the price is raised by the storeman to increase his profits. Such is not the case with the great majority of flower stores. Let me assure you that when carnations sell at $1 to $1.50 per dozen the percentage of profit is less to the retailer than when they sell at 50 cents per dozen, for the competition to secure a supply to satisfy the retail trade is the cause of the just increase in price by the grower. The grower disposes of every bloom, good, bad and indifferent, at such seasons, while at times when he offers the same or better flowers at half the price he cannot get rid of his stock.

More Flower Days Wanted.

"You might say, 'Let us abandon such days as Mothers' day, and keep an even market price.' That would not be a solution of the problem. What we want is more such days, so that there will be a market twelve or fifteen times a year for large quantities of blooms. Then greater quantities will be grown and sent in to a more even market, and all will be supplied, at prices that will pay a profit without recourse to heavy increases, and as the periods between big demands will not be so great, there will be no necessity to sell below cost or to give large quantities to flower guilds or hospitals.

"Do not misunderstand our last statement; we each and all give cheerfully to brighten the hour of pain or to assist in charity; but if you come to our establishment, you will find that, were other lines of trade to contribute to the above-mentioned in the same proportion that the florists' does, there would be no necessity for campaigns for money.

"Our business is in its infancy, and because of the peculiar conditions governing our stock and its production, many people, as is evidenced by your letter, still look upon, and think of, a flower as something plucked from the garden.

Supply and Demand.

"You do not expect to buy strawberries in April for the same price that you pay in June. You do not expect to buy a hothouse grape for the same price as our own garden varieties. Gold is more valuable than iron, and the price is regulated by the law of supply and demand, the same law of supply and demand that regulates our merchandise; only we are not so fortunate as those who supply material that can be stored to meet a heavy demand.

"We trust your society will accept this letter in the spirit in which it was written and we thank you for the opportunity given us to offer our explanation of a condition that is misunderstood only because it has not been investigated.

"We realize that the flower business each year, as our cities are growing bigger and our gardens are growing smaller, is becoming more and more important, and we know of the great good, and elevating and soothing effect of our material wherever it is placed; so we hope that you will assist us to dispel the idea that we carry on our business for purely mercenary reasons, but you will also understand that without a sound financial basis of profit we cannot continue to exist."

AT THE KELLER RANGE.

One of the largest ranges in the state of Kentucky is that of John A. Keller, at Lexington, Ky., which consists of about 60,000 feet of glass. It is asserted to be the best equipped in the state, and the stock it produces is of high quality. One of the carnation houses in this range is shown in one of the illustrations; the other gives a view of the show house, which is filled with fine pot plants. Cut flowers and pot plants comprise almost the entire stock; but little bedding stock is now grown. The management of this establishment is in the hands of J. F. Keller, a son of the late J. A. Keller. The business is both wholesale and retail. A large part of the output is handled by J. P. Keller, a brother of the manager of this concern, who conducts a downtown store under the name of Keller, Florist.

A MICHIGAN FLORIST'S HOME.

People who work in glass houses have, as a rule, handsome and substantial residences in which to pass their few leisure hours. They have, of course, the talent and experience of their trade, which will enable them to put on those finishing touches that add so much to the beauty of a home. Perhaps it is for this reason that a florist's residence usually looks like that of a man of fortune. Perhaps, too, it is because a good florist is usually a man with a good fortune as well.

A combination of the two reasons is accountable for the fine appearance of the home of Carl Hirsch, at Hillsdale, Mich., which is shown in the illustration. Mr. Hirsch is the proprietor of the Hillsdale Floral Co., which does a good, steady business, with a glass area of considerably over 30,000 square feet. In addition, Mr. Hirsch has charge of all the gardening of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad between Chicago, Ill., and Toledo, O. This in itself is no small responsibility, as this railroad has some beautiful stretches along its route, in which the concern takes a special pride. The man who has this responsibility and a good-sized greenhouse establishment as well can quite afford a home before which the sight-seeing automobiles slow down.

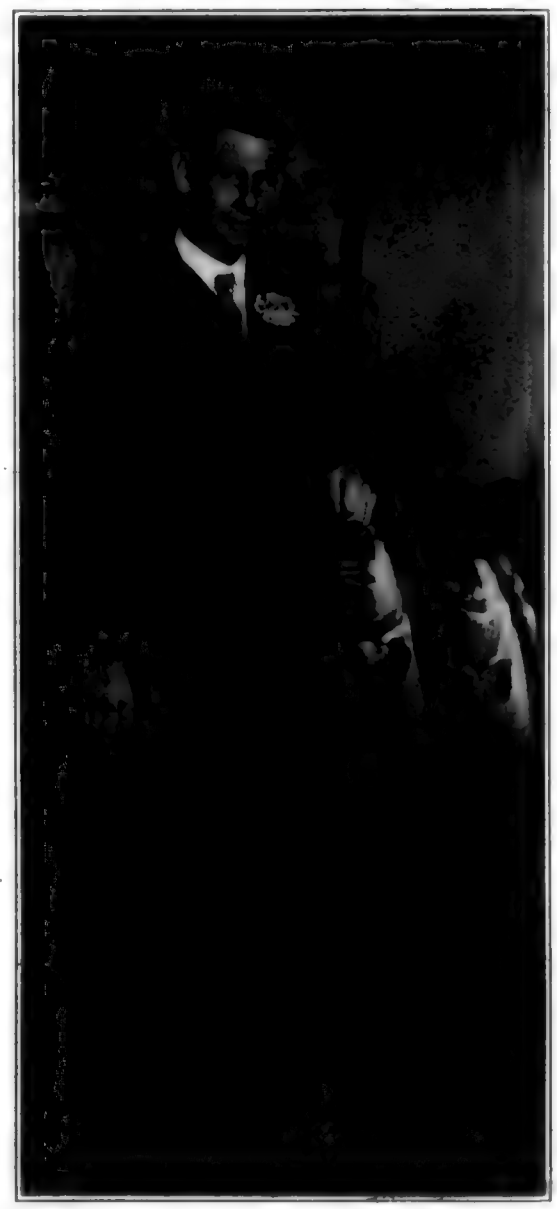
BETTER REPLANT THE BENCHES.

I grow roses in solid benches and wish to replant some places where the old plants died or where the present plants are not strong or desirable. When would be the best time to put in the young plants and what size of plants would be most suitable? When and how should I dry off the benches to let the plants rest for next winter's crop? How can I dry off the benches and keep the young stock coming for next winter? The varieties are Killarney, Bride, Bridesmaid, Richmond and Sunburst. They are 2 and 3 years old.

J. L. V.

It would not be good policy to plant young plants between the old ones, as the old plants would shade the younger ones and prevent them from making good growth. The best way to treat these roses would be to hold off the water for a couple of weeks to partly rest the plants; then take up all the plants in one bench and replace the soil with good, fresh compost, consisting of three parts good clayey loam and one part manure, with a good sprinkling of bone meal. Take out all good plants in the next bench and plant them in the new soil, adding enough of those taken from the first bench to fill all the space. Empty the second bench and treat it in the same way as the first, and so on until all the plants that are worth keeping are replanted. The space left over can then be planted with young stock.

When replanting the old stock, be sure that the plants are thoroughly watered, so that the soil is well packed around the roots. To do this, the benches will have to be gone over at least three or four times, or until the water stands on top. If this is done, there is little danger of losing any plants through transplanting them. If this work is done sometime in June, the plants will have time to give a good crop of flowers in September and October, bringing in the second crop about Christmas. W. J. K.



RAISING SEEDLING ROSES.

Will you kindly tell me the methods used commercially in handling rose seed outdoors; also the length of time generally required to flower seedlings from the time of germination? I am located in the northwestern part of Washington state. H. E. J.

The seeds, when gathered, should be stratified in moist sand or fermented in tubs or boxes with a little water, and kept warm, later being placed in sand. The seeds in your climate could be sown outdoors the same fall they are gathered. Dig the seedling bed deeply and add some well decayed manure to it. Pulverize the surface thoroughly before sowing. Be sure to select a well drained piece of land for the seed bed.

As to the time it will take to germinate the seed, some varieties may start in six weeks, others in six months, some not for eighteen months or two years. It is agreed that seed gathered as soon as properly ripened will germinate more evenly and more quickly than such as was left on the plants until late in the season. Your seed beds should be mulched with partly decayed leaves, pine needles or some other material, to keep the ground moist and keep down weeds. I would suggest that you do not give up hopes of seedlings appearing for two years, and the late comers may turn out to be the best. Owing to the long period which elapses before germination, the majority of growers prefer to sow in flats or coldframes, which are always kept moist. This is undoubtedly preferable to open-air culture for choice crosses.

Seedlings can go into nursery rows the year after they germinate. Many should flower the year following, and all the second year. C. W.

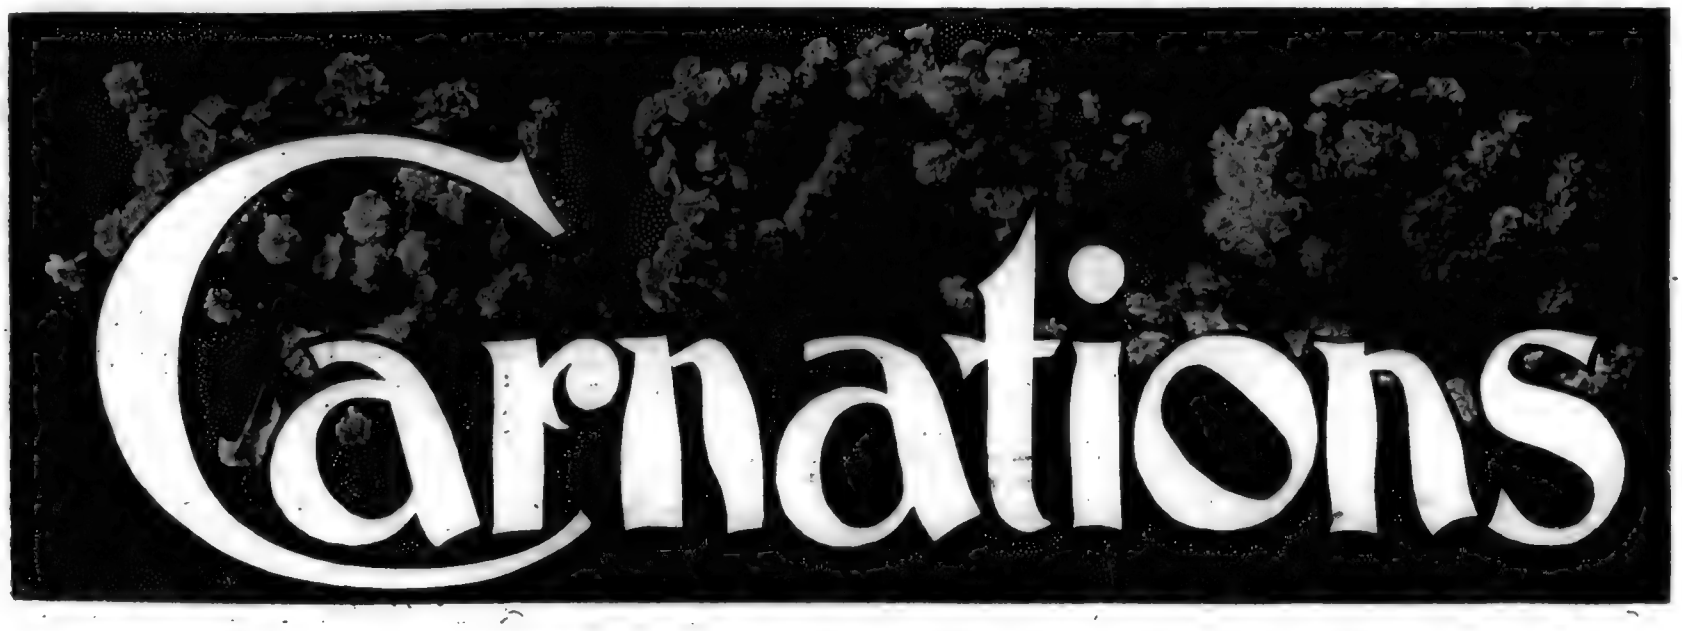
AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Committee Meeting.

At the executive committee meeting of the American Rose Society, held in New York city on Monday, May 11, a resolution was passed that the American Rose Society would meet in Hartford, Conn., June 19, 1914, at the Hartford Union Station, for the purpose of going over the Hartford rose garden, and as many of the members of the Rose Society as could attend were requested to be present on that day. The day that was spent there last year was a source of much pleasure and interest.

So far, no objections have been received as to the names of the two roses which recently were registered, and notices of the registration of which were sent out. They are Thora, from George Burton, and Defiance, from Edward Kress.

The Syracuse Rose Society, with 216 members, has joined the American Rose Society as an affiliated association.



The special prizes offered for the spring show have been received and turned over to the treasurer of the New York flower show committee.

FISHING FLORIST OF FLORIDA.

Sometimes, when business is dull and the weather is right, F. A. Knull, of the Knull Floral Co., at Tampa, Fla., goes fishing. He is as good a hand at making the fish rise as he is at selling flowers, and the smile on his face shows his satisfaction with the catch he made just before the photograph reproduced herewith was taken. The part of the catch shown in the illustration gives an indication of the size of trout a good fisherman can land at Tampa.

CARNATIONS IN THE SOUTH.

How to Grow Them Successfully.

It might be well for me to preface this article by stating that I do not expect any grower to place unquestioning confidence in the cultural methods which I here describe, for, though I have found these methods of treatment to be the best of the several that I have put to the test, yet the different conditions at different establishments may have a tendency to produce widely different results from the use of the same system. I shall be satisfied if my suggestions receive fair consideration and are not condemned without a trial.

The great part which the carnation plays in the florists' trade is paralleled by no other flower as yet. It brings the bread and butter to a multitude of homes. On the other hand, it often plays havoc at times when it is in great abundance and is cheapened by street sales. But, on the whole, it is the most reliable crop for those who have limited glass space. In the warm southern states it is much in demand for the simple reason that it is comparatively little grown. In many cases, when carnations are abundant in the northern cities, they are retailed at $1 or more per dozen throughout the south, wherever the florists' trade is in competent hands, even though the flowers are often in a shaky condition after having been shipped, in warm weather, from distant points. Of course the shippers are careful about the selection and packing of these flowers and are repaid in that they get a good price for them.

The Southern Grower's Troubles.

The supposed reason for the scarcity of carnations here, in the south, is that it is difficult to grow them here. A few express the view that the soil is not adaptable, though that is the least reason for not growing them. Others are convinced that it is impossible to be successful where stem-rot is almost sure to be in evidence in spite of all precautions as to soil and watering in this warm climate. All of the diseases prevailing in the colder climates are here to be found, and perhaps more, but stem-rot is the most troublesome and will soon be dominant if precaution is not a governing idea in the grower's cranium. At times this disease is indeed embarrassing. Endless care must be exercised against this fungus, for though the plants may seem to be in the best of vigor throughout the early part of the season, when the warm days of late winter and spring come on they may show only too plainly that they are affected, and it will then be painful to find them wilted, with several buds and blooms. It is too late then to do anything that will bring the disease under control.

Throughout the south, cuttings can be taken from outdoor plants any time during the month of November. The cuttings will be in excellent condition at this time, and the only necessary care in taking them is to notice that they are taken from healthy plants.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU

When cuttings are taken from outdoor plants, a larger percentage of them root than of those taken from indoor plants.

Rooting the Cuttings.

After these cuttings have been taken, either from field or house plants, they should be carefully trimmed. The little bottom leaves should be taken clean off and part of the tops from the large ones, so that when in the sand bed they will not hinder the circulation of air. Care should also be taken that the fiber remaining at the stem end be cut away. These cuttings, as they are gone over one by one, are thrown into a bucket containing a light solution of ammoniacal carbonate of copper; the reason for this will be explained farther on.

The rooting percentage will depend considerably on the attention the propagator gives them. If the weather is unsuitable, the propagator must be prepared to overcome the unfavorable conditions. The climatic conditions here, in southwestern Texas, may be considered an example of the worst conditions possible in carnation propagation. Beyond a doubt, the weather in this part of our country is the extreme for unfavorableness. The propagator must be at once painstaking in preventing wilting and in preventing damping off. To do this, in days when steady, hot winds blow, he must resort sometimes to methods which at first thought seem unnatural and antagonistic to the life of the plant, and, if the methods seem unnatural, he must be careful that he does not overdo them.

Protection from Hot Breezes.

During days when hot, brisk breezes are blowing, the advisable treatment for the propagating house is to close the ventilators completely; spray the cuttings and cover them with newspapers; if the wind still blows at night, leave them so and open the ventilators slightly. The house must at all times be densely shaded. This can be accomplished by stretching sheeting four feet wide overhead. This sheeting will also serve the purpose of protecting the cutting bench from draughts from the open ventilators. In the effort to keep these cuttings from wilting during windy weather, some oversight, in the way of keeping them covered or covering them when they are too wet, may start fungous disease. The advisable thing to do during a hot breeze, after the cuttings have been watered, is to leave them uncovered for a time so that the water drops will evaporate from the foliage; then cover them so that the papers will hang over the bench.

Having planted these cuttings in the sand, the point in view is to give them close attention in watering, spraying and protection from the hot winds, if there are any, and at the same time to keep them as cool as possible.

In southwestern Texas it is sometimes necessary to leave the cuttings covered for two days at a time; in other seasons it may not be necessary to cover them at all throughout the rooting period. In this part of our country the covering of the cuttings and the applying of water are truly the tasks that require the most painstaking care. The quantity and frequency in watering depend on the grade of sand in use. For instance, after planting cuttings in the sand obtainable near Mobile, Ala., which is fine and rather soft, one good watering sufficed to root them. In that neighborhood frequent sprayings are dangerous, as the air is heavy with humidity.

Bruises that Cause Stem-rot.

Fungus in the form of stem-rot is, according to my observation, less contagious than the form which causes the cuttings to damp off in the bench. Stem-rot seems to set in at the joint or at any barked portion of the stem below or just about the soil line. When the cutting has been barked or torn, the wound may seem to heal, and frequently does, but often by opening this thin bark which has formed you will observe that beneath it there is a brown, pulpy spot. Though plants thus affected may not manifest stem-rot for some time, they eventually must, but if conditions are not at once favorable to the development of this fungous spot, months may pass before the disease can eat through enough of the stem to affect the plant. After the fungus has spread, the plant fiber in the portion of the stem just at the soil line will turn brown and pulpy; then the plant will suddenly wilt. Some plants may only partly wilt, perhaps a branch or two, and the rest of the plant may grow on for months and often the entire season. Here and there you will find where little breaks have started below the decayed portion.

Experiments with a Fungicide.

Several plants which were affected with stem-rot only in part were carefully scraped; every particle of the rot was cut away. Some of the plants were so far gone as to make it necessary to cut away two-thirds of the stem. After this was done, the wound was bathed with an exceedingly strong solution of ammoniacal carbonate of copper. Finally more than half of the plants overcame the fungus. Of course, this would not be a profitable thing to do. The experiment was carried on for the purpose of learning the importance of this solution in preventing the fungus.

This solution is among the best for use in floriculture; it is easy to prepare and is one of the cheapest fungicides known. To make this fungicide to advantage, use a chemical bottle having a capacity of four quarts; into this pour three ounces of carbonate of copper and one quart of ammonia; cork and shake vigorously. This amount will be enough to make twenty to thirty gallons of spraying solution. The bottle should be kept corked; this will keep the solution indefinitely. When small quantities are wanted, measure the liquid with a chemical glass, and make sure that the correct dilution is made, which is approximately one to 100 parts of water. The solution into which cuttings are thrown as they are trimmed is about half this strength.

In Frame, Field and Greenhouse.

When the cuttings are rooted they should be potted and placed in cold-frames. After they are established, and before planting them out in the field, a spraying or two of fungicide will aid in preventing rust or attacks of other diseases. These plants make surprising growth by the time they should be housed, which will be during August or the first part of September. After they have been two or three weeks in the house and have become well established there, they should be gone over by experienced help for the purpose of removing all dry grass; this work should be done with care, so that the plants will not be barked. After this has been done, a thorough spraying of the carbonate of copper solution should be applied and repeated three or four times in as many weeks. Plants thus treated should not, at least, manifest grass diseases throughout the winter.

Thrips sometimes prove troublesome during the months of April and May, when they breed on outdoor flowers, but these pests can be kept at bay by persistent spraying or fumigating; spraying is much preferable.

In closing this statement of my opinions, founded on my personal experience as a southern grower, I would add that the carnation can be made exceedingly profitable throughout the south, but we first must have men who will make it a study, and who will not confound northern ideas with southern ones.

F. P. Adams.

CARNATIONS IN THE SOUTHWEST.

THRIPS AND OTHER PESTS.

I am sending you under separate cover some carnation buds and I wish you would tell me what is the matter with them. You will notice that two of the buds look as though they had been scalded. The scalded appearance is confined mostly to the white and light pink varieties. The other buds, as you will see, are eaten, and this is done mostly when the buds are small. The soil in which they were grown was one-third green cow manure and two-thirds garden soil. They have not been fed to any extent. We have kept them rather on the dry side. Some stem-rot has developed, but not to a serious extent. There is and has been a little green aphis. The scalded buds have been noted occasionally all winter, but the eaten buds have only been noted within three or four weeks.

Six weeks ago we put some shelves above the benches, and placed there flats of seedlings. We tried to arrange these flats so they would not cast more shade on the carnations than necessary. Our house is 30x100. On the whole, we have had a fine cut of carnations through the winter. Can you tell us what is the matter with these plants?

H. C. V.

The larger buds show plainly the ravages of thrips. It is now rather late in the season to start a warfare on these pests. They multiply with great rapidity during this warm weather, and if the house is badly infested you can hardly expect to exterminate them before it will be time to replant. In dealing with these pests, the best plan is to prevent their spreading from the beginning of the season. By spraying with nicotine or fumigating regularly through the winter, when they multiply slowly, one can keep them in check so effectively that they will not get the upper hand before replanting time.

The small buds do not show anything abnormal; in fact, they are too young to show anything definite in regard to the petalage. A close examination failed to reveal any eating. At this time of the year there is considerable trouble from a variety of cutworm, which hides during the day and climbs up to the buds at night, eating a hole into the side of the bud to get at the young petals inside. Snails will do the same thing. For both of these pests we use a poison mash, made of bran, molasses and Paris green. Mix the bran with enough molasses to make a mash; then add enough Paris green to make the mixture deadly. Drop a little of this wherever you think the pests will find it readily, along the edgeboard and in convenient places between the plants. If you still have a night man on, instruct him to go through the house before daybreak with his lantern. He will be able to catch many of them at work on the buds. A. F. J. B.

THE CONVENTION GARDEN.

James B. Shea, deputy park commissioner at Boston, chairman of the committee on convention garden for the 1914 S. A. F. meeting, May 12 addressed the following letter to prospective exhibitors:

"The outdoor convention garden to be held in connection with the Society of American Florists' 1914 convention is now ready to plant, and will be under the direct supervision of the park department of Boston. The garden is to be located in one of the beauty spots of Boston, bordering on the Fens pond and within a few minutes' walk from Horticultural hall.

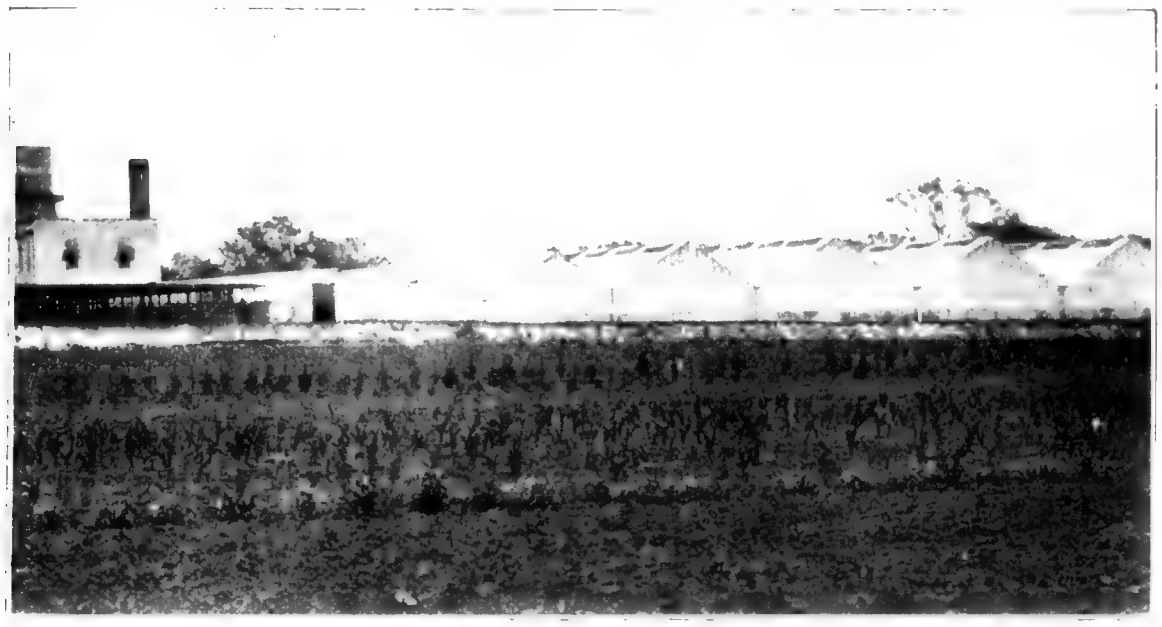
"This will be one of the greatest events for floriculture and horticulture ever held in the east and will attract enormous crowds of the right people. We cannot see how you can afford to miss this opportunity of displaying your specialties, more especially as the cost will be small and the exhibit will require no care on your part.

"There will be no charge for spaces, as the land is owned by the city of Boston, and its ordinances forbid this; but for preparation, care and maintenance a small charge will be made to cover cost of preparation and care throughout the summer. This will be 10 cents per square foot for spaces up to and including 2,500 square feet; from 2,500 square feet to 5,000 square feet at 8 cents per square foot, and over 5,000 square feet at 6 cents per square foot.

"We are enclosing a diagram of the lay-out (reproduced in The Review of April 9) and your preference for position will have every consideration. As the time is now short, an early decision is necessary for best results. The garden is all ready for trees, shrubs, vines, conifers and hardy herbaceous plants.

"For tender plants it will be safer to defer planting to May 20. Let us hear from you at once and we will be glad to do everything in our power for your success. All plants should be addressed, express prepaid, to Boston park department, Back Bay Fens, Boston, Mass., and marked "Convention Garden," care James B. Shea, and advise us of shipment through mail.

"Do not waste time on this, but help make the 1914 convention the greatest in history, and also reap the benefit of the large amount of advertising and sales that will come to you.



"Checks for the full amount of space must accompany the order and be drawn to James B. Shea, chairman."

WHO GETS TRADE PRICES?

When The Review receives a new subscription from someone whose connection with the trade is not known, the rule is to ascertain the prospective subscriber's status before entering the name on the mailing list—a form letter is sent, explaining that The Review is a trade paper only and asking information as to how the would-be subscriber is connected with the trade. Usually satisfactory information is furnished promptly; sometimes the not-to-be subscriber writes appreciatively of the paper's fairness in not grabbing the dollar from one who thought it a gardening journal, and now and then it develops that the purpose was only to obtain information of wholesale prices and sources of supply in the hope of cutting the local florist out of his legitimate retail profit. Though it is a well-known fact that practically all the firms that advertise in The Review will not sell at wholesale except to those of recognized standing in the trade, outsiders who seek to subscribe frequently claim to be buying at wholesale. Like this:

In reply to your notice I will say that I buy hundreds of plants and cut flowers from patrons of your paper, for my own gardens and houses, also for use in my hotel. I buy everything wholesale and for cash. I have received The Review indirectly anyway and will continue to do so. If you do not choose to accept my subscription, kindly refund my money.—W. S. Sherman, The Broadlands, Kansas City, Mo., May 7, 1914.

Of course The Review returned the money in this case. It is not for this paper to decide who is and who is not entitled to trade prices; that is up to the seller to determine on each individual order. But The Review hopes its subscribers will do their part in

Part of the Range of Furrow & Co., at Guthrie, Oklahoma.

In reply to your notice I will say that I buy hundreds of plants and cut flowers from patrons of your paper, for my own gardens and houses, also for use in my hotel. I buy everything wholesale and for cash. I have received The Review indirectly anyway and will continue to do so. If you do not choose to accept my subscription, kindly refund my money.—W. S. Sherman, The Broadlands, Kansas City, Mo., May 7, 1914.

Of course The Review returned the money in this case. It is not for this paper to decide who is and who is not entitled to trade prices; that is up to the seller to determine on each individual order. But The Review hopes its subscribers will do their part in keeping the paper out of the hands of those whose right to trade prices is open to question. Several cases have come up in which thoughtless florists have handed a copy of the paper to retail customers, or even attempted to subscribe for them. Recommend The Review to florists all you like, but to your retail customers recommend the Garden Magazine.

THE GLADIOLUS

CUT BLOOMS FOR MARKET.

"After the ground for gladioli has been thoroughly prepared by plowing and harrowing," said Maurice Fuld, in his recent article in the Country Gentleman, "make shallow furrows two and a half inches deep every three feet. The furrows may be from eight to sixteen inches wide. Set the bulbs, bottoms downward, two inches apart across the width of the furrow and repeat this every six inches, so that a single furrow 100 feet long contains from 800 to 1,600 bulbs, according to the width of the furrow.

"The planting should begin as early as the ground and weather will permit, and it is best to divide the stock of each individual sort into six equal parts, and make plantings a week apart, so as to extend the flowering season as much as possible. The average time necessary for a bulb to produce its flower is ninety days from the date of planting. Cover the bulbs from two to three inches, and mark each furrow with a label, stating plainly the name of the variety planted and the date of planting.

"Cultivation with a horse must frequently be resorted to; in fact, at no time should the ground be allowed to bake or become crusty. Cultivating can take place only between the rows.

"As soon as the first growth appears above the ground the young plants must be fed; pulverized sheep manure is the best all-round food for them. Apply it between the rows, just before a rain, if you can. Weeding between the stalks with a hoe is effective. This is all the attention and care that the gladioli require until they come to bloom.

"In cutting flowers, the following rules must be strictly observed: Always cut the flowers in the late afternoon; cut only stalks that show not more than two open flowers; never cut a stalk clear to the ground, but allow a full set of leaves to remain with the bulb, for that growth is essential to produce the new bulb; never plunge the cut spikes in water immediately after cutting, but let them lie in the sun for from fifteen to thirty minutes. This is known as 'softening,' and flowers thus treated and plunged in cool water afterward and placed in a cool spot overnight will last from two to three days longer and ship better than will flowers that are not softened.

"In packing flowers for express shipments observe the following rules: Never use flowers that have not been in water at least six hours; have a special box made of light wood, with partitions on the inside to hold each layer of flowers in its original place; always line the box with tissue paper; never pack flowers in a double layer; always turn the flowers upward and pack them just as closely as space will permit, for they should not move while in transit. Cleat down the lower parts of the stems so that the spikes cannot move; have your boxes made to fit a certain variety, for each variety packs differently."

EARTHWORMS IN SOIL.

I am growing Gladiolus America for summer cutting and would like to know if numerous angleworms in the soil will be injurious to the bulbs. When is the best time for taking the bulbs up after blooming? W. J. N.

The presence of earthworms will not harm your bulbs. The bulbs should not be lifted directly after flowering. Usually the early part of October is a suitable time for digging. C. W.

GOOD USE FOR VACANT LOTS.

In a solidly built up residential district of Chicago is nearly a block without a building on it. For a number of years it had the appearance of the ordinary vacant city lot, which, needless to say, is not a pleasing one. Then Mrs. C. F. Gunther, whose residence, as may be seen in the illustration, stands at one end of the block, leased the land and turned it into a park, so that the whole neighborhood might have the benefit. From the house, which stands at the corner of Thirty-sixth street, the tract runs along Michigan avenue to Thirty-sixth place. The grounds are in the charge of John Brezina, to whom the credit is due for its present fine appearance. The promotion of such work by florists and gardeners will do much to remove the present eyesores along the streets of our large cities and replace them with beautiful spots that are not only a source of pleasure in themselves but also a means of educating the public to a fuller appreciation and larger use of flowers and plants of all kinds.

AQUATIC GARDENING.

Its Peculiar Charm.

Up to date the weather has been unusually cold and the planting of aquatics has been delayed longer than usual. The hardier nymphæas, however, should be planted at once; a little cold will not harm them after this date. There is a wonderful charm attached to all forms of water gardening. Water in itself is a great attraction and it becomes still more charming when tastefully planted with nymphæas, nelumbiums and other aquatics. There has been a tremendous growth in aquatic gardening of late years, and it is in the power of the country florists to encourage and still further develop this growth. Many small growers have tanks, ponds, or even half barrels in which to indulge their love for water gardening, and there is no reason why their numbers cannot be quadrupled in the next two or three years.

Aquatics, especially nymphæas and nelumbiums, want full sun. They revel in the decayed vegetable mold found in natural pond bottoms, but also succeed splendidly in a compost of two-thirds fibrous loam and one-third cow manure. While they can be grown well in tubs of the diameter of ordinary oil barrels, they do vastly better in larger receptacles, a yard square and twelve to fifteen inches deep, made of plank or stout boards. This allows a better root run, finer foliage and more flowers. The soil in the barrels or boxes can be covered with two or three inches of clean sand. This prevents the compost from discoloring the water so much.

Good Varieties of Nymphæas.

While the hardy nymphæas are now making considerable growth, the planting of tender sorts should be delayed until we get settled warm weather; about June 1 is a good date. Nelumbiums like a deep bed of muck and only a few inches of water, to be seen at their best, but the nymphæas do well in deeper water. A few good varieties of hardy nymphæas are: N. odorata, the native white pond lily; N. odorata rosea, Cape Cod pond lily, clear pink, sweet scented; N. odorata sulphurea, sulphur yellow; N. odorata gigantea, large flowers, a vigorous grower, and N. Marliacea chromatella, bright yellow, fine. N. Marliacea ignea, deep carmine; N. M. rosea, rosy pink, and N. M. albida, pure white, are other beautiful varieties for the introduction of which we are indebted to that eminent Frenchman, M. Marliac. Laydekeri purpurata, rosy crimson, is another fine French variety. The tuberosa varieties are of robust habit. They prefer deep water and must have more room than the odorata and Marliacea varieties.

Among the day-blooming, tender nymphæas, the following are strictly first-class: N. William Stone, blue; Zanzibariensis, dark blue; Zanzibariensis rosea, rose; Mrs. C. W. Ward, deep pink; pulcherrima, pale blue. Where night bloomers are desired, a few good sorts are: N. Sturtevantii, which needs a hot summer to be seen at its best and comes in various shades; Devoniensis, red; dentata, pure white; dentata magnifica, pure white, large; Frank Trelease, crimson; Bissetti, rich rose-pink; Kewensis, light pink, and rubra rosea, rosy red.

Nelumbiums and Other Aquatics.

The nelumbiums can be grown in tubs or boxes, or planted out. To see them at their best, give them a deep bed of muck and they will produce wonderful leaves and flowers. They are now procurable in several colors. The old N. speciosum, or Egyptian sacred lotus, rosy pink, will grow with a reckless abandon in any suitable location. N. luteum, yellow, is common; it is wild in the west and south and is an easy doer. N. album grandiflorum, pure white, is a gem. If one or two specially choice sorts are wanted, N. Shiroman, with huge double white flowers; Pekinensis rubrum, rich rosy carmine, and Osiris, dark rose, will be found a grand trio.

In the way of miscellaneous aquatics the following are all good: Zizania aquatica, or wild rice; Typha latifolia, or cat-tails; Sagittaria Montevidensis, or arrowhead; Pontederia cordata, or pickerel weed; Pistia Stratiotes, or water lettuce; Eichhornia crassipes major, or water hyacinth; Cyperus Papyrus, or Egyptian paper plant; Aponogeton distachyum, or cape pond weed; Limanthemum Indicum, or water snowflake; Myriophyllum proserpinacoides, or parrot's feather; Limnocharis Humboldtii, or water poppy; Peltandra Virginica, or water arum; Acorus Japonicus variegatus, or variegated sweet flag, and Scirpus Tabernæmontanus zebrinus, a handsome ornamental rush. All the foregoing plants are of easy culture.

CALIFORNIA FIRM DISSOLVED.

On glancing at the two illustrations here presented, one of the first impressions received from the exterior view of the greenhouses is a suggestion of a semi-tropical climate, for in the foreground, near the roadside, stands a young but healthy specimen of Cocos plumosa, the favorite avenue palm in southern California. Until recently the whole property—the range of houses, the thirty acres of land and the nursery stock—belonged to the firm so widely known in the trade as Dieterich & Turner, of Los Angeles and Montebello, Cal. Now, however, there is a division of business interests and a division of ownership. As stated in the Los Angeles news-letter, in The Review of May 7, "Jacob Dieterich and Henry W. Turner, known as Dieterich & Turner, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Turner retains the large greenhouse range and all the cut flower and inside plant business. Mr. Dieterich will continue the nursery department at Montebello, in addition to the nursery business at Wall street, Los Angeles."

The firm of Dieterich & Turner was organized somewhere around 1908. Not long after that date the firm was referred to by The Review's Los Angeles correspondent as "a live concern, well worth watching." Later the concern not only proved itself to be worth watching, but rapidly became conspicuous enough so that it could scarcely fail to be watched; the business developed so fast as to command attention. Now that the two members of the firm have resolved to run separate establishments, the same correspondent remarks: "There is no fear that either end of the business will suffer, for each will be in capable hands."

The greenhouses seen in the illustration are 60½x300 and the total area of glass is in the neighborhood of 100,000 square feet. The other illustration shows a part of the interior of one of the rose houses. The firm specialized in the growing of roses, both plants and blooms, and aimed to be in the front rank not only in the quality of the stock grown in the standard varieties, but also in the introduction of desirable new sorts.

TEMPLIN'S PELARGONIUMS.

The sight of 50,000 pelargoniums, all potted up, covered with innumerable blooms, is one not to be met with every day, and is, therefore, the more striking. These pelargoniums, shown in the accompanying illustration, in one of the greenhouses of S. C. Templin, at Garrettsville, O., are not the old-fashioned kind, whose blooms were conspicuous by their absence, but the new ever-blooming Easter Greeting, which he holds in high esteem. The photograph, taken by the H. J. Alford Co., wholesale florists, of Garrettsville, does not indicate how striking was the effect; nor can it give any idea of the beauty and symmetry of the individual plants. The value of the plant to florists, however, lies in the fact that it is easy to grow and in its ever-blooming qualities, for it does not cease after it has come into full bloom for Easter, but continues on through the summer. It is as good for Memorial day as for Easter. Mr. Templin has great confidence in this new pelargonium, and has gone to the extent of erecting a large house especially for it.

LLEWELLYN OF OLEAN.

Regardless of occasional references in the masculine gender to Llewellyn, Florist, at Olean, N. Y., the man behind the guns in this concern is a woman, Mrs. E. A. Llewellyn. This, true to the doctrines promulgated by present-day suffragettes, militant and otherwise, has been no bar to her success in the greenhouse business. In 1899 she started with one house, 21x110 feet, and added another, 23x110, in 1902. There have since been many additions and improvements, until now Mrs. Llewellyn has a good-sized range, which, for appearance and quality of stock turned out, would not be easy to beat.

Mrs. Llewellyn gives as the prime reason for her success in the selling end the fact that she does not attempt to work her customers, but tries to work for them. This, she found, induced her patrons to work for her by bringing her new customers.

The foreman and grower at the range has been for the last two years William Tenney, and to him is due some of the credit for the good condition of the establishment and of the stock. Some of the stock may be seen in the illustrations on page 37, one of which shows the house of geraniums and another a house of carnations as they appeared this spring. The carnation house has in it at present 2,600 plants, from which have been cut so far 15,800 blooms, and there are prospects for as many more.

FIELD PLANTING.

Runners of Princess of Wales or any other single violets, if well rooted in flats or benches, can go outdoors at any time now. Choose, if possible, a cool, moist day in which to set them out. Allow twelve inches between the plants in the rows and twenty-four inches between the rows, for hand cultivation. The ground in which these violets are planted should be well manured and deeply spaded. Given these conditions and proper cultivation, the plants should be of ample size in the fall. Of course, most of their growth is made after the cool nights of August arrive.

Double violets are a little more delicate than singles and possess less vigor. Delay planting them out until a few days after the singles. They can be planted nine inches apart in the rows and the rows themselves can be eighteen inches apart. Some growers prefer to grow their doubles under glass all summer. This answers well where no other crop is grown and where the houses have movable sashes. Most growers, however, cannot afford to depend on violets alone, but grow a crop of vegetables for the summer, or sweet peas or even early mums before replanting.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Everybody is optimistic and the general opinion is that "the worst is over." There have been seven lean weeks, and according to tradition there should now be seven fat ones, including Memorial day and the month of roses and weddings. The outlook is surely brighter, and there should be a steady market until July.

American Beauties last Saturday were firm and sold at better prices than a week before. Some fine selected stock sold at $30 per hundred. There was a scarcity of this quality and, in fact, of nearly all kinds, with the possible exception of Killarney. Larger shipments are expected before the close of the present week if the sky continues clear and the warmer weather prevails.

There could not be finer carnations than those now reaching the New York market. Mrs. Ward is especially brilliant and commands the highest prices. Three dollars per hundred, however, was top for the best of them, and for anything ordinary half and less of this quotation was gladly accepted. Valley continues fairly steady, and lilies are scarce and higher. Nothing worth attention sold under $4 per hundred, and some long-stemmed stock rose as high as $8 per hundred. Outdoor valley is arriving, and some lilies from Florida.

In orchids, gigas alone commands a satisfactory figure, good blooms selling Saturday at $60 per hundred. Of Mossiæ there is an abnormal supply, and prices are down to $25 per hundred and under. There are few gardenias arriving and prices have doubled. The same may be said of callas. There is a great abundance of lilac, the south no longer being the only source of supply.

Summer is now advancing with rapid strides. In two weeks or less the ramblers will be in flower. The supply of tulips and daffodils is rapidly decreasing. Plenty of iris, gladioli, daisies, pansies, stocks, sweet peas and mignonette are arriving and apple blossoms, dogwood and forsythia are much in evidence.

George M. Stumpp Retires.

George M. Stumpp, the veteran retail florist at Fifty-eighth street and Fifth avenue, who has just celebrated his sixtieth birthday, sails June 2 for a five months' holiday in Europe, hunting and traveling near his old home, having earned by thirty-five years of service a well-merited rest.

Mr. Stumpp, as a fitting close to these years of devotion to his trade affairs, has presented to his son, George E. M. Stumpp, his entire business interests, which include the splendid store on Fifth avenue, one of the finest in this country. The transfer took place May 16. Mr. Stumpp retires with the best wishes of a host of friends and the esteem and confidence of all who know him. The son, who is 33 years of age, has spent his whole life in the business and is well equipped to carry it forward.

Various Notes.

The auction sales of palms, bedding plants and nursery stock are continued by the MacNiff Horticultural Co. Greater space for the patrons has been found necessary and some days the sales have continued until 7 o'clock in the evening. Prices are quite satisfactory. A large shipment of bay trees from Belgium has just arrived.

Superintendent Plumb, of the Panama-Pacific exposition, has been busy visiting the large commercial and private floricultural establishments of this section and is greatly pleased with his reception and the outlook for eastern exhibits. He will not take up his residence in San Francisco until October.

On leaving their old home at Whitestone for the new residence at Patchogue, L. I., Mr. and Mrs. John Donaldson gave a farewell dinner Friday evening, May 15, to thirty of their friends. Among the guests were John Young, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Traendly, Mr. and Mrs. Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Fenrich and Mr. and Mrs. John Miesem.

C. H. Allender, of the Cloche Co., London, England, sailed Saturday, May 16, for New York and will make a canvass of the United States, selling French garden sundries. Letters may be sent him, care of A. T. Boddington.

Byron Blake, of Rochester, has been east on a visit to his son, of Bonnet & Blake, Brooklyn.

The sympathy of the trade is extended Mr. Bonnet in the loss of his sister last week at Providence, R. I.

Herman Weiss is now located in his new store at 112 West Twenty-eighth street.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Kervan are home from Florida after a delightful winter in the sunny south.

Shipments of lilies and gladioli from Florida are being received in perfect condition by A. L. Young & Co.

The joint committee of members of the New York Horticultural Society and the New York Florists' Club met at the Grand Central Palace Monday, May 11, and commenced work on the schedule of the annual show for 1915. The members of the committee from the Florists' Club are F. R. Pierson, chairman, and Messrs. Duckham, Nash, Newbold, Joseph Manda, Traendly, Ebel, Atkins and Wallace Pierson. The guarantee fund is already $1,500.

Theodore A. Havemeyer has been elected president of the New York Horticultural Society.

William Tricker, of Arlington, N. J., exhibited at Bronx Park Saturday, May 9, a new type of perfect flowering nymphæa, five to six inches in diameter, and some fine stock of double-flowering Japanese cherry. James Stewart's display of calceolarias and pelargoniums was also noteworthy.

The fourteen orchid houses of the Julius Roehrs Co., at Rutherford, are 20x150, instead of 20x50, as incorrectly stated in last week's issue.

J. Austin Shaw.

The 5-story building on the southeast corner of Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street has been purchased by Myer Gottlieb, who runs a retail store under the name of Myer in the building.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The rainy spell of the last two weeks has depressed business to a marked degree. There has been a perceptible falling off in trade, even in funeral work. Business has been good, however, on Saturdays, owing to the special sales, Mothers' day trade and the regular week-end volume of business. In this part of the state we have had so little sunshine that there has been a scarcity of flowers of all kinds. Quantities of roses have been coming from the east and south, but this immediate market has been barren, with the exception of snapdragons, carnations and a few sweet peas and tulips. The great crop of carnations was cut for Mothers' day, so that last week the quality of these flowers was only fair. Roses of all kinds are good. Sweet peas are getting better right along, with an improvement in the length of stem. The violet season has closed entirely, but the trade is still asking for them. Southern lilacs are unusually good and bring a fancy price. Valley is getting somewhat stronger and larger in size. Narcissus poeticus is abundant. Yellow daisies, marguerites, snapdragons, baby gladioli, calendulas, pansies and forget-me-nots are used in combination with other flowers for variety. Bedding plants are beginning to sell now, as are also pansy plants, English daisies, rose bushes and all nursery stock and perennials.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sangster have returned from Atlanta, Ga., where they have been attending the Shriners' convention. Mr. Sangster reports Mothers' day business good.

Pansy beds and new sward are the latest improvements in Lafayette square by the city. A number of formal standard catalpa trees have helped to beautify this newly remodeled square, which will be most attractive this summer.

Determined to check the ravages of the tent-caterpillar, a pest responsible for damage to fruit and shade trees amounting to thousands of dollars every year, Calvin J. Hudson, commissioner of agriculture, issued a formal order May 13 requiring all owners or persons in possession of trees or plants infested by tent-caterpillars to destroy the nests before June 1. The order is issued under the authority of the agricultural law, and failure to comply with its requirements is punishable as a misdemeanor.

Galley Bros., of Gardenville, are doing a big business in geraniums this spring, having sold great quantities already. They put up a new range last fall and it was filled with geraniums, to keep pace with their ever-growing business. About twenty-five persons are now employed packing pansies, forget-me-nots and perennials for market.

The Lenox Flower Shop had a unique and amusing window display last week. It was the opening day of the baseball season, May 11, and the display consisted of a baseball diamond with nine miniature players, whose faces were decidedly funny. Then there was the backstop with its advertising billboard, and on another fence was the official score. Baseball bats, catching gloves, masks, etc., were thrown here and there. Green sheet moss covered the whole field. The display was an innovation among the florists here, and was an unusual combination, at once humorous and artistic.

All the leading florists found Mothers' day trade good and much larger than that of last year.

W. J. Palmer & Son report that they were busy both May 9 and 10. Their branch store was also rushed with special work. They are showing some excellent blue and white lupines, and some Canterbury bells grown at their greenhouses in Lancaster.

S. A. Anderson did a much bigger business this year than last. Carnations were completely sold out, and roses, tulips and sweet peas sold well also. The special Mothers' day window helped to increase trade. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have returned from their fishing trip in Michigan. At Anderson's Elmwood avenue store, where Joseph Cannon and Joseph Streit hold sway, business was fine and trade is increasing right along.

C. B. Schisler, of Williamsville, has a new motor car, which greatly facilitates the marketing of his goods.

E. C. A.

The alarm clock went off at four o'clock in the morning.

"I fooled you that toime," said Mike with a grin, "for I wasn't aslape at all."

The florist fools himself who thinks there is any way of selling goods in the trade more effective than advertising in The Review. Also, it's the most inexpensive way in proportion to results.

"We are completely sold out and have had to send money back. The Review is, without doubt, the best advertising medium in the trade."—J. C. RENNISON CO., Sioux City, Ia.

Review readers are not asleep. Note this:

"Please tell us confidentially what you think of —— ——. Why doesn't he advertise in The Review if he is O. K.?"—MILLER FLORAL CO., Farmington, Utah.

The alarm clock rings in The Review office at 4 o'clock (p.m., not a.m.) every Tuesday. It is to let everybody know advertising forms close for that week's issue in just sixty minutes.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. J. W. Glenn.

Mrs. Glenn, wife of J. W. Glenn, of Kittanning, Pa., died on Thursday, May 14. Though she had been an invalid for about a year, her death was unexpected, as her illness did not assume a serious aspect until a few hours before she passed away. The funeral services were held on Saturday, May 16, at the Kittanning Episcopal church.

HEAD LETTUCE IN OHIO.

For five years, off and on, I have been taking your advice as given through the columns of The Review. Often you talk kindly, like a Dutch uncle, and sometimes mildly criticise, like an anxious dad, but I like the paper all the time. However, when C. W. advises that we plant head lettuce in the northern part of Ohio I can not agree. I am willing to admit that usually C. W. is "all to the mustard," but it is a certainty that he is not acquainted with the conditions along the Great Lakes. If he will come to the lake country and grow head lettuce through a cloudy December I can promise him a large and interested gathering of people anxious to see how he does it. Appreciating that C. W. is a good grower, I think he merely forgets occasionally the size of the United States, the varied climate and the differing market tastes.

Perry, O. Wm. Winter.

CUCUMBERS GROWING POORLY.

I transplanted some cucumber plants about twenty days ago. Some of them have not started new roots and have not grown over two inches. Please tell me the cause. F. P.

With cucumbers, provided your plants were healthy, soil suitable and temperature all right, it must be a question of insufficient moisture at the root, or in the atmosphere, or both. Cucumbers at this season require a minimum temperature of 65 degrees. While they will grow even 10 degrees cooler, growth will be slow. It is possible you are trying to grow your plants too cool. They must have a good heat and a moist atmosphere. You do not say whether you transplanted from flats or pots. If from the former there always is more or less danger of the roots becoming injured and, as a consequence, the plants will start more slowly.

C. W.

CUKES TO FOLLOW TOMATOES.

I followed my last crop of lettuce with tomatoes, which will be through bearing about the middle of July. Could I follow the tomatoes with cucumbers, to be through bearing about November 15? What is the best variety? J. L. V.

Start the cucumbers and have them in 4-inch pots ready to plant as soon as the tomatoes are cleared, the house thoroughly fumigated and the soil sufficiently enriched for the next crop. A good strain of Arlington White Spine cucumber is the best for your purpose. About all seedsmen carry a special strain suitable for forcing. You can easily clear your cucumber crop by November 15 or 20, provided you start the plants as suggested. C. W.

Tremont, O.—The Horn Flower Co. could not supply sufficient carnations for Mothers' day and had a run on plants.

Dayton, O.—Chas. W. Kiefer, who started in business here four years ago, finds his growing business demands the addition of some glass each year.

...NEWS NOTES...

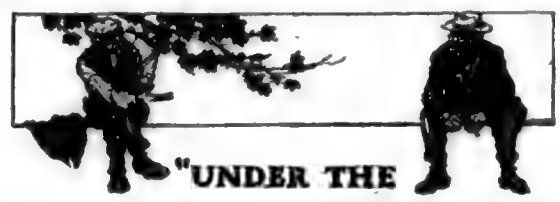
La Fayette, Ind.—Frank Brodhecker has taken a position as florist at the State Soldiers' Home.

Malta, O.—W. C. Scovell says business so far this spring has been away ahead of any previous year, with the outlook indicating an exceptionally heavy trade for the next few weeks.

Georgetown, Ont.—C. W. Papst started in the business in a smaH way last year, with one house, but has done so well that he is planning expansion. He contemplates making something of a specialty of ferns.

Danville, Ill.—At the Florists' Club meeting May 12 at the establishment of Smiths, the Florists, a resolution was submitted favoring the closing of all greenhouses and flower stores on Sunday. It was tabled until the next meeting.

Millbury, Mass.—Miss Winifred Dallachie, daughter of A. G. Dallachie, has been appointed supervisor of the public school children's garden work for the coming year. Miss Dallachie's work in her father's establishment well fits her for the position.



Houston, Tex.—The state flower show, which was decided upon at the State Florists' Association meeting at Waco, will be held here about the middle of November, according to President Robert C. Kerr. The show will last three days and will be held after the No-Tsu-Oh week.

Kenton, O.—After the remodeling of the store, the addition of a design room and the installation of a new refrigerator, the Kenton Floral Nursery held its spring opening April 25. An orchestra and the presentation of a carnation to each visitor attracted a large attendance. John Sabransky, the proprietor, estimated it, from the flowers given out, at 2,500.

Richmond, Ind.—John Evans, of the Quaker City Machine Co., was pleased this week to receive an order for Challenge ventilating machines for the greenhouses at the Panama-California Exposition, to be held at San Diego in 1915. He says he has supplied ventilating apparatus for every exposition from that held at Cincinnati up to the present time.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—W. J. & M. S. Vesey have purchased the 58-acre tract of land belonging to A. S. Elzey, at the junction of the Huntington road and the Wabash Valley Traction Co. lines. According to present plans, the firm will erect a range of over 400,000 feet of glass on the new property. The houses, it is said, will be larger than any of those in the present establishment and the completed range the largest in northern Indiana.

Princeton, Ill.—A number of greenhousemen of the vicinity visited the W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co. last week, to see the effects of the hail storm of May 5. Twenty-five glaziers were at work under the supervision of Maxwell & Muno, of Chicago. The sale of cut flowers and pot plants is going on as rapidly as ever. George H. Jennings, the foreman, is looking for a big cut of roses and carnations for Memorial day.

Wilson Once Trimmed Taft.

The shepherds' crooks carried at the latest wedding of a daughter of President Wilson were trimmed with Taft roses. Now, was that getting anybody's goat?

Why Is a Florist?

A shy young man had been calling on the sweetest girl in the world for many moons, but, as he was bashful, his suit progressed slowly. Finally she decided it was up to her to start something; so the next time he called she pointed to the rose in his buttonhole and said: "I'll give you a kiss for that rose."

A crimson flush overspread his countenance, but the exchange was made after some hesitation on his part. Then he grabbed his hat and started to leave the room.

"Why, where are you going?" she asked in surprise.

"To the—er—florist for more roses," he called from the front door.—San Antonio Express.

Where Was Eve?

It was our first year in the new place, the 16-foot sign, "Eden Nurseries," had just been put in place on the roof, and I was having the usual experience of one who tries to take care of the crops, answer the phone, wait on local customers and attend to rush shipping orders all at the same time, when a neighbor's boy, who was cross-eyed and not overly bright, came on the scene.

"I guess I'll have to get a wife," I said jokingly, wiping the sweat off my brow, after a run of interruptions.

"I see you've got a sign up for one," he replied.

"How's that?" I asked.

"Why, haven't you got a sign up that you need a nurse, or something?"

"Various Notes."

Henry Jones was cleaning his gun last Saturday, when he shot himself in the greenhouse.

John Driver, who runs the motor truck of the New Floral Co., was seriously injured yesterday in a collision between Chicago and Milwaukee.

Joseph Smith then gave a lecture on the greenhouse gutter.

Taking advantage of the present Mexican situation, Edward Brown decorated his window with a cannon this week, thereby attracting much attention.

H. F. White is redecorating his interior and will put in a new front. His opening will take place in two weeks.

...NEWS NOTES...

Maquoketa, Ia.—Mrs. Annie Odgers Thomas has sold her business, operated under the name of the Maquoketa Greenhouse, and discontinued business.

Fulton, Ill.—Albert Wiersema and George Dykema have installed the large steam boiler which is to heat their greenhouse, now in the course of erection.

Aiken, S. C.—E. E. Hite, of the Hite Floral Co., recently decorated the First church more elaborately than for any wedding in years and thereby added greatly to his prestige.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—James E. Weir, of 149 Eighty-third street, Augustus M. Dauernheim and Arthur W. Hawkins have incorporated under the name of J. E. Weir & Co., with a capitalization of $60,000.

Baltimore, Md.—The special sale of rose bushes and pansy plants at the retail store of J. Bolgiano & Son, May 11, was a record-breaker, according to members of the firm; the sales, say they, exceeded those of any one day since the fire of 1904.

Sherman, N. Y.—Allen H. Wilcox has Mrs. Wilcox as his chief assistant in operating the Sherman Greenhouses. He has a souvenir postcard, made at Easter, that shows himself, Mrs. Wilcox and their daughters, Erma and Clara, in one of their houses of pot plants.

Dayton, O.—Warren G. Matthews reported the sale of 12,000 carnations the Saturday before Mothers' day and of about half that number Sunday. Besides cleaning up carnations, the Mothers' day trade took many pot plants, and lilac was a general favorite.

Malta, O.—Three pods from a large flowered cyclamen at W. C. Scovell's each measured seven-eighths of an inch in diameter. The seven pods on the plant yielded, when cleaned recently, over 500 seeds. The largest held 107 seeds. Mr. Scovell says this is the largest he ever had. His business for the week ending with Mothers' day was the heaviest in his experience.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The Chattanooga Floral Co., which was recently incorporated by J. L. Lindsey, C. W. Duffy, Carl Burke, J. R. Huff and F. Giddings, has bought out the George B. Haeger Floral Co. and is erecting several thousand feet of glass in addition. Carl Burke is secretary and manager. Flowers of all colors sold well for Mothers' day, as a result of advertising all varieties instead of white carnations only.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—The Hopkinsville Kentuckian of May 14 published a sketch of over a column in length with Thos. L. Metcalfe as the subject. It was the eighth in a series of biographical sketches on "Men in Mind in Hopkinsville," and told of Mr. Metcalfe's success as a newspaper publisher, laundryman and florist. He has now branches in Madison, Ky., and Jackson, Clarksville and Union City, Tenn., and laundries also in some of these towns. Mr. Metcalfe recently resigned as park commissioner, only to receive the office of public school trustee by two-thirds of the votes.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1914: President, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; vice-president, Patrick Welch, Boston; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THE backward spring has been beneficial in nearly all departments of the trade.

THERE is the usual big spring demand for good Boston ferns in sizes from 4-inch up.

IF you are in a hurry, use a printed letter-head; don't make the man stop to identify you.

THERE will be no scarcity of cut gladioli this season unless the weather is the worst imaginable.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

IF flower stores get to featuring artificial wreaths and flowers for Memorial day, how long will it be, after the demand is created, before the department stores step in and kill the business?

IF The Review were asked to point out an especially good opportunity in the trade the one cited would be geranium growing somewhere in the middle west. There is the chance to build a big business on the specialty basis.

GEORGE SYKES, western manager for the Lord & Burnham Co., comments on the apparent fact that Minnesota is taking the lead in teaching floriculture in the public schools. He says his company now has eight contracts for greenhouses for Minnesota high schools, to be used for instruction purposes.

"ALWAYS RELIABLE."

Business dealings never can be wholly free from reason for complaint, and where the commodity is a perishable crop the opportunities for dissatisfaction are multiplied. Consequently it has been the constant effort of The Review to see that those who use its advertising columns are of the strictest business integrity; the paper has aimed to do, and to see that its advertisers are those who do, all that is humanly possible to insure satisfactory service for its subscribers. Therefore such letters as the following are received with thanks:

In renewing my subscription I want to say that we have bought a great deal of stock through advertisements in The Review and always have found those who advertised in The Review perfectly reliable.—Allen H. Wilcox, proprietor Sherman Greenhouses, Sherman, N. Y., May 11, 1914.

There are two reasons why it pays particularly well to advertise in The Review: One reason is that The Review's circulation, although it covers practically the whole trade, has not been forced by the use of solicitors, premiums, and taking a dollar wherever it could be had; and the other reason is that the buyers know that no advertiser can long make use of this paper's space unless he keeps faith with its readers.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Reports as to last week's market vary more than usually is the case. It is the general report that growers cut comparatively little, but some of the wholesale houses appear to have had more than their ordinary share of the orders. While the market was lightly supplied, there was enough stock so that everyone could be taken care of; any wholesaler who was short could buy for his orders. Prices ruled considerably in advance of those that ordinarily prevail at the middle of May. Some houses report that the unusually good prices more than compensated for the light supply, giving them a better total of sales than ordinarily can be reached at this season, but others say the advance in prices did not make up for the falling off in supply. Keen observers say that all that saved the market going to pieces last week was the fact that the peonies are several days late this year, practically none having gone into storage prior to May 18.

The present week opened with a considerable increase in supply and an unusually light demand for a Monday. Ordinarily Monday is one of the most active days in the week. If that proves to be the case this week, there will certainly be an accumulation of stock to be worked off Saturday. Peonies are coming in heavily. Thus far the stock all comes from southern Illinois, or southern Indiana, but reports indicate that a few days of warm weather will enable the growers in the central part of the state to begin shipping. There will not be so many peonies as usual in cold storage for Memorial day, but there are few fears of any shortage. Orders are coming in heavily. Apparently the peony will be more freely used this Memorial day than ever before.

The principal change in the market situation is on carnations. There were enough for all who were willing to pay the price last week, and this week the supply has so increased that prices have fallen sharply, the demand being nothing like what it was just before or just after Mothers' day. Numerous growers say they will be in full crop for Memorial day if the present bright, springlike weather holds. Wholesalers are beginning to fear that the high prices charged for Mothers' day will have a bad effect on the demand for carnations for Memorial day. A big business can be handled and unless orders come in more freely than has been the case thus far there will be a break in prices.

Roses are beginning to feel the effect of easing conditions in other departments. There have been about enough roses right along, but they have sold particularly well because other flowers were scarce. Now that other stock is coming in more freely the call for roses is easing up. There is plenty of fine stock. Beauties are not especially good, nor are they in special request. The best stock sells fairly well, but the low grades this week must be jobbed to move them.

There has been an improved call for valley and daisies have sprung into favor. Moderate supplies of cattleyas suffice for the demand. Gladioli are everywhere, not in large quantities, but plenty for the demand. Bulbous stock is limited to outdoor tulips. The Parrots sell well. Sweet peas are not the important item they were a few weeks ago. While a few growers still pick in quantity, the general supply is much reduced and the quality of most of the stock is only medium. Peas still sell well, as there is no other flower at present competing sharply for the corsage trade, which increases each year. Snapdragon has fallen back; the quality also is off with most of the growers. Spanish iris is about gone; nobody wants the outdoor irises. Lilies are not so plentiful as they were, but are more than equal to the demand. Smilax is scarce. Asparagus strings so seldom are available that there is scarcely any call. Southern dagger ferns of the new crop are offered in quantity at low prices, but most buyers prefer to pay the extra money for the fancy ferns from storage; this market does not like dagger ferns.

in which it was charged that the rate of 40 cents a ton, applicable from Galewood, Ill., to Morton Grove, Ill., on interstate shipments of coal received from connecting lines at the former point, was discriminatory.

This has been the biggest season the company ever has had on young stock, in spite of the fact that the usual quantity of carnation cuttings was not available for sale. The young rose stock was extra good and a larger business than usual has been done in this department. There were several orders that ran into thousands of dollars, but the Cudahy order holds the record. Mums are now moving well.

If you want a line on the real situation in the coal trade, watch the procession of fuel salesmen.

Various Notes.

At the store of the E. C. Amling Co. it is reported that the Weiss & Meyer Co., Maywood, last week decided to at once erect three more houses, each 34x375, to be planted with Beauties.

The vacant square bounded by Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth streets, Ellis avenue and Drexel boulevard, long held by the Field estate, last week passed into the hands of Sherman T. Cooper, a builder, who plans its improvement. It is the finest location in Chicago for a high-class florist.

Last week George Wienhoeber and an assistant went to Battle Creek with the flowers for the C. W. Post funeral.

The death, May 12, at Ocean Park, Cal., of an old-time Chicago florist, the senior partner of McDougal & Neuman, is reported by A. C. Spencer. Mr. McDougal went to California in 1906, after having for some years conducted a store on Milwaukee avenue. He was employed by a Los Angeles department store and fell dead while on the street. He leaves a wife, but there is no information as to children. The funeral was held May 15.

John Zech says one of the items that will be in large supply for Memorial day will be sweet peas.

After having been delayed by strikes in the building trades, the Ickes-Braun Mill Co. started its machinery May 20, only a few days behind the schedule laid out when contracts were let.

One of the big rooms on the fifth floor of the Western Cold Storage Warehouse has been rented jointly by Kyle & Foerster and Klehm's Nurseries, for two months, for handling peonies. The first lot of stock went in May 18. For the third season, the Klehm peonies will not be bunched this year, but stored loose and sold sorted and counted like roses.

Burglars entered the store of Anton R. Belmont, 704 South Racine avenue, last week. Mr. Belmont handles talking machines as a side line and four of them were stolen.

E. E. Pieser points out that the southern crop of peonies was all in storage at this date last year, while this season the cut had only just begun to move freely May 18. He thinks the lateness of the crop assures good quality this year.

F. C. Mendonza, 356 East Forty-third street, expects to go to California next month, to visit his family, who are in Los Angeles.

This week Zech & Mann are completing their first year in their present quarters. The increase in their business has again demonstrated that an improvement in facilities usually results in an immediate increase in patronage.

John Freely recently purchased the store at 4035 West Madison street from J. W. Walters. The name is the West End Floral Co.

The second anniversary of the opening of their doors was celebrated May 13 by Erne & Klingel. They have worked hard but have succeeded and start their third year with an excellent business.

B. Zima is back at his old location, 3053 West Twenty-second street, having purchased the store from Max Fink. Mr. Zima is having the store remodeled and enlarged.

In May Wietor Bros. always do a large business in shipping chrysanthemum cuttings and they report the regular volume of business in spite of the unusually large quantity of young stock in the country this year.

The Cook County Florists' Association meets May 21, at the Tavern.

A heavy advertising campaign in the leading Chicago daily and Sunday paper has been the means of greatly increasing the business of the W. W. Barnard Co.

The first young Beauties of the season were cut at Peter Reinberg's last week.

At the headquarters of the Chicago Carnation Co. it is reported that Pyfer & Olsem opened a retail store at Wilmette, May 16. The location is on Railroad street, opposite the Northwestern depot. Wm. Pantly is in charge, assisted by Miss Jennings, who has given up her own retail business there.

Business has been so good with the E. Wienhoeber Co. that a third Bell telephone recently was put in, all Superior 610, no switchboard.

At the old Muir stand at 3530 Michigan avenue the J. F. Kidwell Co. has completed a thorough redecorating and a new electric sign gleams down the boulevard at night. The business there has been good of late.

A feature of A. L. Vaughan's additional facilities, made possible by the remodeling of the building, will be a new 18-foot cold room under the sidewalk for the storage of carnations. It will be zinc lined, cooled by an air-shaft.

Memorial day never has amounted to much with the Fleischman Floral Co., but George Wienhoeber has watched the business increase elsewhere until he has concluded to try to educate the better class of flower buyers to send wreaths to the cemetery May 30. He will push a wreath at $5, made of magnolia leaves, trimmed with a couple of little silk flags and a few flowers. He does not believe in the use of artificial flowers, even for cemetery wreaths.

J. H. McNeilly, the Sixty-third street confectioner-florist, claims the championship as a Boston fern salesman. His specialty is 4-inch plants retailed at 35 cents, which he picks up at 25 cents. He says his turnover is 2,000 Bostons the first month of spring weather.

That this season's coal bill will foot up $700 more than in the preceding year John Sinner attributes to not going over the roofs last fall with the putty bulb. Sinner Bros. this season will use about twenty-five cars, principally Pocahontas. Two cars were lost in the winter, when the coal in the shed caught fire and all had to be removed, a two weeks' job. Some of the stock in adjoining rose and carnation houses was injured by the fumes.

The ladies' society that conducts the Mothers' day sale at Jackson, Miss., used white roses this year, according to Miss McNulty, of Peter Reinberg's, who adds that the roses were supplied through a Jackson florist.

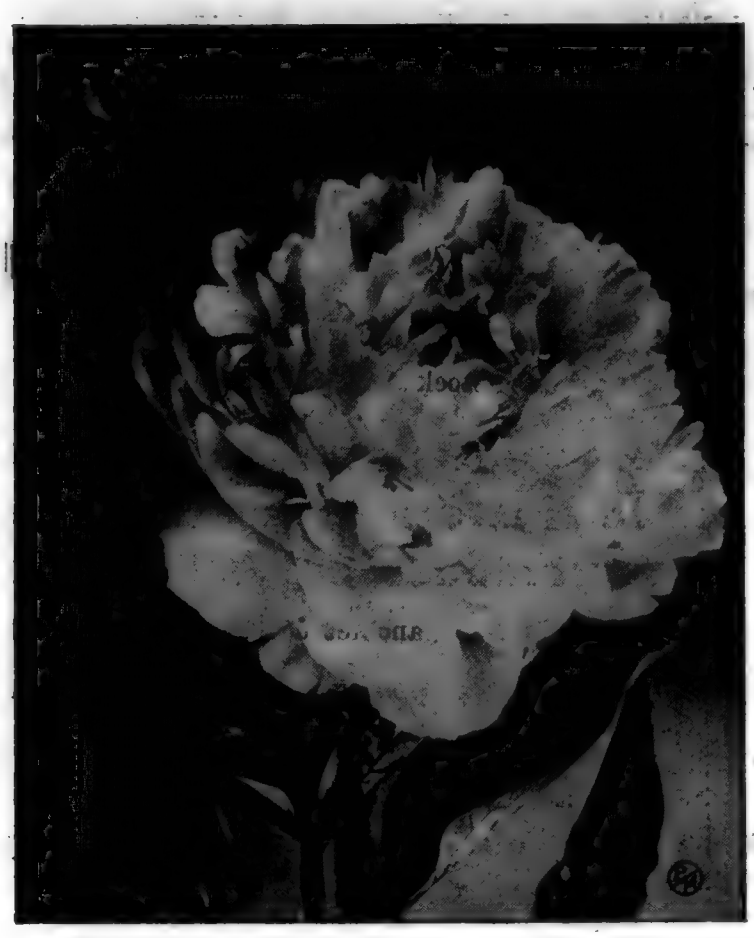
PHILADELPHIA.

The Eastern Market.

The supply of flowers is heavy, the quality very good for the season. Business keeps up fairly well, with prices low. The difference between fine and ordinary stock is marked. For instance, eastern Beauties, new crop Kaiserins, Russell and Mock roses sell fairly well at excellent prices, as do choice orchids, valley, sweet peas and carnations, while the ordinary grades of stock go begging a buyer at extremely low figures. Peonies are becoming more plentiful, southern stock. Double cornflower has arrived; it brings surprising money. Baby gladioli are plentiful and near-by dagger ferns have come. Sweet peas have shortened in numbers decidedly; many of the growers have finished cutting from their winter crops, while others might as well have finished, so much has the quality retrograded. There is outdoor valley. The Easter lily conditions have improved a little. If only the growers would remember not to bring in their lilies for three weeks after Easter! There are always enough belated pot lilies to supply the market for at least three weeks after the holiday; it is a time when they are little used anyhow.



Indications point to a heavy supply of good quality flowers for Memorial day, with part but by no means all of the local peony crop in bloom.

Nemesia

There was a notable conference addressed by eminent speakers at the Woman's Horticultural College at Ambler, Pa., May 16. Mrs. Francis King was among the speakers, as were Bertrand H. Farr, peony expert of Reading, Pa., and Walter P. Stokes, seeds specialist of this city. Fully 250 women were present and took a keen interest in the meeting. Mr. Stokes told his audience of several interesting plants little known in this country. Among them he mentioned nemesia, described as a beautiful pot plant grown to some extent in England. Mr. Stokes told his hearers that should any of them wish to try a crop of nemesia they Salesmanship.

Some go to Sheldon; some carry out their own original ideas. By chance Phil received an interesting lesson the other day. It happened quite accidentally and was never intended for publication, but it was so good that it really ought not to be lost. It happened in this wise: David Colflesh was piloting a caller through the greenhouses. Quite naturally the chat fell into selling the product, Mr. Colflesh's part of the work of his firm. He said: "There is no credit in selling flowers that are better than other people's, or in selling something that no one else has; anybody can do that. The credit lies in being able to sell something of only average quality in the face of keen competition. I always feel that it is like a game of football, particularly when the market is bad. Making a sale is like scoring, and every time you score it encourages you to try harder to score again. In the chrysanthemum season it is necessary to have your flowers at the first place not later than 7 a. m. and you must work hard to sell them all, because when you get home there is a bigger lot likely to be ready for tomorrow. I really think the grower has an advantage over the commission man (how this will surprise the great Sam!) and that his customers will wait for him in preference to ordering elsewhere if he treats them fairly."

Perhaps the commission man would not have displaced the grower had the latter had many such able salesmen as Mr. Colflesh.

May Tulips.

There was a really beautiful display of Darwin, cottage and breeder tulips in the show windows and show room of Henry F. Michell Co. May 14 and 15. One window, showing the master hand of Philip Freud, was resplendent with rich tulip color, while the store for half its length was ablaze with scarlet, pink and yellow. The private gardeners did their best, all constituents of the house. The people thronged there to admire.

Various Notes.

The flower market held for charity in Rittenhouse Square May 20 attracted wide attention. J. J. Habermehl's Sons had the decoration, which included the erection of a dozen large booths made of awning material, and the general care of the grounds. It is proposed to make this an annual affair.

John Wilson, formerly with J. J. Habermehl's Sons, is a notable visitor of the week. Mr. Wilson now is manager for the West View Floral Co., 105 Peachtree street, Atlanta, Ga., to which Raymond Brunswick, discussing the advance in the prices of white carnations for Mothers' day, said he could not see why the florists' business should be an exception to the laws that control other business. Supply and demand govern in the end.

Chas. E. Meehan believes that the popularity of Mothers' day as a flower day is increasing and will continue to increase. Everyone can help the day and increase business by encouraging the general use of flowers.

George Auegle, manager of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., believes that with the support of national approval, as voiced by Congress this year, Mothers' day will grow.

A prominent retailer says that Mothers' day has ceased to interest him; the high prices of white carnations caused him to discourage their use.

Founder's day was celebrated at the Girard College May 20. It is a great horticultural event of Charles W. Cox's floral year.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The usual spring oversupply of cut stock is decreasing, and another week will find the supply again at normal. Business has been better than usual for this season of the year. Nearly all the stock in the wholesale market has been moved, but prices have been rather low, considering the quality. Iris and other spring flowers are beginning to come in. Lilacs are over, except a few double-flowering varieties. The present outlook is for a favorable crop of peonies for Memorial day, of which a ready sale is assured. Gladioli are beginning to be seen in quantity, but are not moving as would be expected. Sweet peas are getting shorter stems, due to the warm weather, but the flowers remain good. Roses and carnations, while still of good quality, have considerably decreased in quantity, which, no doubt, is the reason that few were left on the wholesalers' hands. Lilies remain plentiful, with a poor demand, even at a low figure.

The annual spring Flower Mart was held May 12 at the base of the Washington monument, on Mount Vernon place, under the auspices of the Woman's Civic League. The proceeds went to the fund to increase gardening throughout the city. The local florists were well represented and were well pleased with the amount of trade received. All the booths were well arranged and as the day was bright, they presented a beautiful sight for the public to gaze upon.

The booth of E. A. Seidewitz was awarded the gold cup for the best display. A large number of potted ferns and seasonable plants and cut flowers were artistically arranged. Mr. Seidewitz was in charge and kept things moving.

Samuel Feast & Sons' display was quite worthy of mention. The booth was arranged in the style of a pagoda. A large centerpiece of potted hydrangeas, Azalea amœna and ferns formed an attractive arrangement. On each of the four corners were large wistaria plants in flower, around which plants of the above-named varieties formed a base. On each of the four columns a large specimen fern was set. Large quantities of seasonable cut flowers were also on display, chief among which were some exceedingly good Darwin tulips of varied colors.

Halliday Bros. also had a well arranged stand. Large vases of Beauties were the feature, along with some fine pink snapdragon in fancy vases. Ferns and potted pink geraniums formed the plant decorations. This booth was shaded with yellow and the light shining through gave the plants and cut flowers a peculiar tint, which was much admired.

John Cook's booth was a symphony in pink. Large baskets filled with lilacs, tulips and pink snapdragon were the feature of this display.

The stand of Pierce & Co. was filled with pansy plants in decorated baskets and English daisies in the same style. Some miniature old-fashioned bouquets with lace background and composed of a rose surrounded with sweet peas were the feature, along with some tastefully arranged small baskets of cut flowers.

Mrs. Schuler Thomas' stand was covered with artificial oak branches, which created a rustic effect. The young ladies in charge of this booth were costumed as German peasant girls. Some fine red gladioli were on sale here.

George Cook had some good potted geraniums and rose plants, which moved well.

James Hamilton and Isaac H. Moss both had large displays of bay trees, conifers and other nursery stock, which were worthy of mention.

Nearly all the exhibitors had sample window boxes on display, some of which found a ready sale, others serving to show how well filled boxes of this style could be used in decorating. Many orders were secured from this arrangement. The affair was a most successful one and is assured of a greater future. The enterprise is a commendable one and should be made a fixed affair, the same as fall or spring trade exhibitions, for nothing promotes the trade any better than a well arranged display of cut flowers and plants where the public may view it, especially if there is no charge for so doing.

The Market.

The market during the last week has been rather unstable, at least as far as cut flowers are concerned. Carnations during the latter part of the week were scarce, but the quality was good. Roses are not plentiful, and snapdragons are playing out. Sweet peas continue to come in liberal quantities. The weather has been cool, and a deluge of rain fell early in the week, doing considerable damage. A light frost occurred on several nights, emphasizing the warning of ing business in this line, due in a great measure to the city beautiful campaign which is being conducted by the Art Museum. This has awakened the entire town, and particularly the younger people, to a realization of how simple it is to beautify homes and property through the judicious use of a few bedding plants and a little shrubbery. Florists here are doing all in their power to coöperate with this city beautiful campaign. One prominent local florist is sending out thousands of copies of a beautiful spring planting folder, which is a real work of art. The wording of it makes a special appeal to the citizens to beautify their homes and gardens with beds of flowers, hanging baskets and other floral decorations with a view to making Toledo the city beautiful.

Mothers' Day.

Mothers' day here broke all records and many florists report that their business even surpassed that of Easter. Not only were flowers of all kinds and colors sold, but a surprising sale of plants was recorded, much to the delight of various florists. Saturday was a tremendous day and by noon Sunday practically every local florist was completely sold out and people were still pouring in by the hundreds, asking for anything that in the least resembled a flower. Carnations sold on Saturday for 60 cents, but on Sunday florists were forced much against their will to raise the price to $1.

The success of the day is attributed wholly to the successful coöperative advertising that was done. A meeting of leading florists was called and each one was asked to contribute so much. All but two responded at once to the idea. A large advertisement was placed in each of the daily papers and not a word was said about the carnation being the official flower for Mothers' day; rather the attention of the people was called to the fact that the idea of the day was not so much to wear any particular flower, but to show some sign of respect to the dear mother to whom we all owe so much. Plants were mentioned as being quite desirable. In this large advertisement all the names of florists who had contributed were published. On Saturday this was followed up with other advertising. The publicity man of the Toledo Florists' Club visited the editors of the local papers and called their attention to the day and furnished them with correct data on the subject, so that the people would get correct information about the day. As a result much editorial space was given Mothers' day and carnations were not mentioned. This in itself was a great good accomplished.

It was a great triumph for coöperative advertising and the same idea could be worked out with much profit to all, wholesaler and grower as well as retailer, for every other flower day, such as Decoration day, Christmas and Easter. The idea is to increase the use of flowers by the power of suggestion on days and occasions when the public might be apt to purchase other articles. The business man of today who is making strides forward does not believe in waiting until people happen by a mere accident to fall into his place of business and buy flowers, but he goes right out after them, always pounding home the idea of using flowers appropriately for this and that occasion.

Various Notes.

A recent visit to the Scottwood Greenhouses found everything coming along finely. Thomas Magee, who presides over the destinies of the Scottwood establishment, showed the writer some very fine bedding stock and some houses that are so spick and span that they are a source of pride to the owners. The concern enjoys one of the best patronages in this city and is favorably located to do a splendid neighborhood business. Mr. Magee reported business quite encouraging.

H. Klunder, of the Art Floral Co., says his Mothers' day business was simply great, as he, like the rest, was sold out early Sunday morning. Next year he hopes to be better prepared with stock, as this concern is now enlarging the houses, which are located near Maumee, so that there will be more than double the present glass. Ten men are now engaged in putting up this addition, but were somewhat delayed by the heavy rains last week. When these houses are completed, the Art Floral Co. is going to specialize in roses.

S. N. Peck has purchased a new Ford delivery car, as he received a bad jolt from the crank of his old car one day, that thoroughly disgusted him. The crank flew back and struck him a terrific blow on the leg, which practically disabled him for over a week. Mr. Peck was delighted with his Mothers' day business, especially with the number of high-grade plants sold. He reports that a great number of gloxinias were disposed of during the day. A. C. K.

Warren, O.—Adgate & Son expect to build another house as soon as the busy season is over.

Canal Dover, O.—C. Betscher began cutting peonies last week and will be extremely busy for the next fortnight. He reports the blooming season unusually favorable this year.

Superior, Neb.—G. E. Bending, who is proprietor of the Bending Floral Co., reports business conditions excellent, although the season is backward and planting delayed. There was a splendid trade for Mothers' day and the prospect for Memorial day is excellent. Mr. Bending has a ridge and furrow house, 50x100, eight feet to the gutter and sixteen feet to the ridges, in which carnations were in full crop for May 10.

Petoskey, Mich.—J. Scott Ward, who is known as a gladiolus specialist, is preparing to disseminate a new late-flowering variety that he has appropriately named Autumn Queen. The color is creamy white with pinkish tint. The flowers all face one way on the spike, making it well adapted to cut flower work, but the important point is that it is highly resistant to frost and blooms late in autumn, after gladioli are pretty well out of the market.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1913, to December 31, 1913, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 20%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders	$566.00
Less 20% allowed senders.. .. .	113.20
Net value of orders.....	452.80

Here is an addition of $452.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

Yours respectfully,

J J Beneke

Business at the local wholesale houses was far from being satisfactory last week. According to reports, the retail business was also not encouraging. The plantsmen, however, report that they have so far experienced an extremely busy season, which is now at its height. With society making its last stand for the next few weeks, there should be considerable work for the retailers in weddings, school commencements and other social affairs.

In looking over the market, I found it most of the time overcrowded with one flower or another. It was either sweet peas or carnations. There were a great many more of these coming in daily than the demand could use up, even at the low prices they were sold for. Peonies have arrived and promise to come in heavily by the end of the week. These, with the arrival of cape jasmines from Texas, will no doubt help to crowd the market this week. Roses are not of any extra fancy quality; the few hot days brought them to this market soft, and some wide open. Long Beauties are of better quality than the short ones. There are plenty of Easter lilies, callas and valley to be had daily. Gladioli are fine and hold up in price from $5 to $8 per hundred. Our Kirk-

Florists' Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held May 14. The meeting was much better attended than was expected, on account of the planting season being at its height. The meeting opened at 2 o'clock, with President Pilcher in the chair and all other officers present. The attendance was about twenty-five members. Chairman Windler, of the trustees, reported that they had arranged for the club's anniversary banquet to take place at the Jefferson hotel June 24. All members wishing to attend this banquet should send in their names to the trustees at once. The feature of the banquet this year is that ladies will be present.

R. J. Windler, state vice-president of the S. A. F., reported that letters are to be sent out to all florists in eastern Missouri, asking coöperation in placing Missouri to the front at Boston next August. He also has called a meeting of all the members of the S. A. F. in the eastern part of Missouri in conjunction with the Florists' Club meeting, June 11. Florists who are not members of the club or S. A. F. are invited to attend this meeting and join us.

discussion, the club decided to appoint Messrs. Windler, Ossick and Connon as a committee to work with Mr. Dyer in behalf of the club, calling on any of the members for such assistance as they may need.

A letter from the Chicago Florists' Club, inviting the St. Louis club members to travel with the Chicago florists to Boston in August to attend the S. A. F. meeting, was read by the secretary and on motion turned over to the state vice-president, who has charge of the transportation. A letter on affiliation from John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., was read and ordered filed for future reference.

The trustees were instructed to arrange for the annual picnic for florists and their families, to take place the latter part of July, at the expense of the club. Treasurer Smith's report showed a good surplus to the club's credit.

The next meeting of the club, June 11, will be of great importance to all the members, and with the planting season closed, a record attendance should be present.

Various Notes.

The Geo. M. Garland Co., of Des Plaines, Ill., has opened an office here, in the Fullerton building, with C. C. Shafer in charge. Mr. Shafer says he has been quite busy sending out several estimates to local growers who contemplate building.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle spent a pleasant afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. Windler, on Virginia avenue. Every member of the circle was present. It was decided to meet next month at the home of Mrs. A. Meyer, Jr., on South Jefferson avenue, June 10.

The faithful dog Jack, who has greeted the trade each morning for the last twelve years at the office of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., died of old age May 15. Chief Mourner Paddy Patton boxed up his remains,

Dan Cupid has been hanging around the home of J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, for some time, and Papa Ammann has announced that his eldest daughter will soon be married. The name of the lucky young man has not been made known as yet.

Martin Moran, of the St. Louis Seed Co., and C. B. Mundt, of the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., say they had a big business this season and that the rush is about over. Local seedsmen are making preparations for a large number to attend the thirty-second annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, which will be held at Washington, D. C., June 23 to 25.

A. G. Greiner says that although greatly hampered by the sickness of his wife and the loss of two valuable horses, who died in the spring, he has had a good business in planting nursery stock and a splendid shipping trade in cactus plants, sending many to eastern concerns.

The Standard Fixture Co., local agents for the McCray refrigerators, and the Brecht Co. report a number of orders for florists' refrigerators. The force of the Brecht Co. is working overtime.

John S. Carter, president of the Nicotine Mfg. Co., at 117 North Main street, says his company has had an excellent shipping trade this year and a large local demand for its products.

The guiding hand of Phil Goebel can be seen in the planting out at Reservoir park. The beautiful south end park never looked better than this year. Mr. Goebel has a force of men at work this week at the Chain of Rocks park in the north end. These parks belong to the city water department and are not under the supervision of the park department.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

An abundance of rain has fallen during the last ten days and business has suffered terribly. Compared with a year ago at this time, we are only doing about one-half the amount of business. Not only has the rain hindered indoor trade, but it is full time bedding plants were moving, and outdoor work is comparatively at a standstill.

Stock generally has not been of good quality of late. Carnations are again coming in their usual quantities. For two or three days after Mothers' day there were hardly any on the market, so close was the cut. Prices have gone to their usual mark, 75 cents and $1 per dozen, retail. Easter lilies are arriving in poor condition. Callas are not overplentiful, but the demand is small. Valley is not up to the mark. Sweet peas are arriving in good consignments. Lighter shades sell best. The purple and dark red hardly sell at all. Snapdragon is the popular flower just now. Orchids are in fine condition and are disposed of quickly. Roses are in abundant supply in all grades and kinds. American Beauties are exceptionally good and bring fair prices. Pink and white stocks, daisies and pansies sell quite well and are quite useful for basket work. The rains spoiled the outdoor bulbous stock. There is little in the way of blooming plants. The supply of greens is about normal and meets the demand, with the exception of hardy ferns, which have been scarce all the week.

Various Notes.

Wm. B. Lake, of the Wm. B. Lake Co., Philadelphia, was in town recently and reported good business. Other salesmen who called last week were Mr. Stearns, of the Sefton Mfg. Co., Chicago; Jac Bulk, of C. G. Bulk & Co., Boskoop, Holland, and R. E. Blackshaw, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

The building of which J. B. Keller Sons occupy the ground floor is undergoing extensive alterations. The first and second floors have been torn down and will be thoroughly remodeled. This will be a big improvement to the store when completed.

Mrs. E. P. Wilson is still on the gain, but is in a quite weak condition.

George Case has been away from business about a week on account of the recent death of his elder brother.

H. E. Wilson is somewhat overstocked with spiræas and is disposing of good, large plants at the low price of 75 cents.

Thousands of visitors are taking in the beautiful displays of flowering plants at the Lamberton conservatories and at the various parks of the city. The display of tulips is more beautiful than ever; there are 40,000 blooms in Jones park, 70,000 in Highland park, and a total of 140,000 tulips in all the parks. A fine collection of magnolias, twenty-seven varieties of which are found in Highland park, are in bloom. The Japanese and Chinese cherries are also in bloom.

Members of the Rochester Florists' Association are divided on the advisability of conducting a flower show next fall. At the meeting held Monday night, May 11, at Musicians' hall, a straw vote was taken, but the result was withheld. John Dunbar appointed the following on the finance committee, to devise means of assuring a financial success of a flower show: Wm. H. Dildine, Henry P. Neun, Chas. W. Crosman, Edwin P. Wilson, Michael Kellar and George B. Hart. The show depends upon the report of the committee. A special meeting was called for May 18 to settle the matter. John Dunbar afterwards interested the members by giving them a talk on "Hardy Coniferous Evergreens." H. J. H.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The last two or three weeks have seen a great deal of stock moved—more, in fact, than was expected. Mothers' day was a real success, and the best part of it was that there was no such disposition to insist on carnations as there has been in the past. At the present rate, in two or three more years Mothers' day will be among the best flower days. Irises are in full bloom at present, though they have been plentiful for weeks. There are few places where this grand flower is more appreciated than in Nashville. Peonies are at their height now, the earlier varieties having been almost a failure because of the late frosts. Memorial day bids fair to find the late varieties still blooming here—something rarely seen. Of course Memorial day does not count locally, but there is sure to be a demand from the north.

Last week saw the bedding plants pretty well cleaned out. There are some who had so large a stock that they still have plenty, but several growers are entirely sold out, as the demand has been unusually heavy. A wider range of varieties has been offered this season, and the newer offerings sell best.

There are good displays of columbine in several private gardens this season and they seem to be peculiarly adapted to this climate, being found wild in the hills. It may safely be predicted that the man who will grow a quantity of the good ones for cut flowers will find that they will bring him good returns. The first dahlia bloom for the season was seen here this week. It bloomed in the open, too. Tubers that are left in the ground over winter here often give good returns in May. Pot plants are scarce and even the ferns are well sold out. Good ferns have seldom been so scarce here.

Various Notes.

The Joy Floral Co. has been keeping stock well cleaned up of late. T. H. Joy, Jr., was out of the city last week. The firm was caught pretty short on carnations for Mothers' day, but sold other flowers readily, so that there was little loss on that account.

Geny Bros. have been showing some of the best red peonies ever seen in the south. Their carnations are holding up well for the season, looking about as well as in the winter. They have done a good plant business this spring, but are about sold out.

Haury & Sons have a good line of plants of most kinds on hand yet, though their business has been heavy. They are bound to make good with these the next week or so. They have

GERANIUM SPORT.

Enclosed find a geranium which I think is a sport of S. A. Nutt. Will you please tell me what you think of it? Does it resemble any variety that you know of? It is a trifle stronger than S. A. Nutt. L. P. E.

The variety is similar to S. A. Nutt. Several other Nutt sports have recently been sent to The Review. There are so many named varieties and sports in the geranium family that anything to be really distinct must be quite striking. Your sport resembles several other varieties closely, but is a good thing and worth stocking up on. C. W.

May 30, The Big Day

In the last few years Decoration Day has become the big day in the flower business. Practically every florist can, if he tries, sell more flowers May 29 and 30 than in any other two days in the year. This year Decoration Day comes on Saturday, so you will have a big Sunday also. And it is fine business. Flowers are plentiful and cheap, so that there is a good profit. Also, the customer usually takes the flowers along, so there is no expense for delivery. That adds a whole lot to the profit.

The Peony is the special Decoration Day flower. It makes the biggest show for the money. Also it is the most reliable shipper; you can be sure your Peonies will reach you in fine condition, that they will not go to sleep on your hands and that they will give your customers satisfaction.

Kennicott's is the Peony house. It was our exploitation of the Peony that made the Peony and the Decoration Day business what it is. We handle more Peonies than any other house in America. For Decoration Day we ship them from Chicago to the Atlantic seaboard and to the Pacific coast.

Now booking orders. The stock this year promises to be the finest ever, and with the many thousands of plants we control we are assured many thousands of dozens.

The finest, $8.00 per 100; medium, $5.00 to $6.00 per 100; good short stock, $4.00 per 100.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Brown University has been the chief center of florists' interest during the larger part of the last week, for Junior week ushered in a period of festivity, which will continue for several days longer. The week was replete with receptions, teas and other functions, and cut flowers and decorations were in much demand. Mothers' day was generally observed and thousands of carnations were used, making whites a trifle short the earlier part of last week. There is an ample supply of everything, but there is shortening up of receipts because of the slight falling off in prices. Everything looks promising for Memorial day.

Various Notes.

Smith, the Florist, has just purchased a new Ford delivery car, twenty-two and a half horse-power.

The express company has satisfied the claim of Neil Ward, of Lonsdale, for damage done to plants by freezing during shipment from White Marsh, Md., last winter.

Louis J. Reuter, of S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., Westerly, was a business visitor in Boston last week.

E. E. Howard, of the Eden Park Nursery, is booking an unusually large number of orders for nursery stock.

Matthew Macnair is preparing to take his annual summer trip to his native place in Scotland and later will go to Paris.

A summer cottage owned by Theodore R. Peterson, the Benefit street florist, located at Field's Point, overlooking Narragansett bay, was destroyed by fire a few nights ago.

William H. Tarbox, the local "dahlia king," has been confined to his home at West Greenwich for several weeks by a severe attack of rheumatism.

H. C. Neubrand, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., was a visitor here last week.

Miss Florence Willard, of the Hope Greenhouses, is confined to her home by a severe attack of the grip.

Bournaize & Son, who conduct an extensive bulb farm at Hoxsie, announce that in future they will conduct the business as the Hoxsie Nurseries.

W. H. M.

Asheville, N. C.—D. A. Lashley, proprietor of the Idlewild Greenhouses, will make some alterations and build another greenhouse this summer.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-second annual convention, Washington, D. C., June 23 to 25, 1914.

ORDERS for peas have fallen pretty flat with the wholesale seedsmen, but stocks have cleaned up better than was thought possible.

THE California growers are not especially enthusiastic over the prospect for the sweet pea crop, although nothing like last year's disaster is in prospect.

AFTER a tour of the principal cities of the United States, calling on the seed trade, Henri L. Vilmorin, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Cie, Paris, France, sailed for home May 20, from New York, on La Provence.

NITROGLYCERIN was used by burglars to blow open the safe of the E. F. Spears Seed Co., at Paris, Ky., early on the morning of May 6. They escaped with $600 in money and left no clue to their identity.

THE seed trade's annual convention is only a month away. At the rate business is holding up this year it looks as though some people might have to knock off filling orders to attend. Washington is a popular meeting place and a record gathering is expected.

THE seed trade is rounding up a record business as the result of the intermittent spring. A long season makes for a big total of sales, while a short season cuts down the total. The 1914 season was late in opening, but it has continued later than usual.

REPORTS to the Holland bulb salesmen on tour are to the effect that the blooming season was unusually favorable and that the fields are in far better shape than a year ago, there being only a little of the much dreaded "fire" in the foliage of tulips and hyacinths.

CONDITIONS of the 1914 crop of Lima beans, according to latest advices from California, are favorable for an output of fair size, but in order to insure these conditions, favorable weather during the growing period must prevail. A slightly larger acreage than last year has been planted this season in some sections.

THE Holland growers, who went in so strongly for gladioli that it was feared the business had been overdone, are feeling better at the close of the season than they did at its opening. The brisk business in March enabled them to clean up most of the larger sizes and practically all of the better sorts, so that the stock left unsold was nearly all of planting size.

THE ROLL OF HONOR.

It will interest the trade to note how the senators lined up on the proposition to strike out the appropriation for

AT GETTYSBURG

Edward Everett was the orator at Gettysburg in 1863, and after his speech the President was asked to say a word. Who remembers what Everett said? Who doesn't remember what A. Lincoln said?—"The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here." The queer thing about it is that Lincoln made a mistake in thinking the world would forget what he said. He told the people so simply that it was deeds done that counted, that it will never be forgotten. And that's the point we want to emphasize about Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs—what they have done, the magnificent results they have accomplished—results far above other brands. And they will continue to give superior results, owing to the care given them in cultivation and the organization behind them. Send for the Joy Book of Bulbology.

CANNERS PASS UP FRISCO.

The executive committee of the American Canners' Association, at a meeting at Washington, D. C., last week, decided not to hold the convention at San Francisco in 1915. The committee will meet again probably in a couple of weeks to decide on the place and time of the meeting. P.

PROVES LAWS ADEQUATE.

Although the incident probably will be cited as evidence of the need of a national pure seed law, the absence of any such necessity was proven at Milwaukee last week, when Alfred L. and Edwin L. Rosenberg were fined $200 each for fraudulent use of the mails. The court had it within his power to impose a heavier fine or a prison sentence had the evidence justified.

In opposing national legislation on the subject of seeds the trade has set up two chief contentions: First, that the need does not exist, and, second, that such arbitrary standards as are applied to paints, etc., can not be employed in the merchandising of a variable, seasonal natural product like seeds. It has been contended by the trade that no necessity exists for a pure seed law, since ample facilities, state and national, already have been provided to enlighten the man who wishes to ascertain exactly what he purchases, and that the rare cases of willful wrong-doing can be and are adequately covered by existing laws. The Rosenberg case appears to prove the latter contention.

Rosenberg & Lieberman are wholesale grass seed dealers at Milwaukee. The firm for several years advertised itself as a specialist in "dry land Montana grown alfalfa seed." It urged that this seed, grown farthest north of any seed, was more hardy and drought-resistant than all others. It said it practically had a corner on this seed in 1913 and cautioned farmers throughout the middle west against the use of alfalfa seed grown elsewhere. Members of the firm obtained the O. K. of the agricultural experiment station of Wisconsin for certain samples. Their chief brand was "Government brand," leading consumers to believe the government stood behind this seed. The evidence showed that they bought much alfalfa seed, not only from Europe but from the section they had cautioned against, and only a proportion of their purchases of alfalfa came from Montana.

When the government took up the case prosecution was instituted in the federal court alleging a fraudulent use of the mails. An indictment was found in November, 1913, and the case came to trial last week before Judge F. A. Geiger, resulting in two of the defendants being fined $200 each.

It is expected that the case will lead to the investigation of the dealings of other seedsmen and to similar prosecutions should the evidence justify; also that the case will be pointed to by those who are demanding a national pure seed law as a reason for such demand. The trade, however, will put the opposite construction on the incident.

"FREIGHT AND DUTY PAID."

The Holland bulb salesmen, in their efforts to take the business from American jobbers, have brought about a condition that is not specially relished by the Dutch exporters. Many buyers refused to make direct importations because of the uncertain items of cost incident to freight, insurance, duty, brokerage, etc., and in the effort to get these orders the Hollanders began quoting a delivered price. The custom has grown until it is a burden. The exporter in Holland does not enjoy putting up his cash for freight and duty and waiting until after Easter to get it back along with the payment for his merchandise. Even where bulbs have been sold at a delivered price they usually reach the buyer with the freight and duty collect, but the broker has instructions that if the buyer absolutely refuses to meet these payments, and deduct them from the bill, the broker is to advance the money on behalf of the exporter.

American jobbers view the situation with mixed feelings. They note that this method has obtained for the exporters some orders that formerly could not be touched, but, on the other hand, the growing necessity of investing large sums in freight and duty is deterring some Holland exporters from pushing the business. There is a possibility that in the end the Hollanders may find this method so costly that they will leave the business to the American jobber, to whom it belongs. The Holland houses are finding the cost of selling in America steadily on the increase.

NO LEGISLATION THIS SESSION.

Curtis Nye Smith, counsel for the three national organizations of seedsmen, sends the following announcement:

"I am pleased to advise that Senator Gronna's bill (S. 480) to regulate interstate commerce in seeds has received an adverse report from the Senate committee on agriculture and forestry, to which the bill was referred. It is not likely that this report will be reversed by the Senate.

"The other interstate seed bill before Congress, being Mr. Howard's bill (H. B. 11170) has not been considered by the House committee on agriculture, and as their program for the remainder of the session is now made up and does not include this bill, no action will be taken upon it.

"From the above it will be perceived that there is little likelihood that any action will be taken on seed legislation in this session of Congress."

THE SENSATIONAL NEW YELLOW CACTUS DAHLIA
GOLDEN GATE

ONE of Burbank's creations obtained eight years ago from a seed in a packet of Burbank's collection of Dahlia seeds. Received certificate of merit at Nassau County Horticultural Society's Dahlia Show, 1909, and at the exhibition of the American Institute, 1912. The best all-around Dahlia in existence, a sure, free, medium-early bloomer, large double flowers, never shows open center; a true Cactus type, color yellow, shading to old gold; sturdy, upright growth, not to be compared with the sprawling-growing yellow Cactus now in cultivation. As a garden variety it is not surpassed by any other Dahlia, as the plants become one mass of golden blooms which can be seen a great distance, surpassing in color effect all other Dahlias. This Dahlia caused a sensation at the exhibition of the American Institute. We included three blooms of Golden Gate in a collection of 25 varieties of Dahlias at the annual fair, 1911, of the Queens and Nassau County Agricultural Society, winning first prize for collection, competing against one of the largest bulb growers of the country. The Dahlia blooms at this fair were exposed to a strong draft, which spoiled all the other blooms in a few days, but the Golden Gate blooms remained in good condition all the week, on this account receiving much attention and admiration from thousands of visitors the closing days of the fair. As a cut flower it ranks supreme, selling even though the market is glutted with Golden Glow 'Mums. When disbudded the blooms grow to a gigantic size, with stems any desired length; a splendid keeper, remaining in good condition for 15 days. We have grown and shipped cut blooms of same to New York market for five years, receiving higher prices per 100 blooms of Golden Gate than for any other kind; in fact, we could not fill all orders.

Vase of Golden Gate and Souv. de Gustave Doazon. Compare the size.

These Dahlias have been propagated eight years from tubers, consequently they are of a strong and vigorous constitution. Unlike any other Cactus Dahlia, the necks are very strong, never breaking in handling. This Dahlia is insect and blight proof.

They will bloom in spite of the tarnish bug, white fly, drought or mildew. Testimonials sent on request, telling of the Golden Gate Dahlia blooming alone among dozens and hundreds of varieties that failed to bloom on account of the above causes. This Dahlia is to Dahlias what the King Humbert is to cannas, or the American Beauty is to roses. Don't fail to try the Golden Gate this season; you will never regret it. Price to the trade for field-grown tubers (not pot-grown), $1.00 each, postpaid; 3 for $2.75, postpaid; $10.00 per dozen. No tubers sent out that do not show sprouts.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Well Known Florists at the Annual Banquet of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, Fairmount Hotel, San Francisco, May 9, 1914.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

In retail circles midsummer conditions are everywhere prevalent, viz.: great quantities of stock at low prices and quiet business conditions. Although the exodus to country retreats has not yet commenced, social functions are few and the demand for luxuries in all lines seems to be greatly diminished. Naturally the retail florist comes in for his share of business depression. It seems a pity that this should be the case, especially when so choice a stock and so large a variety of flowers is obtainable. The item of the week which has attracted most attention has been the peony; great rose-colored blooms, fine whites and pinks are everywhere procurable at reasonable rates, long-stemmed ones retailing for $1.50 and $2 in the best shops. American Beauties are also at the acme of perfection, and cheaper than at any other time of the year. We have some fine Ulrich Brunner, which are perhaps the best sellers among the outdoor roses. Cecile Brunners are also coming into the market in large quantities, and form a steady corsage commodity.

More sweet peas were brought in last week than at any other time this year, and they are selling two bunches for 25 cents. Fine, large Cattleya Mossiæ and early gigas are available, being a little more plentiful than last week. The iris has not been so good a seller during the last few days and the deep colored varieties are almost over with. The good whites and yellows are retailing for 50 cents per dozen. Such flowers as gaillardias, coreopsis, cornflowers, calliopsis and marguerites are overplentiful and the street venders' stands have liberal displays of them. The street venders are also well laden with carnations, which sell for a song.

Horticultural Society Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was given in the Red room of the Fairmount hotel, May 9. Nothing was spared in making the banquet room a fine display of the art of table decoration. The tables of Albert O. Stein, Frank Pelicano and Julius Eppstein were particularly attractive. Mr. Stein had in his party fourteen guests, who were seated in the center of the banquet room. Huge vases of American Beauty roses bedecked the center of the table and the foundation was an arrangement of the same flowers. The president's table was one of yellow roses. With President H. Plath were: Professor and Mrs. J. W. Gregg, of the University of California; Mr. and Mrs. Angelo J. Rossi, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Fotheringham, Daniel MacRorie, Donald McLaren, W. A. Hofinghoff and the Misses Plath. After the banquet the members of the society adjourned to the ball room, where dancing was enjoyed until the early hours of the morning.

Various Notes.

H. Sanborn, of Oakland, featured a most attractive window last week, showing pansy plants; these were an excellent seller.

Daniel MacRorie, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., is busy drawing up a list of western nurserymen and florists who will make the trip to Boston in August to attend the S. A. F. convention. Mr. MacRorie is endeavoring to get enough members together so that they may have a private car, and as his endeavors usually meet with success, undoubtedly the Pacific coast will be well represented. Mr. MacRorie has just purchased a fine new 6-cylinder Chalmers.

The Art Floral Co. has been featuring huge balls of white peonies in the windows.

H. Plath is busy reconstructing his greenhouses. Mr. Plath's increased business has made it necessary to alter and add to his already extensive plant. He is undoubtedly the largest fern grower on the Pacific coast and has at this writing 10,000 small ferns in variety.

IN ANY QUANTITY ROSES AT ANY TIME

Now that you have decided definitely on your planting for the coming season, would esteem it a pleasure to submit samples and prices covering your requirements. Our stock is in splendid shape for immediate planting, especially in the following varieties. We guarantee satisfaction.

Prince E. C. d'Arenberg—This sterling new red is being planted heavily and is going to make a record. We have an extra fine lot of it for June 1st and later delivery. At the price we are delivering it for, you can give it a very liberal trial.

Mrs. Geo. Shawyer—Here is another one that you make no mistake in devoting a liberal amount of your bench space to. You will eventually discard all other pinks for it. Better make a good start this season; there will be no regrets.

Dble. White Killarney—Will surely supersede the original; larger, stronger, double and pure white in the hottest weather.

Lady Alice Stanley—A grand rose and easy to handle, of extremely vigorous growth, splendid at all seasons of the year.

Killarney Queen—A favorite with every one, wherever tried, always in demand at advanced prices.

Jonkheer J. L. Mock—Gaining friends everywhere, this giant pink has made a great place for itself and deservedly so.

Sunburst—The only yellow rose you can afford to devote space to, and a big money-maker.

Antoine Rivoire (Mrs. Taft)—Sells on sight and a favorite with every one; always brings top prices; beautiful in all stages of development and a splendid keeper.

Milady—A wonderfully good red that has proven itself a winner; grow cool and you will be surprised with its vigorous growth and freedom.

Mlle. Cecile Brunner—This charming little rose is a staple in every first-class flower shop in the country. There is always room for a few benches of it, and the returns are steady and generous.

Prima Donna—The demand exceeds the supply wherever grown, and is being planted in greatly increased quantities this season. Larger than Russell and a better and easier one to handle.

Mrs. Wakefield Christie-Miller—Strong grower, a big, massive built rose that every one likes, and very free.

the season of the year; the cool nights keep the stock hard. The flowers keep their color well, and are of good substance and lasting quality. Carnations are plentiful, and although the glut of baby roses is about over, there is still a much larger supply than is needed. Gladioli are now quite plentiful, and while the larger Gandavensis and similar types clean up well, the small-flowering Peach Blossom, Blushing Bride and similar kinds are not selling well. The commoner spring, or garden, flowers are being peddled around by children, old ladies and others, who apparently try to add a little to their income by the proceeds of their yards, but just why retailers buy such trash and turn down decent stock grown by those who are in the business and have to make their living at it, is a riddle. Boston ferns and other kinds of nephrolepis are still scarce and difficult to obtain. Greens of all kinds are plentiful and cheap.

Various Notes.

A recent call upon H. Clinkaberry at the Thorkildsen place, at Beverly Hills, showed that he has been making the best of his time and opportunities to improve these grounds. They had been planted in a way that was inartistic, to say the least, and practically everything had to be changed, except the wilder natural part, where, under the shade of live oaks in part, and in the full sun in other parts, he has planted and sown suitable stock. One of the prettiest things of all was the golden yellow Mariposa lily, or Calochortus clavatus. The bulbs were planted simply by throwing them over the uneven hillside, and by this means a natural effect has been obtained that could not be had by any other style or system of planting. And this is one of the most glorious of the calochorti, all of which have to be seen on their native heath to be appreciated. Many large trees have been moved in and planted, and other important alterations are in progress.

Nothing but roses now is grown at the El Paso Greenhouses, at Hollywood, and Mr. Lecluse, the present lessee of the place, has it in good shape. I had the interesting experience of picking and eating the Chinese lychee nut here, a nice tree of which is on the place. How many readers have done likewise in this country?

Anton Soethout, of the Hollywood Nurseries, has built a fine business block on the extreme west of his property.

J. E. Miller, of Sunset boulevard, is trying out a number of new gladioli, which promise well.

H. Kitada, a Japanese market gardener addicted to flying machines, was fatally injured when his aeroplane collapsed with him on his place just back of the trial grounds of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., at Montebello.

Stock is coming in fine shape from the Gardena greenhouses to Wright's Flower Shop. In fact, Tom Wright says he never has had such good stock at this season. Roses Mrs. Geo. Shawyer and Sunburst are two of the comparatively new ones that are making a hit just now, and the Beauties are extremely good.

A misstatement of mine as to the nationality of the Polder & Groen boys and their parents should be corrected. Holland is their fatherland, not Germany, as I stated carelessly.

H. Reeve Darling sends home glowing accounts of the tulip and other bulb fields in Holland, where he and his bride now are visiting. Business keeps up well under the able handling of Manager Walter Garbett.

One of the best weddings ever handled by Eldred's Flower Shop, of Pasadena, was the Frost function last week. This was an outdoor affair and Mr. Eldred personally looked after the decorations. A great deal of choice stock was used, and the bride carried a fine bouquet of valley and orchids. The bridesmaids' bouquets were of Chatenay and Cecile Brunner roses, and the whole affair was a great credit to the firm.

At the King funeral last week Morris Goldenson had most of the work, including a fine pall of valley and orchids.

Judging by the thinned out ranks of many of the popular varieties of roses, H. W. Turner must already have had a big season's business in spring stock. The packing shed was full on a recent visit and a look at some of the labels showed that some, at least, of the money that was formerly spent in the east for roses will be coming back to California. Mr. Turner has several alterations and improvements in mind this season, including a long line of frames and possibly another large propagating house.

Among the funeral work at Frank Lichtenberger's last week was a pall of Mrs. John Laing roses and Enchantress carnations, another of Cecile Brunners and valley, and a 7-foot broken column.

S. Murata, head of the firm of Murata & Co., surprised his friends by slipping away to Seattle recently, returning to Los Angeles May 16 with his bride. No one in the trade here is more respected than Mr. Murata, and all will join in wishing him and his bride the happiest of married lives.

At the store of the H. N. Gage Co. I noted some elegant Lilium candidum, and the statice handled here is exceptionally good. Stock is coming in fine shape now from the Montebello nursery. L. Gage has everything here in fine order, while H. N. Gage runs the store end.

A banquet at Sierre Madre helped out at the store of J. Wolters last week.

C. Morton, of the Los Angeles Flower Market, is having considerable trouble with his throat, which keeps him away from the store a great deal. Business here is reported good for the season.

The Market.

Summer weather has prevailed for a week and all varieties of flowers have been forced into bloom. Outdoor roses are about thirty days ahead of previous years. Peonies are in full flower. There is a fear that they will all be gone before Memorial day. Gaillardias, delphiniums and bachelor's buttons also are on the market. Carnations are holding out nicely. There is no surplus of these and good prices prevail. Roses are in heavy crop, but all show the effects of the heat. Lady Hillingdon has proved a good paying rose, a good producer and a popular variety.

Mothers' day brought considerable business to the florists, yet there was a decrease in comparison with other years. A wider scope of advertising is suggested to bring the day to the attention of the public, also to convince the people that other flowers aside from carnations are appropriate. Several of the florists had special window effects in white, but most of them made no attempt.

Various Notes.

George Betz, Jr., met with an untimely death May 10. While with a party of friends on an auto trip, the car overturned, killing Mr. Betz and one other of the party. They were burned beyond recognition. The car was entirely destroyed.

A. Burkhardt reports a busy season with bedding stock and window boxes.

Mothers' Day.

The big event of the last week was Mothers' day. While always a good and profitable day, this year it was the best ever, the direct result of the coöperative publicity given to it by the florists. Previous to this, members of the trade had expressed their belief that this class of advertising would pay. This was tipped off to the advertising manager of one of the big dailies, who immediately set about working up an agreement among the florists. Practically all fell into line at once. The result was a large advertisement printed Friday morning, May 8. Numerous other notices were given the day in the other papers, all of which helped to make it one of the best business days of the year.

The heaviest call was for red and white carnations, with pink as an alternative. The supply held out until about noon Sunday, after which the other varieties of flowers moved freely. The only advance in price was on carnations, which sold at $1 to $1.50 per dozen.

One of the most gratifying things noted in connection with the cooperative plan of florists' advertising is the fact that we have demonstrated that it is possible for all or nearly all the florists to get together. What Spokane florists need to know is that they can get together in a florists' club and get lots of good from meeting together from week to week. Questions of prices and matters of individual business policy should be left out of club discussions; there is an unlimited field for discussion in those questions which interest alike the grower, the wholesaler and the retailer.

Various Notes.

The Spokane Greenhouses, Inc., report that while Mothers' day caught their carnations just a little off crop, Memorial day will just hit them right. This concern ranks among the best growers of cyclamen in this section; J. F. Austin says that several of their shipments of seedlings have brought large repeat orders.

Donart & Louis are sending in some fine pink gladioli from their Cœur d'Alene greenhouses. They are busy these days with a crop of cucumbers, which they dispose of through Spokane commission houses. White Spine and the English varieties are grown.

Olsson & Bernson have been busy filling plant boxes for department stores. They also have a contract for thirty-six hanging baskets for the Davenport hotel.

John Lindbloom has left A. J. Burt and gone to Portland. Louis Halle, formerly with Henry Reimers, now has charge of the Burt greenhouses.

BELGIAN GRAPES.

According to United States Consul Charles Roy Nesmith, of Brussels, Belgian grape growers of experience and responsibility are seriously considering the establishment of American greenhouses and the introduction of Belgian methods here, rather than shipping their home-grown product across the water as they do now. "Belgian growers of greenhouse grapes who have visited the United States," he says, "consider the methods used in Belgium for growing grapes, and especially the construction of the buildings and the system of heating, far superior to the American way.

"At present transportation facilities between Belgium and the United States are entirely insufficient on the steamers sailing from Antwerp, about thirty miles away. All the available refrigerator space has been taken by a few growers, and other exporters of greenhouse grapes are compelled to ship by way of Rotterdam or by steamer from Antwerp to Southampton, and then by steamer to New York. One grower gave it as his opinion that ten times the quantity of grapes now sold in the United States could easily be disposed of if they could be delivered, and all the shippers agree that there is no difficulty in finding a market for their grapes.

"This industry first started at Hoeylaert, Belgium, fifty years ago and has developed steadily. Now there are 15,000 houses in which grapes are grown, and the total annual production is 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 kilos (8,818,500 to 11,023,100 pounds). New houses are being constructed each year and the industry is becoming more and more important.

"The Belgian statistics show exports of these grapes to the different countries in 1912 as follows, in pounds: To England, 1,043,227; Germany, 317,466; United States, 211,203; Netherlands, 100,090; France, 3,968; other countries, 40,786; total, 1,716,740 pounds. The consular records show that in 1912 the exports of grapes invoiced at the Brussels consulate general for shipment to the United States aggregated $64,977. In 1913 the declared exports of grapes from this district to the United States were some $4,700 less in value, the shipments by quarters last year being:

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

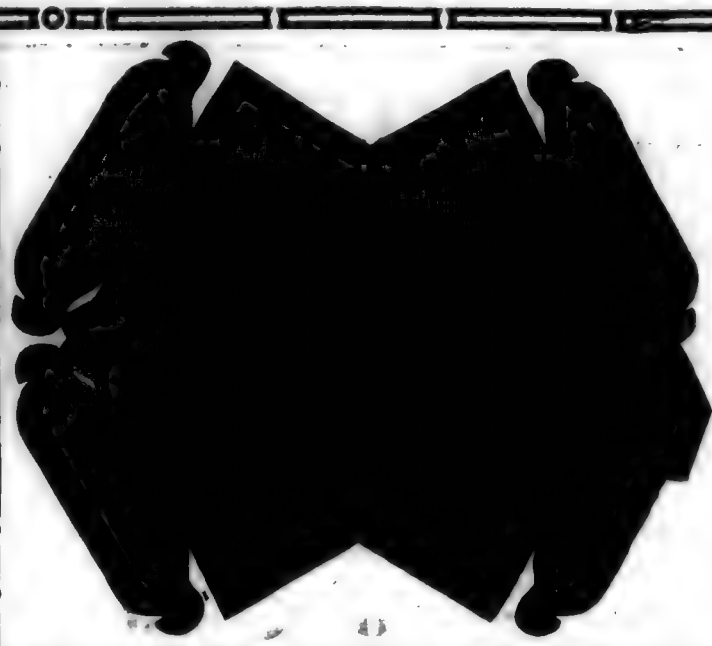
Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.



We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results. —Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

"The principal varieties of grapes grown in greenhouses are especially the Franckenthal, the Gros Colman and, in less quantities, the Black Alicante, also the following white grapes: Muscat blanc d'Alexandrie, Gris Dore and the Forster. The principal variety exported to the United States is the Gros Colman, which stands transportation much better than the other varieties."

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

BULLETIN No. 128, just issued by the agricultural experiment station at Pennsylvania State College, treats of "The Apple in Pennsylvania: Varieties, Planting and General Care," and is the work of John P. ORNAMENTAL shrubs and palms from the Royal Poinciana Nursery, at St. Petersburg, Fla., will line West Central avenue, from Thirty-fourth to Thirty-sixth street, the length of the concern's grounds. Slat houses are to be erected shortly, and orders will be filled this fall; the stock which the nursery cannot propagate in time will be secured from other concerns.

THE forestry department of the state of Kentucky is going into the nursery business, and will furnish budded apple trees to the people of the state at cost. So great has been the demand for apple trees in this state that the Kentucky forestry commission decided a few days ago that seed beds should be established in the Louisville nursery and seeds procured by State Forester J. E. Barton at once. The seedlings will be budded and grafted to the proper varieties before shipment.

We have always found The Review a top notcher as to results received from wholesale advertising of nursery stock.—Atlantic Nursery Co., per D. W. Babcock, Mgr., Berlin, Md., January 16, 1914.

NURSERYMEN in general report the largest sale of perennials thus far recorded. The demand in this line appears to increase every year.

NON-RESIDENT NURSERYMEN.

Discrimination Against Them.

The provisions of the United States constitution which deprive a state of power to interfere with interstate commerce, or to deny to citizens of other states the privileges and immunities enjoyed by the citizens of the particular state, have been invoked in the courts to overthrow statutes restricting the right of non-residents of a state to sell nursery stock there, where the field is left open to residents.

A Federal Court Decision.

In a case which can be found reported in full in volume 63 of the Federal Reporter, the United States Circuit Court for the District of Minnesota declared void a statute of that state which attempted to require sellers of nursery stock grown outside the state to file an affidavit with the secretary of state containing, among other things, a statement of where the stock to be sold was grown, and to give a $2,000 bond to indemnify citizens against fraudulent misrepresentations made on the part of the seller as to the place where the stock was grown and as to its hardiness. The court holds that this law unreasonably interfered with interstate commerce and unjustly discriminated against non-residents. Judge Sanborn decided that the United States constitution gives to the citizens of other states the right to introduce and sell the products of those states in Minnesota on the same terms on which her own citizens sell like products of the state. He said, in part:

"The Illinois tree, the Wisconsin vine, the Iowa shrub, that is sound, and is of the same character as that grown in the state of Minnesota, seeking sale in that state, is entitled to be sold by those who deal in it on the same terms as, and with no greater restrictions than, the like article produced in the state of Minnesota."

The Presumption of Honesty.

Answering a claim, made in support of the validity of the law, to the effect that the bond attempted to be required of non-residents was intended to prevent dealers in foreign trees from perpetrating fraud in their sale, and that it was competent for the state to protect its citizens against the fraudulent representations, Judge Sanborn said:

"The answer is that when a state undertakes, by statutory regulation, to deprive citizens of other states, who deal in sound articles of commerce produced in other states, of that presumption of honesty and innocence of wrong which it indulges in favor of the dealers in its own products, and which the law raises in favor of every man, it effectually deprives the citizens of other states of the most valuable privileges and immunities its own citizens enjoy."

A New Hampshire Case.

A statute enacted in New Hampshire, prohibiting sale of nursery stock in the state without first obtaining a license, unless the stock should be grown in the state, but authorizing residents of the state to sell stock grown one year or more on lands or in nurseries owned by them in the state, on which taxes should have been paid, was declared by the Supreme Court of New Hampshire to have been void, as amounting to an unconstitutional discrimination against non-residents. (State vs. Lancaster, 63 N. H. 267.)

South Dakota Legislation.

A law enacted by the South Dakota legislature a few years ago was upheld so far as it required payment of a $10 fee for a permit to sell nursery stock in the state, based on an inspection of the applicant's nursery by a competent entomologist. But the act was declared to be void so far as it purported to vest power in the state board of agriculture to arbitrarily refuse to grant a permit to an applicant, both as amounting to an unwarranted interference with interstate commerce and as amounting to a deprivation of liberty and property without due process of law. A further provision, requiring non-resident nursery salesmen to carry duplicate permits issued by tne state board of agriculture, was also declared to be void, as being unjustly

EUCALYPTI FROM SEED.

Please tell us something about the culture of the eucalyptus tree and the suitable climatic conditions. Can it be propagated from seed? A customer of ours, here in east central Kansas, desires the information. C. F. C.

Yes, eucalypti are easily propagated from seed; in fact, they are seldom raised in any other way. The seeds, which usually germinate quickly, should be sown thinly in pots, pans or boxes of light, sandy soil and should be placed in a moderately warm atmosphere. The seeds are small and should be only slightly covered. Though the sowing may be done in the spring, the best plants are secured by sowing in August and growing the seedlings on through the winter, for use the following season. Where the climate is sufficiently mild, as in southern California, the seed may be sown in the open ground, and the seedlings, when about four or five inches high, should be transplanted to the nursery, so as to encourage the growth of an abundance of lateral roots, such as will hold a ball of soil when the time arrives for moving the plants to their permanent locations. As the little plants grow rapidly, plenty of space must be allowed for their development, either in the open ground or in pots. At this stage of their growth a rather rich soil, consisting of loam and well decayed manure, is considered most suitable.

A cool day, with a cloudy sky, should be chosen for the transplanting, and regular daily waterings should be given for some time afterwards, as the plants are particularly susceptible to checks in transplanting and are easily injured by lack of moisture. For this reason it is exceedingly difficult to transplant them successfully after they have grown to large size. For the same reason, also, it is difficult to ship them long distances without injury, but, as already stated, they are easily raised from seed and hence it is by means of the seed that they are most conveniently distributed.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT

A MASSACHUSETTS VIEW.

It may interest some of the readers of The Review to know that the paper has more subscribers in New York and Pennsylvania than in any other two states, although in Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island it has more readers than in any other territory of equal area anywhere in the United States. Perhaps this shows why:

I enclose check for $2, for which please extend my subscription to 1916. I am well pleased with The Review and consider it the best paper for florists published in the U. S. A.—J. W. Simpson, Woburn, Mass., May 9, 1914.

You can tell your friends that not everybody is privileged to subscribe to The Review. This paper is not so anxious to make a showing of circulation that it accepts every dollar that is offered. The Review believes the wholesale dealer should protect the retailer, and it is the policy of the paper to itself protect both by declining subscriptions outside the trade. If you know any florist not a subscriber, tell it to him.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business was somewhat quiet last week, but cannot be called bad. Quite a lot of material is arriving, but, as a rule, clearances are fairly good. Roses are not much changed in price. Short-stemmed flowers average $1 per hundred, and choice long-stemmed flowers $6, a few fancies making $8. American Beauties now are abundant and sell well at summer prices. Killarney Queen, Ward, Hillingdon, Taft and Russell are specially good sellers. Some growers also are sending in excellent Sunburst, which sells well. Carnations, thanks to the cool weather, remain of extra fine quality and a splendid crop is assured for Memorial day. Double violets are making their final bow this week. Sweet peas, especially Spencers, are moving well; few but Spencers will be seen next season.

Bulbous flowers from outdoors add to the indoor supply and prices have fallen. The season, however, has been a good one for the bulb men. Spanish iris is somewhat too plentiful. A good many Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride gladioli are coming in, and large-flowered types, like America and Augusta, arrive from several growers. Lilies are overabundant. Callas are nearing the end. Mignonette is growing small and poor. Of yellow marguerites the supply is now abundant and prices are lower. Valley is lower in price; the outdoor crop will this season be at its best for Memorial day.

Snapdragons continue hard to move. There is an abundant supply of Cattleya Mossiæ and small lots of C. gigas. Gardenias are lower and do not clean up well. Ferns are selling well, but asparagus meets with a slow sale. Trade in pansies, daisies, myosotis, geraniums and other spring and summer bedding plants now is quite good.

May Exhibition.

There was a good exhibition at Horticultural hall May 16 and 17. Alexander McKay, gardener to E. A. Clark, captured first prize for six herbaceous calceolarias, William Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, being second. Mr. McKay also had the six best plants of Calceolaria Stewartii. Martin Sullivan, gardener to William Whitman, led for six fancy pelargoniums, for twenty-five blooms each of Emperor and Empress narcissi, for collection of twenty-four varieties of narcissi, and for forty-eight pansies. C. S. Minot had the best Glory of Leiden narcissi, Martin Sullivan being second. Edward Parker, gardener to Oliver Ames, was second for pansies, and H. Stewart, gardener to Cornelia Warren, third.

Among the miscellaneous displays, H. Stewart had some fine specimen plants of Calceolaria Golden Gem; Martin Sullivan a collection of early tulips; William Thatcher a group of well-flowered orchids, such as Calanthe veratrifolia, Cattleya Skinneri and C. Mossiæ, and Lælia purpurata, also a fine vase of Clarkia Salmon Queen. Alex. McKay had some fine specimen standard hydrangeas and laburnums. Thomas Watt had a display of petunias. Mrs. E. M. Gill and the Lowthorpe School of Horticulture had displays of cut flowers. Patten & Co. showed a large vase of Carnation Princess Dagmar, and Wm. Thatcher a specimen plant of Gloriosa Rothschildiana.

F. W. Fletcher received a silver medal for Antirrhinum Nelrose, of which he put up excellent spikes. H. S. Rand staged thirty-six varieties of scented-leaved pelargoniums, in 5-inch and 6-inch pots, probably the finest display of the kind ever seen in America, collected from various sources the last two or three years. They were awarded a certificate of merit. Some of the best varieties were: Filicifolium odoratum, Scarlet Unique, graveolens, capitatum, Dale Park Beauty, quercifolium minor, Duchess of Devonshire, tomentosum, Prince of Orange, Radula, Apple, Lady Plymouth and Pretty Polly.

The Boston Market Gardeners' Association put up a splendid display of fifty bushel boxes of choice vegetables. Big Boston proved to be the champion in the lettuce class, and Lister's Prolific among tomatoes.

Convention Topics.

The convention garden now is in excellent shape for exhibits and it is hoped for the credit of the trade and the S. A. F. that all garden space will be spoken for at once. Big growers who take a small space, or none at all, will make a grand mistake. In no portion of America is the public more interested horticulturally than in Massachusetts and neighboring states. Greater Boston has considerably over 1,000,000 population, and within fifty miles we have a population of over 3,000,000, which only New York exceeds. This convention garden will surely be visited by 500,000 people and surely any

A general meeting of all the local S. A. F. committees was held at Horticultural hall, May 15, and there was a large attendance. Patrick Welch presided and W. P. Edgar acted as secretary. Mr. Welch outlined the work to be done and called on the chairmen of the various committees for remarks. J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Thomas Roland, E. A. Peirce, W. R. Nicholson, W. J. Kennedy, A. P. FROM MISSOURI

These gentlemen have "been shown" the great virtues of our SEEDLING Silver Pink Snapdragon, and here is how they "come back" at us:

Springfield, Mo., May 8, 1914.

Mr. G. S. Ramsburg, Somersworth, N. H.

Dear Sir: We inclose our check for $5.00 for seven pkts. of seed of Silver Pink. We are doing fine with it and have grown some splendid blossoms, which are a grand color and great seller with us. This is our first trial, and we are pleased.

Very truly, RAUGH BROS.

Every mail brings repeat orders. It is the ONE Snap to grow, and right now is the time to sow seed for fall and early winter blossoms. Don't delay. Price of seed, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Cash.

Its color is beautiful—a clear, silvery, sea-shell pink. Is a strong, stocky grower and the most productive variety in existence.

tion. The question of the trade exhibit in Mechanics building being closed except to the trade found disfavor with many of the members, who felt that the S. A. F. executive committee was adopting a narrow policy in restricting admissions and that the general public should be admitted free, at least some part of each day. No resolution was adopted.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club May 19 there was an attendance of 120 and two new members were elected. An unusually fine lecture was given by Charles O. Bailey, of the state forestry department. There was interesting discussion on the convention garden and on cooperation with the national organization of gardeners. It was decided to have a ladies' night June 15.

Exhibits included specimen Calceolaria Stewartii and standard hydrangeas from Alexander McKay; Antirrhinum Nelrose from F. W. Fletcher & Co., and a collection of French hydrangeas and Hydrangea Otaksa, also mushrooms and Lister's tomato from W. N. Craig.

Various Notes.

B. Hammond Tracy is finishing planting his gladiolus bulblets this week. Up to May 15 he had set out 2,500,000 bulbs. He says the demand for choice varieties has been greater than ever.

W. H. Elliott has completed repairs on the wrecked portion of his big house at Madbury, N. H., and the benches are planted with roses. He still gets a superior lot of Christie-Miller, Ward, Killarney Queen and Richmond roses, in addition to the ordinary Killarneys.

The Horticultural Club of Boston paid a visit to South Lancaster, Mass., May 20, to visit the estates of Bayard Thayer and John E. Thayer, the bulb displays being the special attractions.

Visitors last week included W. Atlee Burpee, David Burpee, Robert Scott, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Scott, of Philadelphia; Victor Morgan and William Plumb, of New York.

The local finance committee on S. A. F. entertainment starts off with two $500 and three $200 contributions and will assuredly get all the money needed.

Alexander Montgomery, of the Waban Rose Conservatories, says the frequent and heavy rains have kept compost piles so saturated that it has seriously delayed the housing of the soil and the planting of roses.

Penn is this week using large spaces in all the leading dailies advertising his special Memorial day wreaths. Business here was good last week.

F. E. Palmer, of Brookline, has been kept busy on landscape work since the ground opened. He says that he finds the fickle California privet killed to Before coming to an end, I must tell my friends of the DOUBLE BLUE CORNFLOWER. It is a lovely flower—the young and old man's, lady's and child's coat friend. O how happy they are, the wearers of these beautiful blue flowers, when seen strolling the streets of the great cities. We are well supplied for the season and offer large 3-inch pots at only $5.00 per 100; 2½-inch, $3.00 per 100. Plant them outdoors and they will bloom constantly for you until the frost kills them.

Visitors to Boston at this season who wish to see a really beautiful rock garden, splendidly planted, with an eye to color harmony and including a host of rare and unique plants, should visit the estate of General Stephen M. Weld, of Dedham, where Thomas Coles is head gardener. The display here will be a revelation to those who have seen only the crude artificial erections usually called rock gardens.

BEGONIAS We desire to call the attention of prospective buyers of Begonia Lonsdale. Begonias have been one of our specialties for years. This year we are growing more Begonias than ever before, being the largest Begonia growers in the world of the above varieties. This branch of our business has been built up on the quality of the goods we have delivered to our customers. We desire that each and every Begonia grower send us his order, or at least a share of it, for comparison sake. Don't delay. Orders booked now will be delivered in June. All plants to be twice shifted and shipped from 2½-inch pots. All of the very highest quality.

BEGONIA LONSDALE

This variety is considered far superior to the original type, making a finer shaped plant and holding the flowers much better. The color is a little lighter than the original Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

3 -inch pots.....$25 per 100

2½-inch pots.....$30 per 100

BEGONIA KONKURENT

A Greatly Improved Begonia Cincinnati

The above variety is a German introduction, and we have tried it for three years. It makes a much better shaped plant than Cincinnati, is freer flowering, more shapely and, next to Norwood, is the best keeping Begonia we have ever handled; the original flowers remaining on the plants for several months.

We offer strong plants, June delivery.

We are now growing more Dracaenas, in greater variety, than any firm in this country.

Arboretum. Of the lilacs only two varieties, oblata and hyacinthiflora plena, are open. It is many years since the season was so late.

Miss Ethel Violet Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Fisher, will be married June 3, to Charles Elmer Clapp, at the home of her parents in Ellis.

At the present date, May 18, it looks as though lilacs, Narcissus poeticus and Darwin and cottage tulips, among outdoor flowers, would be in their prime for Memorial day. Darwin tulips are just commencing to open in warm locations. So late is the season at Tewksbury, Mass., that M. A. Patten did not start planting out carnations until the present week, the ground previously being too wet and cold.

As the result of a canvass made by a committee of the board of trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, 100 new members have been added to that society, the bulk being life members. W. N. Craig.

NEWPORT, R. I.

W. E. Glyn has been granted permission to erect a small greenhouse and potting shed on Bellevue avenue, costing $3,000.

Thomas Keenan is to build an addition to his greenhouse on Lee avenue, costing $10,000.

Miss Coggeshall, bookkeeper for Gibson Bros., has returned to her duties after spending her vacation in Washington.

The Newport flower show of August 13 and 14 will probably be held on the grounds of Wakehurst, the estate of James J. Van Allen. W. H. M.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—H. W. Allersma, of the Benjamin Avenue Nursery, reports Mothers' day business the best ever. He will shortly build a greenhouse, 28x120 feet, and a new shipping room and boiler house. Everything in the nursery department was sold out and large orders have been taken for fall planting.

AMHERST, MASS.

The recent landscape gardening exhibition at the Massachusetts Agricultural College was really a civic art show, the main object being to arouse interest in problems of civic improvement in this community. The exhibit was prepared by students of the department of landscape gardening and especially by the class studying civic art. The most important group of plans were those devoted to various improvements here in Amherst, such as designs for two new playgrounds, location of new postoffice, improvement of parish house grounds, school grounds, etc. These proved to be of great interest to the citizens of the town.

Along with these there was a splendid exhibit from school grounds throughout Massachusetts. There were fine exhibits from Harvard University School of Landscape Architecture and from the University of Illinois; also an interesting group of plans prepared by John Nolen, landscape architect, of Cambridge, Mass., and another interesting group prepared by one of our old students, Louis Brandt, during his residence at the University of Liverpool, England.

The room was tastefully decorated by the department of floriculture and by the students in the landscape gardening class. The exhibition was largely attended and, on account of its novelty and its local applications, aroused wide interest. This is something a little new in the line of college extension work and of course cannot be undertaken in many places, but the results in this case were entirely satisfactory. F. A. Waugh.

Fostoria, O.—The Fostoria Floral Co. reports an exceptionally good season, though late.

VERBENA PLANTS FOR SALE

J. L. DILLON, BLOOMSBURG, PA.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.

The Market.

While most of the florists are not so busy as they would like to be, business as a whole is showing a slight improvement. Although stock of several varieties is scarce, there is plenty in other lines to take its place. Geraniums and other bedding stock are moving fast, and there will probably be but few left over. Flowers are plentiful and cheap, and unless June weddings help some, it looks as though the season might end a poor one.

Various Notes.

Albert Warner, of the Pleasant View Greenhouses, reports that the demand for his stock exceeds his supply.

Several of the local florists have recently been the victims of some mean practical jokers. They have been called up on the phone and given an order for flowers to be delivered at a certain address C. O. D. When the florist or his delivery boy arrives at the address given, he finds no person of the name given living there. The jokers even go so far as to order a funeral piece, saying that he or she is the brother or sister of the person dead and that he or she will pay for the piece when it comes. Of course, the florist is the loser, as the flowers used in the piece cannot be used again. No one seems to understand what the object of the joker or jokers can be.

E. D. Tucker, of Saylesville, has received an order for 1,200 geraniums for the G. A. R. men for their Memorial day decorating.

The Everett Forestry Co., of Providence, and Springfield, Mass., and H. F. Frost & Co., of Boston, Gloucester and Newport, have joined forces and will now go under the firm name of the Everett & Frost Co., with main offices at 29 Weybosset street, Providence, under the personal management of Charles J. Everett. T. F. B.

Canton, O.—Chas. Lindacher expects to tear down his houses after Memorial day business is past and build a show house in their place, to be connected with the office.

New Rose, Killarney Brilliant

THE MOST VALUABLE ROSE INTRODUCED IN MANY YEARS.

We consider this new rose—a sport from the original pink Killarney—the most valuable rose that has been introduced in many years. It is well named Killarney Brilliant, on account of its brilliant color.

It is a great improvement on the original pink Killarney; first, because of its much more brilliant color, it being almost crimson in bright weather, while in midwinter—in dull, cloudy and foggy weather,—when the original pink Killarney loses its brilliancy and becomes badly faded, Killarney Brilliant is as bright and deep a pink as the original variety at its best. In addition to its great superiority in color, the flower is almost twice as large, having from twenty-five to forty full-sized petals.

It has the same desirable color that Killarney Queen possesses, but has double the number of petals, making it a very double and a fuller flower; and it is also very much more productive, having the same habit of growth and the same freedom of bloom as its parent.

We have watched Killarney Brilliant growing during the past winter, planted in the same house with the original and the double pink Killarney, and when those varieties faded so as to be almost unmarketable, Killarney Brilliant was superb. We are thoroughly convinced that it will immediately supplant the original Killarney as the standard market variety, and that every up-to-date grower will be compelled to plant it, on account of its great superiority. A prominent rose grower, who has seen it growing, says it is the only rose he has ever seen that needs no advertising; it sells itself.

F. R. PIERSON CO., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, NEW YORK

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Market.

Owing to the cold, cloudy weather, flowers of all kinds are scarce. Business last week was good. The retailers have largely thrown out their carnations to make room for bedding plants, so that most of them are now dependent upon the wholesalers for cut flowers. Mothers' day is becoming one of the big days of the year. More flowers could have been sold on that day, if they could have been obtained.

Various Notes.

John Coombs did a big business on Mothers' day, but did not have enough carnations. At the greenhouses, on Benton street, bedding out is now in full swing.

The Linden Florist handled 5,000 carnations on Mothers' day. The force has been exceedingly busy with funeral work.

The Blatchley Co., at Meriden, reports business as good.

At the establishment of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, the carnations are now planted out. This method of growing carnations is fast giving way to entire indoor culture. About 60,000 are now planted in benches, 4 x 4, and will be replanted as fast as the old stock is thrown out. H. Neubrand and Harry Anderson are now in from the road, to help out during the Memorial day rush. John Rask, who has been with this firm for the last six years, is said to have accepted a position as rose grower for F. Fallon, of Roanoke, Va. John Quinn, of the retail department, is handing out cigars on the arrival of a boy.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Downtown retail business has slackened since Mothers' day, but those who handle bedding plants are bustling with preparation for what is expected to be the biggest spring season in the history of the trade in this city. The arrival of warmer weather has resulted in an increase in cut flower production and there is now an abundance of stock for the existing demand. It is anticipated that most of the growers will be in good crop by Memorial day and that there will be a good supply of stock in all lines except peonies, which, of course, must come from the south at this season. An increase in business is being prepared for.

Various Notes.

The garden adjoining the Armory, which gained national celebrity at the time of the S. A. F. convention, because of the exhibits bedded there, now makes a brave show with tulips and other spring bulbous flowers. Nearly 100,000 bulbs now occupy the beds, the largest planting ever seen in Minneapolis. The garden made so big a hit last summer that the park department is continuing it, with Mr. Wirth in charge. Summer plants will follow the bulbs.

The Donaldson florists' department has a new Kissel Kar truck of elaborate body design for flower deliveries exclusively. It is one of the handsomest trucks in the city and quite an ad for Mr. Desmond's department. The new detached store to be occupied by the flower and plant section will be ready for occupancy about June 15. The fixtures are being installed. As a result of Mr. Desmond's trip to Chicago May 17, E. Farley has joined the force in the flower section.

Bluffton, Ind.—Myers & Co. have big success with the Enchantress family; a fine crop for Mothers' day swelled the bank account.

Dayton, O.—Harry Jergens and Peter Jergens, Jr., members of the firm of Peter Jergens' Sons, are going to dissolve partnership. The former will continue in this line; the plans of the latter are not known.

CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS

Transplanted, finest strain obtainable, 10 varieties equally divided, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

BOSTON FERNS

To grow on, out of bench, strong plants, $20.00, $15.00, $10.00 and $5.00 per 100; runners, $15.00 per 1000.

BEGONIA CHATELAINE

Finest pink Begonia, in bloom all year round, good for pots and bedding, easy to propagate; 2-in., $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

PRIMULA OBCONICA

Grandiflora and Gigantea, in separate colors, finest strain, transplanted, ready to pot; $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.

CYCLAMEN.

200,000 GIANT FLOWERING CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS AND BLOOMING PLANTS.

For the last 16 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed-bearing cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers that don't have to be petted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five-petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize winner. Received first prize at the Cleveland show and first and second at Toledo, early November, when blooming cyclamen were scarce.

STRONG AUGUST SOWN SEEDLINGS, once transplanted, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Cash with order. Cultural directions with all orders.
C. Winterich, Cyclamen Specialist, Defiance, O.

GLADIOLI.

FALL BLOOMING GLADIOLUS.

The special vacancy in florists' flowers in late autumn provided for by the Autumn Queen gladiolus. This extra beautiful variety blooms late, buds resist early frosts; bulbs keep well for June planting after the rush is over. Color creamy white with an exquisite pinkish tint on portion of petals; fine spike, with flowers all facing one way, for florists' work; splendid substance; extra fine grower and bloomer. Florists and city dealers captivated with it for autumn trade. Frank Winans, a Petoskey florist, says: "I have tried out Mr. Ward's Autumn Queen gladiolus and think it well named. For floral work I find it fully equal to America, and as to lateness, I used them from the field during the past season as late as the first of November, after nearly everything else was gone. It is a boon to florists."

To quickly introduce this variety, I will send any florist 25 first size bulbs, by parcel post prepaid, cash with order, for $1.00. Local checks accepted.

Satisfaction guaranteed.

SALVIAS.

SALVIA BONFIRE.

10,000 Salvia Bonfire from selected seed. We grow all our salvias from seed, not cuttings, thereby avoiding a hard, woody plant that blooms early but stands still balance of season. These salvias were all shifted from 2-in. to 3-in. last week of April, are now making a nice growth and, while they will not bloom as quickly as plants from cuttings, when they do come you have something that satisfies your customers, and that is what you want. Price, $3.00 per 100 whether you take 100 or 1000. Cash with order.
F. E. Cremer, Florist, Hanover, Pa.

Salvia splendens, transplanted, 60c per 100; $5.00 1000 while they last. These are not a spindly seedling or a rooted cutting forced "to death," but a well grown plant with a strong and healthy root system, with plenty of soil adhered to it so it will stand shipping. See my vegetable plant ad.
H. J. Potomkin, R. 3, Muncie, Ind.

Genuine white salvia, same type as Bedman or Bonfire, but pure white. These are extra fine, ready for shift at once, many of them will produce a cutting at once. Try them! We guarantee these to come white, as we have grown them three seasons, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000. 500 at 1000 rate. Cash or c. o. d., please.

Bailey's Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture.

First volume just off the press. Remaining volumes will be issued as soon as possible. The following are a few of the features to be found in this new work:

KEY TO IDENTIFICATION OF PLANTS.

This is a device to enable one to find the name of a plant. The name thus found is quickly referred to under its alphabetical location, where full information will be found in regard to it.

SYNOPSIS OF PLANT KINGDOM.

This is one of the most important features of the new edition. It constitutes a general running account of the classes, orders and groups of plants, with a brief sketch or characterization of 215 of the leading families comprising those that yield practically all the cultivated plants. These family descriptions give the botanical characters and the number of genera and species and the ranges.

THE GLOSSARY.

This is an analysis of all technical terms that are used in the work and in similar works.

TRANSLATION AND PRONUNCIATION OF LATIN NAMES.

In Volume I is inserted a list of between 2,000 and 3,000 Latin words used as species—names of plants, giving the English equivalent or translation and the pronunciation.

CLASS ARTICLES.

Special effort has been made to secure the best cultural advices for the plants requiring peculiar or particular handling.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

There are 24 colored plates, 96 full-page sepia halftones, and more than 4,000 engravings which serve as guides in the text.

This work consists of six large quarto volumes, more than 3,600 pages, 500 collaborators, approximately 4,000 genera, 15,000 species and 40,000 plant names. Price, $6.00 per volume; $36.00 per set. Can be paid for one volume at a time.

Greenhouse Heating.

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

PIPING A PARTITIONED HOUSE.

A little advice as to how my new greenhouse should be piped would be much appreciated. The house in question is 21x60 and runs east and west. It is nine feet high to the ridge. The west end is boarded up; the east end is all glass. The south wall, which is four feet high to the eaves, is all glass; the north side has a 3-foot concrete wall and is protected by another greenhouse, three feet away. The house I wish to pipe is built on sloping ground and is four feet lower than the north house. I wish to pipe this house with 2-inch pipe for hot water. I shall divide the house into two 30-foot parts, heating the east end to 50 degrees and the west end to 60 degrees, in zero weather. The location is southeastern Pennsylvania.

E. F. C.

From the data given in the letter, it is not possible to determine where the boiler is located or whether it is so placed as to secure a good circulation. From the fact that the west end of the house is boarded up, it is inferred that the boiler house is located at that end of the greenhouse.

A 4-inch main flow and return will answer for this house, but I would suggest that three 2½-inch flow pipes be used inside the house. One of them could be on each plate and the other about twenty inches below the ridge. At the farther end of the house connect each flow pipe with a coil of three 2-inch returns, and carry these back through both of the rooms. These, with the flow pipes, will be sufficient to furnish 50 degrees. To secure 60 degrees in the west end of the house, an additional pipe should be taken off from one pipe in each coil, making twelve returns in the west end of the house.

THE FUEL MARKET.

The situation in the coal trade continues to be somewhat gloomy—not gloomy to the florists, for the florists are on the bright side of the dark cloud, but gloomy as viewed by the coal dealers. However, a few rays of light are now penetrating to the coal men, for the latest reports state that "spot buying of coal has been improved, on account of the fact that railroads, public utility companies and factories have about run through their storage piles and consequently are back in the market to replenish their coal bins." The coal companies also state that contracting has begun and that last year's contracts are being renewed at last year's prices. These developments have brought a more cheerful aspect to the market than has been apparent for some time.

Still, the improvement is only slight. The wholesale coal trade is less gloomy, it is said, simply "because business has begun to move again after six weeks of absolute stagnation and no production." And it is only in the bituminous market that the signs of renewed life are visible; "nothing has happened," it is said, "to improve the tone of the anthracite trade."

The Black Diamond, from which the foregoing facts were principally gleaned, goes on to say: "The one thing which has disturbed the trade somewhat within the last week has been the announcement that tariffs have been filed with the interstate commerce commission by the major anthracite carrying roads, calling for an advance of 25 cents per ton on the transportation charge on anthracite effective in Chicago and the territory reached through Chicago.

"The smokeless coal market has been decidedly easy. This has found expression mainly in smaller shipments to the Chicago territory from the mines. Flat buildings in Chicago, naturally, take the major portion of the tonnage. The weather has been so warm that consumption of coal has been cut down and therefore the movement from the retail yards has been small for May. Most retailers under contract have been taking in some coal, but naturally only a few have been buying on the open market. This has restricted shipments to the minimum and has jeopardized the chance of any one who ships coal in on consignment. A little of that coal came into the market and was sold at such prices as the market would pay, mine-run seldom bringing more than $1 per ton. Owing to the fact that the major companies which are

MATERIAL FOR SMOKESTACK.

We should like to get some advice in regard to building a stack for our boilers. Several persons here have suggested that we build it of brick up to a height of twenty feet and then build the additional forty feet of sewer tile. We should like to know whether anyone has tried this kind of stack, or whether it would be advisable to build in this manner or to build entirely of brick.

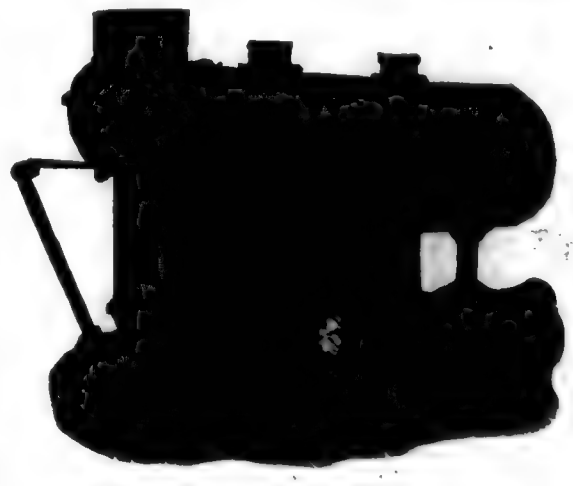
J. H. T.

The size of the chimney has much to do in determining the material of which it should be constructed. When it is more than two feet in diameter I would always use brick or concrete, but for those between one and two feet in diameter the relative cost of the two materials at a given locality would determine whether a brick or a steel stack should be used. A properly constructed brick or concrete stack is far more durable than a steel stack and is generally preferred. So far as the value of sewer pipes for chimneys is concerned, while they might be used for small chimneys, eight to twelve inches in diameter, and where not over twenty feet of tile is used in a chimney thirty feet high, I would not care to employ them in the construction of either large or tall chimneys.

INSULATING UNDERGROUND PIPE.

I intend to heat my dwelling house from my greenhouse boiler, using hot water under mercury pressure. The boiler is 225 feet from the residence. Please describe the best method of insulating the flow and return pipes, so as to lose the least possible percentage of heat in transmission. R. M. G.

One of the simplest methods of insulating underground heating pipes is to cover them with ordinary asbestos wrappings, and then, as each length of pipe is connected, slip over it sewer pipe which is about three inches larger than the heating pipe after the wrappings have been put on.



Every twenty feet provide some pipe-support which will allow the pipe to expand and contract. A simple form consists of pieces of ½-inch round iron, with the ends flattened so that they will fit into the joints of the tile. By slipping over these rods, after one end has been flattened, short pieces of ¾-inch pipe which will act as rollers, the movement due to the expansion and contraction of the pipes can be provided for. Either strips of iron should be firmly wired to the under side of the pipes wherever there is a roller, or a little of the wrapping should be cut away on the under side so that the pipe may rest upon the rollers.

For larger pipes, or where sewer pipe would be expensive, a square concrete conduit large enough to hold both heating pipes, and covered with concrete slabs, may be constructed.

Painesville, O.—C. Merkel & Son have started the erection of another large greenhouse, at the south end of the range. This is as far as the establishment can spread in this direction.

PLANTLIFE has several advantages over liquid insecticides on the market. Containing refined tobacco dust it can be used to mix with the soil, acting as an excellent fertilizer, at the same time destroying worms and insects in the ground before they have a chance to reach the plant.

The Market.

Weather conditions during the last week were anything but conducive to the production of first-class stock. On one day the mercury approached the 100 mark, while on succeeding days it hovered below 40 degrees. Thus the flowers were alternately forced and retarded, causing the prices to jump around considerably. While there is plenty of greenhouse stock, there is not an oversupply of any one inside flower. There is an oversupply of snowballs, dogwood and fruit blossoms, and the competition produced by these is felt to no little extent. Sweet peas are moving better than they have been and are bringing better prices. Good Spencer sweet peas command as high as $15 per thousand, while other varieties are selling at from $5 to $6 per thousand. Gladioli have made their appearance and are in some demand at $8 per hundred. Some few special Americas sold at $10. The supply of carnations has slackened greatly and the ruling price is about $2 per hundred. Stephanotis is coming into the market in large quantities and is in good demand because of the large amount of funeral work. Gardenias are plentiful and are meeting with a ready sale. Some good snapdragon is to be had, but is not in demand.

Various Notes.

Gude Bros. Co. last week furnished for the fire department of the District of Columbia nearly 100 wreaths to be placed on the graves of deceased firemen, following a custom that has been in vogue for many years. Saturday, May 9, was the department's Memorial day and early in the morning three of the large supply wagons, each heavily loaded with wreaths, accompanied by detachments of firemen, proceeded to the various cemeteries throughout the city.

Corporation Counsel Syme has announced that a storeman or huckster who sells flowers in connection with other merchandise for a limited period need not be considered a regular florist and thus required to obtain a florist's license, the fee for which is $15 per annum. This opinion was rendered in connection with the recent agitation to drive from the streets of Washington the many flower venders who have been competing with the stores, at the request of attorneys for A. B. Garden, of Anacostia, who has been wholesaling flowers and plants to marketmen and others who have been haled into the police courts for selling flowers without a florist's license.

Mr. and Mrs. William Rehder, of Wilmington, N. C., paid a visit to this city while en route to Pittsburgh, Pa., last week. Robert Shoch, of M. Rice Co., and Sidney Bayersdorfer, both of Philadelphia, Pa., made their periodic visits to the local stores. C. L. L.

Scotch Soot

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Last week's market proved to be a good one The supply was fair, while a good demand for most of the various kinds of stock offered kept the market pretty well cleaned up the larger part of the week Shipping business was good, particularly in ferns and hanging baskets.

The supply of roses continues good and all sell nicely American Beauties have been cleaning up regularly. The carnation cut is a little larger than it was, but all of the receipts are taken up each day. The better grade of stock is bringing quite good prices. The Easter lily supply is still too large for requirements, and as a result prices are not high. The oversupply, however, is no longer large. Some fine callas are coming into the wholesale houses. Both valley and orchids are in large supply, but have only an ordinary call. The sweet pea cut is not large and is rather indifferent in quality. Some good peonies are to be had. Other offerings are stocks, pansies and iris.

The supply of greens is large and adequate. Southern ferns are enjoying a good call.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell reports that he is already receiving many orders for peonies and jasmines for Memorial day.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been receiving large quantities of fine valley.

L. H. Kyrk received the first of the season's cornflowers from Geo. Klotter the first part of last week.

Aphine
The Insecticide that kills plant Lice of every species

The Recognized Standard Insecticide

W. N. Craig writes in Florists' Review (March 5, 1914): "Scale on greenhouse plants is not easy to get rid of, as doses which are sufficiently strong to kill the scale will usually disfigure the plants at the same time. I have found APHINE a first-class remedy for scale, and if you will apply it according to directions you will kill and loosen the scales, although they will not fall off, as will some other pests."

It will only require the hose to wash off dead scale.

A remedy that is efficient in destroying scale will destroy green, black, white fly, red spider, thrips and mealy bug.

$1.00 per quart—$2.50 per gallon

FUNGINE will destroy mildew, rust and bench fungi. 75c per quart—$2.00 per gallon

VERMINE will destroy root maggots, eel, wire and cut worms in the soil.

$1.00 per quart—$3.00 per gallon

SCALINE will destroy San Jose and all hard scale and red spider on fruit and ornamental trees and bushes.

$1.50 per gal.-10 gals., $10.00-50 gals., $37.50

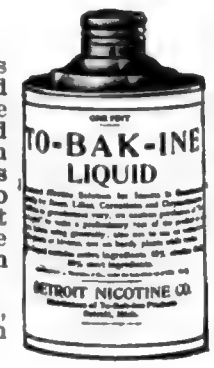
TO-BAK-INE

[TRADE MARK]

"THE OLD RELIABLE"

THE ABOVE BIRD'S-EYE VIEW REPRESENTS THE ENLARGED DETROIT NICOTINE CO.'S PLANT FOR THE MANUFACTURE OF TO-BAK-INE PRODUCTS.

The demand for To-Bak-Ine became so large that the output could not keep pace and during the summer of 1913 the size and capacity of the factory has been doubled. All orders can now be taken care of promptly.

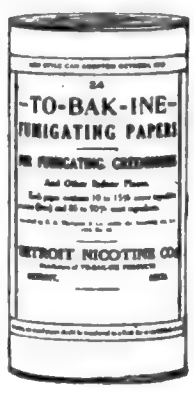


The use of tobacco stems and tobacco dust as an insecticide is well known; also the fact that the burning of them is frequently dangerous to greenhouse plants, due to the presence of ammonia, while they often have little or no effect on the insects, owing to the great variation of the Nicotine strength, sometimes containing practically none. Therefore it is impossible for the florist to secure satisfactory results unless he uses standardized products containing a definite amount of Nicotine. This quality is found in To-Bak-Ine Products.

The sales of To-Bak-Ine Products now are double those of previous years; we do not know how there could be a stronger testimonial to their merit.

TO-BAK-INE LIQUID

is a concentrated solution of refined Nicotine, always containing a definite amount (45% nicotine), adjusted by chemical assay, making it a most efficient insecticide for spraying or vaporizing. Free from ammonia and tobacco odor, makes it especially desirable for use on greenhouse plants and vegetables for killing insect pests and leaving no after odor or taste. TO-BAK-INE LIQUID is without doubt the cheapest insecticide on the market for spraying; its cost is nominal considering the value received and results obtained. No labor is required in making up solution.



Put up in ⅛-pint, ¼-pint, ½-pint, pint, ½-gallon, gallon and 5-gallon cans. Special 10 and 20-gallon casks for large users.

SPECIAL NOTICE

We wish to direct your special attention to the fact that when a florist buys Nicotine products by measure he gets more Nicotine than when he buys by weight. Most persons believe eight pounds is a gallon—but one gallon of To-Bak-Ine Liquid, containing 45% Nicotine, weighs about 8¾ pounds and contains about 27,500 grains Nicotine.

To-Bak-Ine Liquid is the strongest and most highly refined Nicotine product offered, and costs no more, but less, than others when results are made comparative.

TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING PAPER

is an especially prepared paper, each sheet being saturated with a definite amount of pure nicotine, making it a most valuable and extremely convenient and neat insecticide for fumigating purposes; it is also free from ammonia, which is present in ordinary tobacco smoke and extracts. TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING PAPERS are recommended for use on delicate flowers and plants.

Put up in hermetically sealed tin cans of 24 full length sheets; ½ case, 6 cans, 144 sheets; 1 case, 12 cans, 288 sheets.

TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING AND DUSTING POWDER

In some cases a slow and long fumigation is desirable, and therefore offer to the trade a fumigating powder for this purpose. This powder is unlike others on the market in that it is practically free from sand, therefore uniform in insect killing properties. Many of the powders offered are nothing more than tobacco dust, containing a large percentage of sand and practically no Nicotine, or very little.

TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING AND DUSTING POWDER is also a finely powdered product and especially adapted for dusting or sprinkling on flowers, plants and vegetables.

Put up in 50 and 100-lb. bags.

To-Bak-Ine Products have been on the market many years and, if you happen to be one who never has used them, we urge you to try them, feeling sure they will prove so helpful to you that you will become one of the many thousands of regular users.

The Market.

It will be only a short time until Memorial day will be with us, and everyone is making preparations to handle the rush. A number of orders are already booked and indications are that the week of Memorial day will show some splendid sales.

Carnations are coming in more heavily than they have been for some time and the quality of the stock is fine. In fact, it is as good as we have ever seen it at this time of year. If the weather conditions remain as they are, the supply of this stock will be sufficient to meet the large demand which will be made on it for Memorial day. Roses are more plentiful than they have been and the supply is sufficient to take care of all orders. This stock looks exceptionally fine and is in good condition. The Russell rose is still off crop, but is coming in more heavily right along.

Sweet peas are not so plentiful as they have been and the market is cleaning up daily on this stock. A large number of sweet peas in this market are received from Watertown, Wis. The old crop is just about gone and the new crop is beginning to come in. Bulb stock is still in the market, but is about done for. It is getting poorer every day and is hardly fit for shipping. Most of the cut is disposed of locally. Peonies are just beginning to be seen in the market and the stock looks fine. Indications are that there will be a large supply for Memorial day.

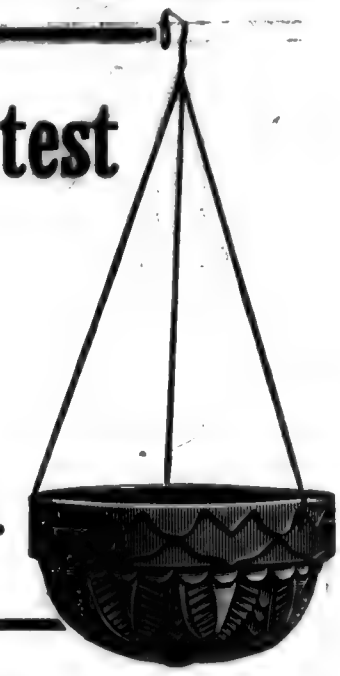
Various Notes.

Nic Zweifel, carnation specialist, of North Milwaukee, will sail for Europe this week. Mr. Zweifel has devoted his time to business quite closely for some years and has undoubtedly earned this little sojourn in the old countries of the world. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Zweifel and his young daughter. He plans to be away until September, if not later. His business should not suffer in his absence, as he leaves L. Thorpe in charge.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. has engaged Miss Irma Jens to fill the position left vacant by the death of Miss Rahn recently.

Adam Zender, of Rogers Park, Chicago, was the guest of F. H. Holton for a few days last week.

Other visitors during the week were: Ira L. Cady, Fox Lake, Wis.; F. W. Bleise, of the Waukesha Floral Co., Waukesha, Wis., and Clarke Adams, Racine, Wis. H. J. S.



Crawfordsville, Ind.—Walter R. Paxson reports the seed and plant business extra good this spring.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Trade conditions are good or bad, depending somewhat on whom you ask. The large quantities of lilac and outdoor blossoms have affected trade to some extent. There is nothing doing in social lines; still, in comparison with other lines of business, the cut flower trade has more than held its own. The weather has continued cool, with heavy frosts May 14 and 15. The market is well supplied with lilac, southern peonies, iris and, in fact, everything needed. The plantsmen are sending out a good many bedding plants, in spite of the cool weather. The prices of this stock are about as usual.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's entertainment and banquet at the Fort Pitt hotel, May 14, was a success in every sense of the word. About 125 persons were present. An illustrated lecture on a trip through South America was a feature of the evening.

J. W. Glenn, of Kittanning, has the sympathy of his many friends in the loss of his wife, who died May 14. She had been an invalid for about a year, although able to go about her home. Her death was unexpected, being caused by a stroke. The funeral took place May 16. Clarke.

Court news in the Post May 8 included this item: "W. H. Carney, a wholesale florist, pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with embezzling $435 from the Powers Florist Co., Danville, Pa., and the court placed him on probation for one year with the understanding that he make restitution."

HELENA, MONT.

Mothers' Day.

Mothers' day was the best ever. Trade showed a substantial increase over last year and all kinds of flowers sold. White carnations and snapdragons in the lighter shades were the general call. The local papers drew attention to bright flowers for the mother living, with the result that there was a general clean-up.

Various Notes.

The Peter Miller establishment reports fine stock for Memorial day and looks forward to a big day.

The State Nursery Co. reports an excellent Mothers' day business, but flowers of all kinds were scarce. Both wholesale and retail departments are now busy catering to the bedding plant trade. J. W. H.

MANUFACTURER OF

GREENHOUSE SHADING

No. 6 High Street, MORRISTOWN, N. J.

AFTER twenty-five years' experience in Greenhouse work, with Lord & Burnham Company, in the glazing and painting department, I am convinced that what is most needed in this line is a good shading, and I am pleased to advise you that I have the real thing, which I am sure you will find to be just what you are looking for

This shading is beneficial to the painted wood, as it does not contain any gasoline or naphtha which would destroy the paint In addition, it is beneficial to the glass also, for you will find that when the shading is removed the glass retains its former brilliancy.

As to its application, this is a very easy matter. It can be either sprayed on or put on with a soft brush. For real good work, however, I would recommend the use of a soft brush.

Another advantage of this shading is that when it is no longer needed, it can be removed without any difficulty, leaving the glass, as before stated, with its original brilliancy.

I am making this up in gallon cans, in three shades—light green, light blue and pure white. When ordering, kindly mention the color desired.

I trust that you will kindly favor me with a trial order to prove its worth, after which I have no doubt whatever but that you will continue its use.

Four Sharp Gimlets—How to Get Them

A gimlet, as everybody knows, is a sharp pointed tool to bore holes in wood.

Facts are gimlets that fill untruths full of holes. We have made four particularly sharp gimlets for boring right into the untruths of greenhouse constructions and estimates. They are in the form of four pithily-pointed pieces of printed matter (one is a booklet). Two of them have already been mailed to several thousand whose names are on our mailing list. Here are the names of these four gimlets:

1. No Use Trying to Get Along Without Me.
2. Putting Your Finger on the Spot.
3. A Pair of Dividers.
4. The Holes in the Arguments.

How about you—did you get the first two? If you didn't, then sign the coupon; tear it off and mail to us and we will see that you get all four of the gimlets. Every one will have a sharp point so you can put it to work at once.

Cut this off here—mail it, and along will come the four gimlets.

The Market.

The trade for Mothers' day was satisfactory. Everything in the cut flower line was cleaned up. While there was not much more stock this year than last, better prices were received. The demand for white carnations was heavy and the supply soon was taken up. Flowers for the table, with which to honor Mothers' day, made business quite brisk.

Spring business is in full blast and bedding plants of all kinds are being planted. The bedding business is two weeks in advance of other years. Funeral work is good and helps to keep the market cleaned up on cut flowers. Carnations are in short supply, even though the flowers are smaller than they were several weeks ago. Roses are in good shape for this time of the year.

Various Notes.

R. S. Brown & Son report that business this year is the best they ever have had. They are practically all sold out and in a week or two every plant in their greenhouses will be gone. Funeral work has been the best they have had.

Business "across the line" for Mothers' day was good and the general report is that everybody is satisfied with results. White carnations were not equal to the demand.

Arthur Newell reported Mothers' day as being good. He says it is a fine thing for the trade, as it helps to keep the market cleaned up on cut flowers and makes business better all the way around.

"HERE COMES THE BRIDE"

When a woman weds it is the most momentous event of her life; neither she nor her family will overlook any shortcoming in the wedding flowers.

JUNE, the month of brides, is the most important on the calendar for any florist who makes a pretense of catering to the best trade in his town. The reason lies not so much in the extra quantity of high class work as in the unequaled opportunity to make or mar his professional reputation.

A big wedding is an advertising opportunity par excellence.

Work that Is Watched.

Rarely does any florist handle an order for flowers that receive the critical attention that is given to every wedding outfit. Not only do the flowers count for a great deal for or against the florist with the bride and her family, but the number of guests usually is large and everything connected with the wedding gets critical inspection. The flowers are more discussed and longer remembered than is the case with any other work of the florist.

It is an old saying that "a carpenter is known by his chips," which is almost the same as saying that a florist is known by the work he turns out for weddings. Let it be good work.

"Penny Wise."

Not many men can do good work without good materials, and no man can be sure of his wedding decorations and bouquets unless he uses first-class flowers. Never is it so well as in June to sacrifice a dollar or two of immediate profit as an insurance against the loss of much trade and many fat checks should a wedding job go wrong through the use of inferior stock. Buy dependable flowers, even if they cost a little more.

Remember that each wedding means a new home—a new customer. The florist who has the wedding order has the inside track: He can cement the bride's family to himself, and can gain the new family as his customer, or he can lose them both, irretrievably. If ever it is "better to be safe than sorry" it is with wedding flowers.

Government statistics show florists can count on there being 90 weddings per year for each 10,000 of population. The following is the percentage of weddings in each month of the year:

January ..	8%	July	7%
February....	5%	August.....	8%
March.....	6%	September	10%
April.....	8%	October	10%

Making a Reputation.

Once get a reputation in the matter of wedding flowers and the work will come, including orders from many of those who have patronized other florists on less important occasions.

To gain a reputation for one's wedding work something more is needed than good stock and the will to please. The florist should have a complete equipment of the up-to-date accessories—and he should keep them in perfect condition. When not in use they should be carefully protected from deterioration. A dirty, dusty kneeling stool is neither an asset nor an advertisement.

Accessories.

The florist who has equipped himself to take care of anything that comes along in the way of wedding work has a great advantage over the man who tackles the orders catch-as-catch-can. There must be, first of all, baskets for the bridal party. These are offered in such infinite variety, including novelty shapes and materials, that hardly any florists can afford to carry more than the staple styles. It is possible, however, to get the novelty baskets quickly, if need be, from the supply houses. Then there are bouquet holders and scarfs. These all progressive retailers can carry in stock, as they can be used for other work than weddings. Four Sharp Gimlets—How to Get Them

A gimlet, as everybody knows, is a sharp pointed tool to bore holes in wood.

Facts are gimlets that fill untruths full of holes. We have made four particularly sharp gimlets for boring right into the untruths of greenhouse constructions and estimates. They are in the form of four pithily-pointed pieces of printed matter (one is a booklet). Two of them have already been mailed to several thousand whose names are on our mailing list. Here are the names of these four gimlets:

1. No Use Trying to Get Along Without Me.
2. Putting Your Finger on the Spot.
3. A Pair of Dividers.
4. The Holes in the Arguments.

How about you—did you get the first two? If you didn't, then sign the coupon: tear it off and mail to us and we will see that you get all four of the gimlets. Every one will have a sharp point so you can put it to work at once.

Cut this off here—mail it, and along will come the four gimlets.

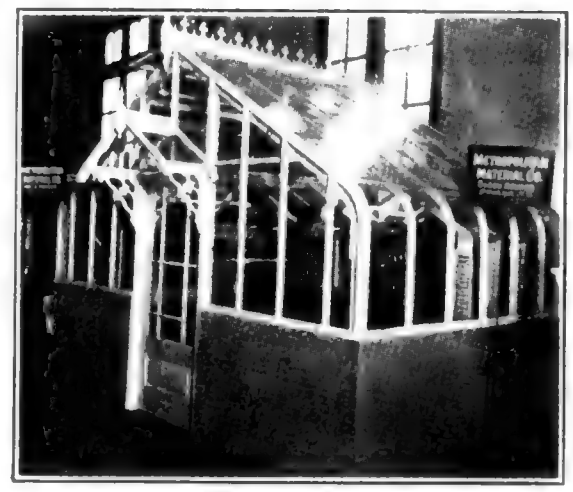
The Market.

The trade for Mothers' day was satisfactory. Everything in the cut flower line was cleaned up. While there was not much more stock this year than last, better prices were received. The demand for white carnations was heavy and the supply soon was taken up. Flowers for the table, with which to honor Mothers' day, made business quite brisk.



Spring business is in full blast and bedding plants of all kinds are being planted. The bedding business is two weeks in advance of other years. Funeral work is good and helps to keep the market cleaned up on cut flowers. Carnations are in short supply, even though the flowers are smaller than they were several weeks ago. Roses are in good shape for this time of the year.

Various Notes.

R. S. Brown & Son report that business this year is the best they ever have had. They are practically all sold out and in a week or two every plant in their greenhouses will be gone. Funeral work has been the best they have had.

Business "across the line" for Mothers' day was good and the general report is that everybody is satisfied with results. White carnations were not equal to the demand.

Arthur Newell reported Mothers' day as being good. He says it is a fine thing for the trade, as it helps to keep the market cleaned up on cut flowers and makes business better all the way around.

styles in feminine dress and will be about as much used this season as were the colonial bouquets last autumn.

Wedding gates, kneeling stool, aisle-posts, white satin-covered rope—the possession of these helps the florist to land the worth-while order; also it helps him to acquit himself with credit when it comes to the morning of the wedding. Of course every retailer has one or more pairs of the tall white "American Beauty" vases that are used far oftener for Easter lilies than for Beauties.

A Wedding Booklet.

Another thing the florist might well have is a wedding booklet. If he does business in a city of fair size the society columns of the daily or Sunday papers will furnish him with lists of engagements. Nothing in the nature of solicitation is permissible, but those who have tried it have found that a handsomely printed little booklet on wedding flowers, sent at such a time, is well received. Such a booklet must be well printed or it is a waste of money. It should be principally illustrations and the text should be written with extreme care to avoid the appearance of importunity for orders. The retailer with a large business can well afford to invest a fair sum in a good sized edition of such a booklet, for the reason that he can use them as opportunity presents as long as the supply lasts—there always will be engagements. And just after Easter it is a safe proposition to send a booklet by mail, to the home of each marriageable young lady whose address can be procured. It's worth the chance, a sort of long shot with odds that make one winner pay for a lot of misses.

THE BRIDE IN THE WINDOW.

The illustration at the bottom of this page was reproduced from a photograph of the show window of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo. During the week that the decoration was on display it attracted the attention of thousands. John J. Stuppy stated that it caused more comment than any other decoration that has been used. Not only did pedestrians pause, but the press gave the window liberal notices. The display was a feature of fashion show week at St. Joe. The fresh flowers were changed daily, for the purpose of keeping the window at its best and also for the sake of variety. One day the bride carried a shower of valley and orchids, another day a hand bouquet of sweet peas and roses, another day the flowered staff, etc. There almost always was a throng in front of the window, many people coming each day especially to note the changes. Mr. Stuppy says he thinks this kind of advertising the best any florist can do who has a good window on a busy business street and he proves it by pointing to the following description and anecdote that appeared in the St. Joseph Gazette:

"The young people seemed to find special interest in a florist's window which had been converted into a marriage hall. A blushing bride in sumptuous white chiffon and laces, carrying an immense bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley, and followed by a tiny, fair-haired flower girl in blue, stood in the ribboned aisle facing the altar. A canopy of ferns, white flowers and smilax formed the background of the altar, and from the top of the canopy hung snow-white bells. The altar itself, with its satin pillows, was bedecked with pure white roses.

"'For heaven's sake, come on!' the exasperated tones of a middle-aged man echoed above the noise of the street. 'You've been in front of this window an hour, I know, and there's nothing there but a dummy bride and a mess of flowers.'

"Two negroes standing near snickered. 'He ain't got no romance in him,' the girl declared in a stage whisper.'"

THE BRIDE.

The bride who, with her flowers, ornaments the first page of this week's issue was a Tennessee lady whose family are patrons of Charles L. Baum, of Knoxville, whose bouquet work is shown in the illustration.

BLAKE'S BRIDE'S BOUQUET.

A bride's bouquet that commands, and deserves, immediate attention, especially of those who make such bouquets, is that shown in the accompanying illustration. The grouping and finish of the piece make it extraordinarily attractive. In its construction were used dendrobiums, valley and adiantum, with a sufficient quantity of chiffon and ribbon. Its value in the customer's eyes may be estimated by the fact that $75 was paid for the piece, and not a cent was grudged. The bouquet was made by Robert H. Blake, who is in the employ of Mrs. J. B. Freeman, at Toledo, O.

THE SHEPHERD'S CROOK.

The illustration shown in this issue is prepared from a photograph of one of two similar shepherds' crooks, trimmed with roses and orange blossoms, carried by the bridesmaids at the most recent White House wedding. It is an excellent example of this class of bridesmaids' bouquets and was the work of Z. D. Blackistone, of Washington.

VALLEY SHOWERS.

The single column illustration on page 16 is an excellent example of the showered bouquet of valley and white orchids. The arrangement is loose, producing a far better effect than when the valley is wired short and set into the bouquet solidly—a style that has been described as the cauliflower type of bouquet. The photograph from which the illustration was prepared was supplied by David Clarke's Sons, New York.

HOW MANY JUNE WEDDINGS?

The figures with regard to the percentage of weddings which occur in each month of the year, as shown on page 13 of this issue, will surprise a good many florists—the idea in most cases would be that June brings a great deal larger proportion of the year's weddings than it actually does. The fact seems to be that the trade gets a great deal more out of June weddings than out of weddings in other months. A possible explanation is that June is the fashionable month, and it is fashionable people who use flowers.

DELAY OF SHIPMENTS.

The Carrier's Responsibility.

In holding a railway company legally responsible for the value of a shipment of holly where a Christmas market for the same was lost through the company's delay in delivering the shipment, the Arkansas Supreme Court recently affirmed the following rules of law in the case of Mabry vs. Kansas City Southern Railway Co., 165 Southwestern Reporter 279:

The fact that the company was not bound to operate its freight trains on Sunday did not excuse it from using due diligence to forward the shipment promptly if it did run its trains.

More than two days consumed in carrying a carload shipment from a point in southwestern Arkansas to Kansas City on a through line of railroad constituted an unreasonable delay.

The shipper of the holly did not lose the right to recover damages for the delay because the shipment was consigned "shipper's order" for delivery to a purchaser.

Though ordinarily damages for delay in delivering freight are measurable by the value of the freight at the destination, the bill of lading may validly provide that the value shall be computed with reference to the place of shipment.

From the facts in this case, it appears that the holly was loaded December 12, that it did not arrive in Kansas City until December 17 and notice of its arrival was not given until the next morning, when there was no available market. The shipment, being refused by the customer for whom it had been sent, was sold by the railroad company for an amount which netted only $3.67 above freight charges. S.

A MEMORIAL EMBLEM.

A sprig of evergreen tied with a bow of tricolored red, white and blue ribbon, is proposed by Representative Griest, of Pennsylvania, in a bill introduced in Congress, as a national emblem for people of the United States to wear on Memorial day, May 30, yearly. He says the emblem has been widely adopted, having been approved by the Memorial Day Association of St. Paul, which includes G. A. R., Spanish War Veterans, Sons of Veterans, German-American Veterans' Association, and a number of women's organizations. P.

SALESMANSHIP.

Several notes recently have appeared in The Review regarding salesmanship. Some think good salesmanship is one thing, while some think it is another. Last week a man was quoted as saying that the highest form of salesmanship is found in the ability to sell something of only average quality in the face of keen competition. Perhaps! But how about the salesmanship that gives the customer what he wants and at the same time makes a profit for the house? There are plenty of men who can sell, who can please the trade, but who don't make any money for the boss. The man who wins is the man who can take orders "regular"—no cut prices, no concessions, nothing "special" about them—orders that can just take the usual course.

THE MOLE CRICKET IN FLORIDA.

In this territory, southeastern Florida, we are annoyed almost to desperation by an insect pest, the mole cricket. When full-grown, it is about an inch and a half long and as large as one's little finger. In appearance it resembles the ordinary mole. It is exceedingly destructive to plant life, both by eating the rootlets and by constantly burrowing in the ground at night. I have tried poisons, mixed in bran and also in cotton-seed meal, with syrup, but the pests will not eat these. I think that the remedy, to be effective, must be in the form of a volatile substance, which would kill by penetrating the soil. Gasoline will do it, but of course it "lays out" the plants at the same time. Can you suggest any remedy that will really accomplish its purpose? We are almost at the point of desperation, and unless we can get something to check and exterminate the pest, it looks as if flower growing here would be doomed. The mole crickets even destroy our lawns and are about to ruin our roses.

M. F. C.

The mole cricket, which is at times quite severe in your part of Florida, is the same species which occurs in Porto Rico. It is probable that some kindly-intentioned introducer of plants unwittingly brought this pest over from Porto Rico. In recent years it has occurred in a number of other places in the state. Sometimes it becomes quite severe and in other years is less destructive. Some of the places in which it occurs are so badly infested that it becomes impracticable to grow tomato plants or truck of that kind without making special preparation to circumvent the pest.

The use of poison, such as poisoned bait, gives some relief, but is not sufficiently effective to warrant general recommendation.

For seed beds a more or less effective method is to make a tight board frame around the seed bed, using 12-inch or 14-inch boards and being sure there are no cracks through which the pest can crawl. During the early fall the young mole crickets are wingless and consequently have to depend on crawling through the burrows for their means of moving about. After a frame of this kind has been made and sunk deep enough into the soil to prevent their burrowing under, you are fairly protected from the new ones coming in from the outside. The area inside the frame can then be sterilized by gasoline, carbon bisulphide or formaldehyde.

Such a frame, of course, will not keep out the mature insects, which are winged and can fly a considerable distance. These, however, are not so destructive, except that they reinfest the piece of land after it has been cleared of them.

For a rather full discussion of this insect, write to the director of the Porto Rico Experiment Station, at Mayaguez, Porto Rico, for a bulletin on this subject.

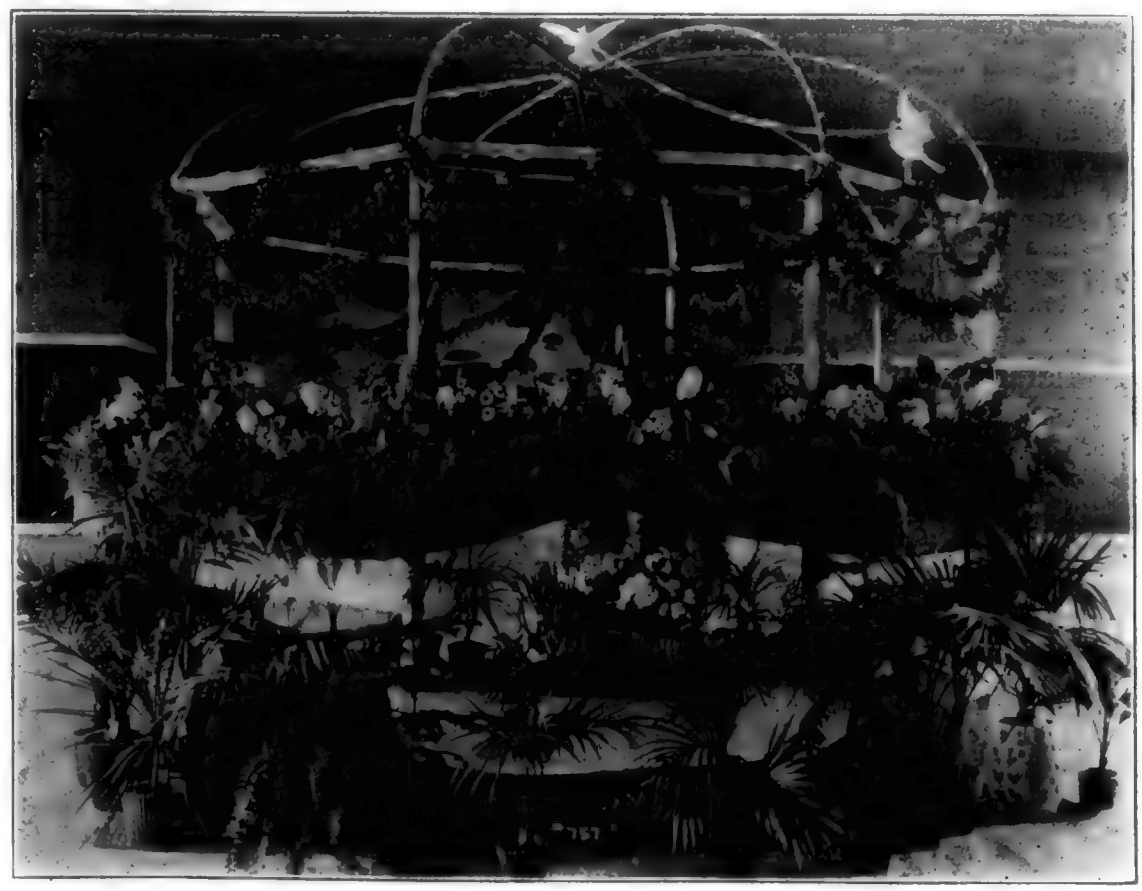
ARBOR FOR ORCHESTRA.

For the Moose celebration recently held in his town, J. T. Broadley, of Medford, Ore., was given the order for an arbor in which the orchestra was to be seated. The arbor which he constructed and decorated, shown in the accompanying illustration, was twelve feet in diameter and seated an orchestra of nine. It was, Mr. Bradley says, a great attraction at the celebration.

FUNERAL BUNCH OF CARNATIONS.



A funeral bunch that is exceedingly handsome in effect and at the same time of simple arrangement is shown in the illustration on this page. It is entirely made up of Rosette carnations and was one of the pieces shown recently at the exhibit of the work of students of the class of floral decoration at the University of Illinois, Urbana.

DEPTH OF FOUNDATIONS.

We contemplate replacing the wooden end walls of our greenhouses with concrete this summer and want to know how deep the foundations should be. Our houses are small, 18x57, and run north and south. We shall use hollow concrete blocks; will that necessitate an inner wall in this Iowa climate? The houses are low, ten feet to the ridge.

P. G.

If the soil is firm and well drained, there is, as a rule, no necessity for excavating more than eighteen inches below the surface. For a footing course dig a trench twelve inches wide and eighteen inches deep, below where the wall is to be constructed, and fill it with concrete made by mixing one part of cement, two parts of sharp sand and four parts of coarse gravel or broken stone. After thoroughly mixing the concrete, add enough water to moisten it. After spreading it in the trench, make sure that it is thoroughly tamped. Care should be taken to have the top of the grout just far enough below the plate to take in a given number of rows of the concrete blocks. The grade outside should be such that the water will run away from the wall. As a rule, no lining is required for the blocks.

IN THE CARNATION FIELD

With Cultivator and Hoe.

The young carnation plants in the field will demand your attention right along now in one way or another. In fact, you will find that every moment spent in the field will be profitably spent. Cultivating should be done with regularity. If it rains, get the cultivators out as soon afterward as the ground is in condition to work. During prolonged spells of drought, make it a rule to run through with the cultivators at least once each week. Do not resort to watering in the field except as a last resource; cultivating will do more good, as a rule. Once you begin to water, you must keep it up and there is great danger of throwing the plants into a quick, rank growth, which will render transplanting to the benches difficult. What you want is a well-matured growth, which can be best secured with a moderate amount of water.

The cultivators will keep down the weeds pretty well between the rows, but you will have to go through the field with the hoe a few times to get out the weeds from between the plants, and to loosen the soil where the cultivators will not reach. Do not wait until the field looks green with weeds before you do this, but catch them while they are small; if it can be done during a dry spell, all the better.

Topping and Other Attentions.

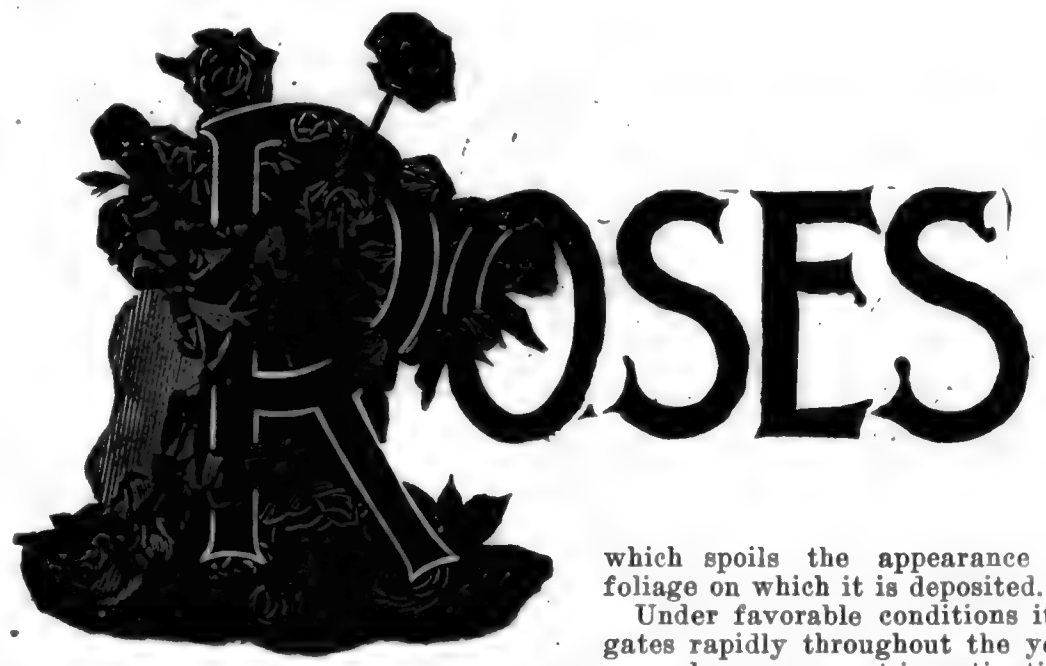
Another thing that will demand close attention from now on is the topping. The plants that were topped before planting out was begun will now be pushing up shoots and these must be kept headed back, or much energy will be lost, and with the early planting that is practiced these days we cannot afford to be neglectful in this way. For the second topping, three joints are enough with most varieties. If more are left, the plants are likely to grow straggly instead of making compact, bushy plants that will stand upright and can be handled without breaking apart at planting time. To me there is nothing more exasperating that a lot of loose-grown, straggly plants, that flop all around when being planted in the bench. They are a source of worry all through the season.

When going through the field with cultivator or hoe, notice the plants and see that they stand upright, so that they will make symmetrical growth. I have seen careless workmen try to use the hoe in getting out weeds close to the plants, instead of stooping to pull such weeds by hand. In cutting out a weed the soil is pulled away from one side of the plant and in many cases is not even replaced, and the plant is thus allowed to fall over during the first hard rain. No good workman would be guilty of such work, but it is mentioned here because the hoeing is frequently done by inexperienced help and they must be looked after closely.

Compost for the Benches.

If you piled up the soil you expect to use in your benches, you have perhaps turned it before this. If you have not, be sure to do so just as soon as you can. Chop it down and thoroughly mix the manure with the soil when turning it. No composted soil should be allowed to lie through a whole year without being turned at least once; twice would be better. If it is piled less than a year before it is to be used, it should be turned at least once. Letting the air into it puts it into so much better condition for planting that the expense is returned many fold. Be sure you do not handle it when too wet.

The writer was much interested in the article entitled "Carnations in the South," written by F. P. Adams and printed in The Review of May 21. It is full of good, sound sense and shows that he has given the matter a lot of close study. As he says, southern conditions must be met with methods adapted to those conditions. In giving advice to growers located long distances from here, I have always suggested that no hard and fast rules could be laid down, but that changes must be made to meet the different conditions due to difference in climate, etc. Most of Mr. Adams' methods, however, are almost identical with those we practice here, except that conditions there are more extreme and must be met with more extreme methods, and there is where more skill is required than in this latitude, where conditions are more favorable.



A. F. J. Baur.

THE FLORIST'S HELPER.

If it is true that everyone has his faults, it also is true that everyone has his virtues. So, in condemning the faults of employees let us do it gently, and at the same time look for the virtues.

Whether an employee is good or poor depends a great deal on the employer.

If, when faults are found, the employer will also look for virtues, then seek to develop the virtues and to reduce the faults, he will develop an employee who will suit almost exactly.

FIGHTING THE ROSE APHIS.

Rose growers who allow their plants to be damaged by the ravages of the rose aphis have only themselves to blame, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Although the aphis is widespread over the entire country, as well as abroad, it is easily controlled. Careful spraying of the plants with solutions of nicotine will remove all danger, and neither the expense nor the trouble involved is sufficiently great to be a real obstacle.

The rose aphis is a small insect with a body about one-twelfth of an inch long. The young and some adult forms are wingless, but certain adults develop wings from time to time. The color is either green or pink. By means of its slender beak the aphis sucks out the juices of the plant on whose buds and unfolding leaves it feeds. These, prevented from attaining their perfect form, become curled and distorted, and the beauty of the flowers is in large measure ruined. Moreover, the aphis secretes a sweet, sticky liquid, called honeydew, which spoils the appearance of the foliage on which it is deposited.

Under favorable conditions it propagates rapidly throughout the year. For example, some recent investigations conducted in California by the Department of Agriculture showed that one female gave birth to forty-eight young in six days. At the end of that time, the mother aphis was knocked from the rose and perished.

This is not at all an uncommon fate. A heavy rain, which washes the insect away, is one of its most natural checks, though birds and other insects prey upon the aphis to a considerable extent. Extreme heat is also unfavorable to the aphis.

The rose grower should not, however, depend upon nature to rid his houses of the pest. A forty per cent solution of nicotine is much surer and not much more trouble. One part of the solution to from 1,000 to 2,000 parts of water, with the addition of one pound of whale-oil soap to every fifty gallons of mixture, is recommended in bulletin 90, "The Rose Aphis," which the United States Department of Agriculture has just issued. A more convenient recipe, when there are only a few bushes to be treated, is a teaspoonful of forty per cent nicotine solution to two gallons of water and one-half ounce of whale-oil soap. The soap should be shaved fine and dissolved in hot water.

Mixtures of this character should be applied as a fine, penetrating spray by means of a compressed air sprayer or bucket pump. Such a pump costs from $3.50 to $15. If no pump is to be had, however, the infested twigs should be dipped in a pail of the solution. Care should be taken to use these solutions at strengths no greater than those mentioned above, since injury to the foliage may result through the use of too much soap, or mildew be favored by two strong a nicotine solution.

Application of insecticides should be made on the first appearance of the pest, which varies from the time that the leaves are put forth until the buds begin to form. Applications should be repeated as found necessary.

TOMATOES FOR FORCING.

I should like to have C. W. write an article on tomato forcing. Also, please have him tell me what is wrong with my tomato plants. The upper leaves twist and roll up into strings, sometimes keeping a good green color but sometimes turning slightly yellow. When about three feet high these plants wilt and never recover. Bordeaux mixture has no effect; neither has sulphur. The roots are clean. The plants are grown in rotation with lettuce. The soil is sterilized with formaldehyde. Sometimes the leaves show little green blisters, arranged in rows like the spore cases on ferns. The Globe variety of tomatoes is more subject to this trouble than any other. My location is northeastern Ohio. W. W.

If you want ripe tomatoes early in November, start the seeds on or about July 15. Transplant the seedlings into flats; then pot off singly into 3-inch or 3½-inch pots. Plant out into benches before the pots become too matted with roots. For midwinter fruiting you must allow the plants only a limited root-run. You may get a fairly decent crop to ripen in October and November even in solid beds, but as the days grow shorter the flowers will fall off instead of setting fruit, and the crop will be a scanty one. On the other hand, if you will restrict the rooting surface to four inches in depth and not over eighteen inches in width and feed this well as fruits set, you are certain of an excellent set, provided other conditions are suitable.

The plants should be eighteen inches apart and should be trained to single stems. Top the branches after five bunches, or six at most, are formed. Remove all other laterals carefully; also shorten back some of the leaves to let the fruit get all possible light. Tomatoes, especially in winter, succeed better if grown a little on the dry side. Once the fruit is set on two or three bunches, you can feed freely and a good plan is to give a mulching of cow manure. After April a good plan is to increase the rooting area and water somewhat more freely.

A dry atmosphere is needed by tomatoes; in a moist one mildew will soon develop. A winter minimum of 60 degrees is about right. If you have heating pipes below the benches, all the better; a little bottom heat is good for winter tomatoes. Keep white fly down by using hydrocyanic acid gas. Only a weak dose is necessary. It should be applied in the evening; always select as cool a night as possible for the operation.

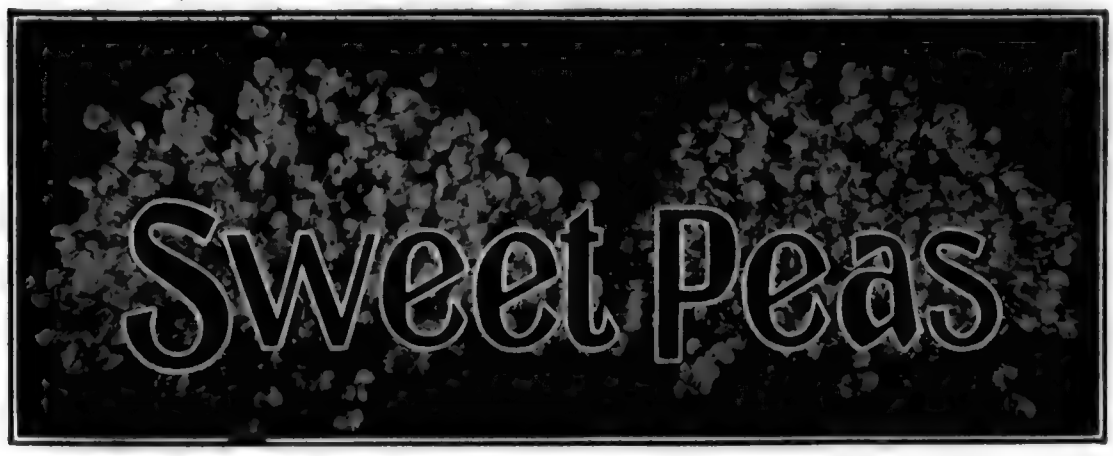
A good soil for tomatoes consists of three-fourths fibrous loam and one-fourth well rotted cow or horse manure. For midwinter fruiting the rows should be spaced fully four feet apart. For planting out in solid beds to follow violets or sweet peas in March or April, the plants can be sixteen to eighteen inches apart, with twenty-four inches between the rows. Allow a 30-inch path lengthways of the house, in order to care for the plants more conveniently. Allow only one stem to these spring-planted ones, carefully removing all laterals.

Lister's Prolific I find to be the best midwinter fruiter; it is a little ahead of Comet, which is a popular sort for both winter and spring planting. Carter's Sunrise and Sutton's Best of All are other good sorts. These are all British varieties and are better for forcing than Chalk's Early Jewel, Earliana, or any of our American sorts, fine though they are for outdoor culture.

Perhaps in the foregoing suggestions you may find some reasons why your plants are not doing better.

C. W.

GOOD TOMATO AND CUCUMBER.



What is the best tomato and cucumber for forcing? We are using Comet and White Spine. A. S. R.

Comet is a fine forcing tomato. However, I have found Lister's Prolific somewhat better for winter and spring crops. There are a number of first-class strains of White Spine cucumber on the market. Of these I consider Arlington White Spine the best. C. W.

NAME OF PLANT.

Will you please give us the name of the plant to which the enclosed leaves belong? We shall be glad if you will also tell us how to propagate the plant. We purchased it from a Cleveland florist and requested him to give us the name, but he could not; neither can we identify the plant from the catalogues. It grows somewhat like the dracæna and pandanus. O. A. K.

The leaves in question are those of one of the cordylines, probably C. nigricans, which is one of the forms of C. terminalis. This plant is propagated by cuttings in the same manner as C. terminalis, the latter being the plant generally known to the trade as Dracæna terminalis. W. H. T.

OUTDOOR SWEET PEAS.

Keep the soil well stirred between the rows of sweet peas. As soon as the plants reach the flowering stage they will be much benefited by a mulch of old manure or some similar material. Partly rotted leaves will answer, or even hay and straw, but the advantages of manure are that it keeps the surface cooler and more moist and some fertilizing elements are carried down to the roots from it. As the weather becomes warmer a spraying overhead each evening will prove beneficial. Should green aphis make its appearance, use the force pump or sprayer at once. Do the work in the evening. Nicotine, Ivory soap and kerosene emulsion all are safe if used with judgment, but be careful not to get the dose too strong.

SWEET PEA TESTS AT ITHACA.

Bulletin 342, a 360-page book recently issued by the experiment station of the College of Agriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., will be of great interest and value to florists in general and sweet pea growers in particular. It is the fourth number in the series of "Sweet Pea Studies" and is entitled "Classification of Garden Varieties of the Sweet Pea." It contains more than twenty full-page illustrations. It is edited by Alvin C. Beal, who has charge of the experimental work in the department of floriculture. The first dozen pages or so of the book are occupied by an account of the establishment of the sweet pea trial grounds and a description of the experiments that have been conducted there. Then follows a list of the varieties tested, with remarks on their appearance and behavior as seen at the trial grounds.

At the end of the book is a list of "The Best Varieties of Sweet Peas," as determined by the tests. This list ought to be genuinely helpful to growers in the selection of summer-flowering varieties and is here given in full:

IT PAYS FLORISTS.

It pays florists, as well as others:

To be simple, honest, frank, natural, clean in body and mind and unaffected.

To be as ready to say, "I do not know," if that be so, as to tell what one knows when asked for information.

To face every difficulty unabashed and unafraid and cultivate the courteous mind and kind heart.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Poinsettias.

The propagating of poinsettias should now commence in earnest. A good bottom heat will be a distinct advantage in rooting them. In taking off the cuttings be sure they do not exceed three to three and one-half inches in length. Cut out a small portion of the old wood with each. There is then a smaller likelihood of their damping off. Cuttings should be kept quite close, carefully protected from sun and air currents and, with intelligent watering, few should fail to root. Old wood which is dormant can also be propagated by being cut up into single eyes, these being placed in a cutting bench where they will get a bottom heat of 85 to 90 degrees. Where some extra fine bracts are wanted it is a good plan to plant out the earliest rooted cuttings; also the old stools can be cut back quite hard and the number of shoots which start out reduced. These also will do well planted out and, with proper treatment, they should carry bracts ten to twenty-two inches in diameter.

Hard-Wooded Plants.

Any left-over plants of camellias, azaleas, ericas and other hard-wooded plants should be planted out in frames or on a piece of ground where they can be kept well supplied with water through the summer. Given these conditions, they are well worth carrying over. The azaleas will not be of quite so dark a green as the imported ones, but will bloom earlier and much more profusely. Such ericas as melanthera, Caffra densa, gracilis and Mediterranea can be grown either plunged out in pots or planted out. If kept in pots they will flower earlier. Be sure to remove all seed pods from azaleas before planting out and prune back any runaway shoots on the ericas.

Bedding Plant Stock.

At this season, when orders are pouring in every day, there always is more or less danger of certain lines of plants being sold out altogether, or so closely that but a small stock is left to propagate from. It is well to guard against this by planting out an adequate supply in beds or nursery rows. There is no need to select the most shapely plants, but let them be healthy. Never mind if they have no flowers on; your customers will prefer these, and the others are just as good for you.

As the bedding plants dwindle in numbers move them up together, so as to economize on watering. Sales do not end with Memorial day. On the contrary, many florists now make sales as late as July 4, especially for shore and mountain resorts, and many of these customers are willing to pay a good price for plants from which they can get some immediate effect.

ORCHIDS

Miltonia Vexillaria.

Miltonia vexillaria now is at its best. Keep it in a cool house, but it is best not to leave the flower spikes on too long. A top-dressing of fresh sphagnum, after removing some of the old, dry moss, makes the plants look more attractive.

Dendrobiums.

Such varieties of dendrobiums as nobile and its many hybrids, and Wardianum, now are in active growth. Keep them warm and moist. If they can be sprayed and their house closed at 3 to 3:30 p. m. they will revel in such treatment. Keep D. Phalænopsis and D. formosum giganteum warm and moist also.

Phalænopsis.

All varieties of phalænopsis, the beautiful East Indian orchids, like a warm, moist house where they will never be exposed to cold draughts. Be sure they are shaded so that the sun cannot burn their handsome leaves. A temperature of 65 degrees at night now will suit phalænopsis.

Cœlogynes.

The old Cœlogyne cristata and its several varieties are just starting to grow. It is not yet too late to overhaul crowded pans and baskets, cutting away a lot of the bulbs which have no foliage. The first year after repotting the plants will flower lightly, a year later quite satisfactorily.

Odontoglossum Citrosmum.

Odontoglossum citrosmum is now coming into flower. Some varieties have pure white flowers, others delicate pink. The plants must be suspended, as the spikes droop in the same way as some of the cœlogynes. Plants which are not blooming were probably kept too moist at the time the new growths were starting. They should be kept quite dry before growths start and until flower spikes appear.

Odontiodas.

While most of the odontoglossums, with the exception of Rossii majus, pulchellum majus, grande and citrosmum, are hard to summer successfully in America, all the odontiodas, which are the result of crossing Cochlioda Noetzliana on Odontoglossum crispum and other forms, do well and stand our summer heat in a way which is rapidly carrying them into favor. The cool north house will suit them now, and a lighter and airier one after October 1.

Phaius Grandifolius.

Phaius grandifolius and other phaius are now in active growth. The cattleya house suits this orchid and it will pay to feed lightly once a week when the pots contain lots of active roots. A temperature of 60 degrees at night is suitable.

Cattleya Trianæ.

As the growth of Cattleya Trianæ advances, furnish more water. Be careful not to overwater newly potted ones. Do not crowd the plants too much. Watch the newly imported plants sharply for cattleya fly.

Cattleya Labiata.

Shipments of Cattleya labiata are just at hand. The plants are a mere ghost in size of what we got ten years ago, and the prices skyrocket as the plants diminish in size and numbers. It now is necessary to pot two or three pieces together to make one sizable plant. Cut away all new growths just starting on freshly imported stock.

Cattleya Schrœderæ.

Plants of Cattleya Schrœderæ, which finished blooming some weeks ago, should be repotted where necessary. This is not a popular cattleya commercially, but it comes in when other varieties are conspicuous by their absence and for this reason it is valuable.

Cattleya Gaskelliana.

Cattleya Gaskelliana is a useful and free-flowering summer cattleya. It can be bought at a low price and it flowers with great freedom. Keep the plants well up to the light.

Cattleya Mossiæ.

If only all cattleyas would grow and flower like Cattleya Mossiæ, what a pleasure it would be to grow them! As the plants pass out of bloom, keep them on the dry side until new growths appear; then do any overhauling necessary.

Cattleya Gigas.

Some plants of Cattleya gigas are already in flower. Remember that the flowers of gigas are large and showy, but unusually tender and easily injured by the sun. Be sure to stand blooming plants where they can be well shaded.

Lælia Purpurata.

Lælia purpurata, one of our most showy summer orchids, now is nicely in bloom. As the spikes are well elevated, the plant has a much more airy appearance than the cattleyas. It succeeds well in the regular cattleya house.

Calanthes.

All the Veitchii and vestita varieties of calanthes should be potted by this time. They need a house with plenty of heat and moisture. A house which can be given a little fire heat, just to warm the pipes each night even in summer, is what they like. No chills must be allowed if vigorous growths are wanted. A temperature of 65 to 70 degrees at night, with a corresponding rise in the daytime, is what they require.

Vanda Cærulea.

Give plants of Vanda cærulea a top-dressing of fresh, live sphagnum. Do not let them have a heavily shaded house. If they are to flower well they should be elevated close to the glass. To make Vanda teres flower at all, it should have nearly full sun. Unless well sun-baked, it will not flower.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

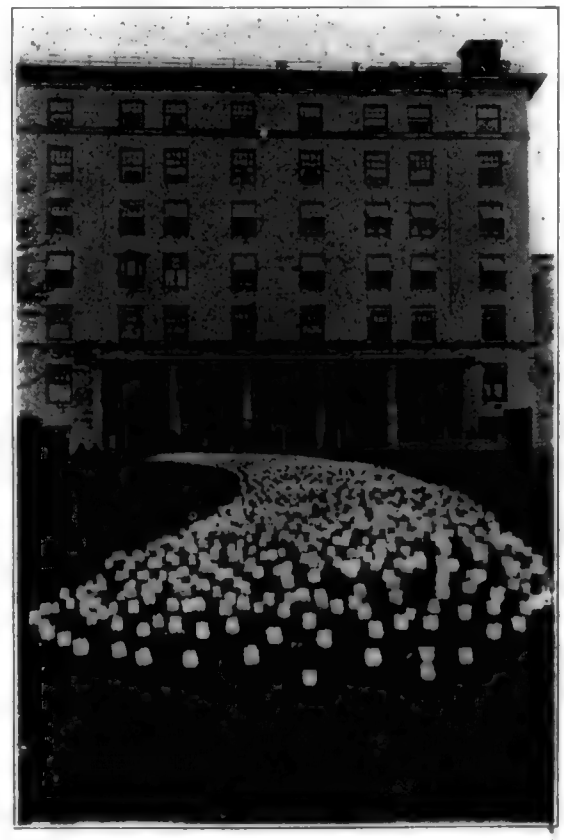
THE CONVENTION GARDEN.

The Boston reports on all convention preparations are most satisfactory and quite promising, thanks to the united efforts and labors of the Boston organizations which are hard at work to make the coming convention a great success.

The convention garden, as planned and prepared by our enthusiastic brothers of our horticulturally and otherwise well known and progressive convention city, offers a splendid opportunity for the growers of all kinds of outdoor plants to display their goods and their skill. The garden is situated in one of the principal and most frequented parks of the city, within easy walking distance of the convention hall. The general layout is extremely effective and the surroundings are ideal. The grounds and their care are in the hands of experts, which, together with the favorable climatic conditions, assures successful culture of every plant that is sent there for exhibition or decorative purposes.

The Minneapolis convention garden was a success in every respect and has brought the aims and achievements of our profession and our organization nearer to the public than any other thing the S. A. F. has ever done, outside of its national flower shows. The people of Minneapolis feel deeply grateful towards the national society of florists for the beautiful garden it planted for them and for the lessons the garden has taught them. The education of the public in this practical manner has already made itself felt among local florists, which is proof that such educational exploitation is at the same time practical advertising. Our daily press insisted that the garden be continued in a similar way in the future and the display of 140,000 spring-flowering bulbs, which was at its best a few days ago, brought out the following editorial from the Minneapolis Tribune of May 21:

OUR TULIP BEDS.



Is there in another city of the world a sight so brilliant as the garden beside our Minneapolis armory? There it stands, the property of the poorest child as well as the richest grown-up who passes by. In every such life it is playing a part today—warming the soul with the richness of splendid color, quickening in it the love of nature, lifting it above the dusty drab of the day's business. Nature is a bold artist. Were any mere man to splash colors from a paint box in such gorgeousness, to parallel scarlet with canary yellow, to mottle pink and orange in the same blossom, the eyes would close tightly with the hurt. But the actual splendor of these gay colors in the tulip beds makes them magnificent. It is as though nature laughed at our futile attempts to rival her and yet gave to us opulently of her most brilliant treasures. It is not so long since such a public garden would have been found far from the center of any American city, if found at all. Men and women thought themselves "practical" in those days; in reality, they were only shortsighted. Today the dweller of the American city sees farther, and he makes his children richer than he was with a succession of clean and wholesome interests as the best possible offset to the day's temptations.

Our tulip beds are something more than a passing delight this spring. They are a brilliant certificate of our widening vision and our nearer approach to fullness of the spirit.

To what better aims can we devote our professional labors and skill than to the recognized motives outlined in that editorial, and of what could we justly be more proud and happy than of the feeling that our endeavors and achievements are deserving of such favorable impressions, comments and recognition?

What has been started successfully last year can now be greatly enlarged upon in Boston, and a splendid beginning has been made. May I be accorded the privilege of asking every grower, florist and gardener to do his full share towards the success of our Boston convention garden, through active participation as an exhibitor? The garden is all ready for planting, and all that is now required is the plants to fill it. We want you all to help us in this educational work, and we want you to share alike the happiness, the pride, the glory and other manifold benefits of this progressive undertaking. Planting time is here and passing fast, so write to James B. Shea, chairman, convention garden, 30 Beacon street, Boston, Mass., for information and space. Do it now!

IN THE MINNEAPOLIS GARDEN.

The city of Minneapolis finds itself the richer through the visit of the S. A. F. there last August, for the society left behind a garden such as the city had never had, and this year the society's outdoor display of last August is a source of pride to the citizens and to the park department, whose head, Theodore Wirth, made it what it is. It was one of these proud citizens who took the photograph reproduced herewith, of Arthur T. Boddington's bed of La Reine tulips. The photograph was taken May 16, when, says the proud citizen, the whole garden presented a gay appearance. The building in the background, the Plaza hotel, may recall memories in those who saw this spot last August.

THE OHIO TAX CASE TEST.

The test case of the Geo. H. Mellen Co. vs. Ralph B. Miller, treasurer of Clark county, Ohio, involving the taxation of growing crops in greenhouses, was heard before the Court of Appeals, at Springfield, May 25, Judges Kinder, Donnelly and Crow occupying the bench.

Attorney J. E. Bowman ably presented the case for the trade, broadly arguing the claim that the crops of the florist, gardener, nurseryman and farmer have once been taxed in the valuation of the land, and that it would be clearly an instance of double taxation to assess growing crops of any nature. He contended that the grower does not claim exemption for his particular class of stock, but that it has already been considered in the tax value per acre placed upon the land, and that this was clearly the intent of the legislature which enacted the law.

The defendant was represented by County Prosecutor Charles E. Ballard, whose arguments were quite briefly presented. In fact, he was practically placed on the defensive by questions by two members of the court.

Paul C. Martin quite eloquently closed the argument for the trade, describing the various methods of growing different classes of stock, the construction of houses, composition of soils, etc.

The lobby included a generous representation of Springfield and Urbana florists, nurserymen and gardeners, and at the conclusion of the hearing, which consumed little more than two hours, there was a rather hopeful expression of opinion that this court would reverse the lower court and find for the plaintiff. However, the matter hinges on a rather delicate point of law. The decision may hardly be expected until about one week hence. Ge Dale.

A PINK POINSETTIA.

Poinsettia pulcherrima Trebsti, says one of the British trade papers, quoting Moeller's Deutsche Gaertner-Zeitung, is a sport of the white P. pulcherrima alba. It differs from the usual red and cream poinsettias in the color of its bracts, which are a delicate salmon pink; the lowest bracts only are somewhat shaded with green. The flowers reach a diameter of nearly eleven inches and the shoots, which have leaves down to the base, are thirty-eight inches long. In habit the plant is like the type. It promises to become a valuable florists' plant because of its beautiful, striking appearance. It was originated by Albert Trebst, of Merseburg, Germany, and will be distributed this year.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Business during the last two weeks was as good as can be expected at this time of the year. Gladioli and sweet peas are still in bloom, and the first crops of Shasta daisies and gardenias are coming in. Louisiana lilies, which can be seen in immense quantities all over the city, are in the last stages of their glory.

The observance of Mothers' day among the flower buying public here is extremely limited and cannot be compared with that in other cities of the country. Although some special advertising for this day is done by local florists and the wearing of flowers on that day is encouraged at the schools and churches, yet it seems that this beautiful custom will never be really popular here, much to the discomfort of the florists, who tried their best to make it as grand a day here as it is elsewhere.

Market gardeners and growers are reporting a continuous sale of all kinds of pot plants, especially bedding stock, but the season is advancing and soon their harvest for this time of the year will be made.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting May 21, at the Chamber of Commerce building. President P. A. Chopin and Secretary C. R. Panter were in their respective places and a large number of members were present.

The meeting was, from the beginning to the end, an enthusiastic and interesting one. The regular routine business over, the subject of this year's outing of the society was discussed and after taking the different outing places near the city into consideration, the members unanimously voted that the annual outing should be held at Grand Isle. The date was set for July 4, with the return home on the evening of July 6. President Chopin appointed the following arrangements committee, with instructions to bring in a full report for the next meeting, June 18: Joseph Steckler, chairman; C. R. Panter and Richard Eichling. The three days' trip to Grand Isle has always proved a great drawing card, and as the outing day this year falls on our national holiday, it will give more members a chance to participate in this than in any previous one. Those especially who have never been there should make up their minds to come along. It will be one of their greatest celebrations of the glorious Fourth.

Frank Xavier Becker was elected a member of the society. The application for membership of Feitel Scheinuk was laid over for final action at the next meeting.

J. A. Newsham brought elegant specimen plants of Cattleya gigas and Sanderiana with ten flowers, each measuring nine inches across, and Phalænopsis Rimestadiana. Harry Dressel, foreman of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., exhibited a fine collection of named sweet peas of seventeen varieties. J. St. Mard showed some good cut flowers of Alaska daisies, snapdragon, Cochet and White Cochet. Messrs. Newsham and Dressel entered their exhibits to be judged on points. The three judges selected from members present returned with the highest award possible, 100 points for each entry. R. E.

The alarm clock went off at four o'clock in the morning.

"I fooled you that toime," said Mike with a grin, "for I wasn't aslape at all."

The florist fools himself who thinks there is any way of selling goods in the trade more effective than advertising in The Review. Also, it's the most inexpensive way in proportion to results.

"We are completely sold out and have had to send money back. The Review is, without doubt, the best advertising medium in the trade."—J. C. RENNISON CO., Sioux City, Ia.

Review readers are not asleep. Note this:

"Please tell us confidentially what you think of — — . Why doesn't he advertise in The Review if he is O. K.?"—MILLER FLORAL CO., Farmington, Utah.

The alarm clock rings in The Review office at 4 o'clock (p.m., not a.m.) every Tuesday. It is to let everybody know advertising forms close for that week's issue in just sixty minutes.

NEW YORK SHOW, 1915.

The flower show committee held a meeting at the Grand Central Palace on Thursday, May 21. The presidents of the different local horticultural societies had been invited to a conference to assist in the preparation of the schedule, especially as to the classes provided for the private growers.

The meeting was largely attended and the schedule was prepared as far as possible; it will be completed at the next meeting, Tuesday, June 2, and will be distributed immediately. The local societies are requested to have their representatives present at this meeting.

The flower show committee is much pleased with the progress made and the great interest that is being taken in the coming exhibition. Several special prizes have already been offered. Contracts in the trade section for almost $3,000 worth of space have already been signed up and the guarantee list now amounts to over $3,000. The retailers have practically all agreed to support this exhibition. Secretary John Young will be pleased to furnish any information regarding same.

John Young, Sec'y.

OBITUARY.

Lorenzo White.

Lorenzo White, a member of the firm of White Bros., Wilmington, Mass., died at his home, on Middlesex avenue, May 18, aged 79 years. Mr. White was out around his greenhouses May 16, but was not feeling well. He had been for the last ten years in the florists' business with his brother Henry.

Mr. White enlisted as a musician in the navy during the Civil war and later played in the orchestra at the old Boston Museum for a number of years, after which he bought the Sabra Carter house on Middlesex avenue, and started with his brother in the florists' business.

He leaves three brothers, John, who lives in Maryland; Sydney, who resides in the west, and Henry, of White Bros., Wilmington; and one sister, Mrs. D. T. Buzzell, of Wilmington.

S. S. Howell.

S. S. Howell, of the Howell Nursery Co., Knoxville, Tenn., died May 22, aged 69 years. He was one of the pioneers in the nursery business in Tennessee.

Moberly, Mo.—The Estill Floral Co., owned by H. V. Estill and Mrs. R. S. Estill, reports an excessively busy May, this being the bedding month in this section and trade heavier than usual.

Glen Cove, N. Y.—At the May meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society it was decided to hold the annual rose show June 9 instead of June 16. A preliminary schedule was read at this meeting and will be completed for distribution shortly. On the committee to meet with the coöperative committee of the National Association of Gardeners were named Samuel J. Trepess, John F. Johnson and Ernest Westlake.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1914: President, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; vice-president, Patrick Welch, Boston; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirtieth annual convention, Boston, Mass., August 18 to 21, 1914.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

IT never has been profitable to "sell" goods to those who do not pay, although a good many florists are only just finding it out.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

IF one thinks the florists are not having good business, to dispel the delusion it is necessary only to read The Review—it is brimming over with enthusiastic reports of the spring rush.

IN spite of repeated statements that anonymous communications go straight to the waste basket, many unsigned letters still are received. This is specially for the attention of H. H. L., of Steubenville, O., whose initials do not correspond with those of any subscriber there and whose inquiry fails of an answer simply because we do not have his name and address.

IT is the belief of The Review that every florist, no matter how small or how local his business interests, should have an adequate outfit of printed business stationery, and use it. But The Review does no job printing. As a rule, the larger the city the more printing costs, so that the average subscriber can get his letter-heads turned out at home at least as cheaply, and probably as well, as they could be anywhere else.

IT IS EVER THUS.

At the risk of burdening our readers, it has been said so often, advertising in The Review is not only far-reaching but fairly sure—and frequently extremely rapid in its action. Like this:

The advertisement of hardy plants has given results that are entirely satisfactory; orders have come from coast to coast.—W. A. Toole, Baraboo, Wis., May 23, 1914.

The pansies were all cleaned out on telegraph orders before the issue of The Review had reached me with the ad—it certainly was quick work.—George Hammer, Van Horn, Ia., May 23, 1914.

TAXES ON GROWING STOCK.

The Ohio tax case, which was argued before the Court of Appeals at Springfield May 25, is unfortunate. Whatever the decision, it promises little good for those florists and nurserymen who have heretofore escaped assessment for taxation on their growing stock. Since the lower court decided that the plants in greenhouses and nursery are properly assessable under the existing law, it is fair to assume that the higher court may take the same view—but if it does not do so the attention the case has attracted is almost certain eventually to result in legislation in the state of Ohio to make the law explicitly cover such crops. And what one state does to raise revenue other states are almost sure to do. While many florists and nurserymen have for years paid taxes on their stock in greenhouses or field, others have been escaping taxation on their growing crops, due to laxity in the assessing authorities rather than to any clear-cut exemption in the law. But not so many will escape in the future. The more agitation there is, the more attention is called to those who are getting off. Whenever attention is focused on anyone, or any class, paying less than a fair proportion of taxes, sooner or later those assessments are raised, one way or another. And one state follows another. Any step that results in an appreciable increase in revenue in Maine, or New York, is noted and taken up in Oregon and Illinois.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The one subject of discussion in the Chicago market this week has been the disastrous consequences of the premature arrival of midsummer. Buyers, themselves not in a jovial mood, say they never have seen the responsible heads of the wholesale cut flower houses so down in the mouth as has been the case this week. Following the appearance of the Memorial Day Number of The Review, orders came pouring in for shipments to go out May 27 to 29. The mail received May 25 in most of the wholesale houses indicated at least as big a volume of business as ever has been done in this market for Memorial day. At the same time the temperature mounted to 91 degrees, and it was still there at the time this issue of The Review was closed for the press. All stock suffered severely. Only once in the history of this market has anything so disquieting happened. Three years ago a heat wave hit the market just before Memorial day. Not even the man with the shortest memory has forgotten the trouble that ensued. It was bad enough with other flowers, but carnations became practically unusable. The large supply could not be sold in the city, while out-of-town buyers simply refused to pay bills, declaring that the stock was unsalable on arrival. The wholesalers fear that the same thing may occur this year, although the weather man is promising cooler conditions for the latter part of the week.

The weather was bright enough and warm enough last week to cause a large increase in the production of all cut flowers. The condition probably was general in the central part of the

NOW COMES THE TIME WHEN YOU WILL NEED FANCY

VALLEY AND FINE, FRESH, FANCY ORCHIDS

WE have arranged for a larger supply than ever before in June—can furnish Fancy Valley on telegraph order and in any quantity. Also a large supply of home-grown Orchids.

BEAUTIES

You can get of us all the Beauties you want at prices that will make it possible for you to sell a lot of them at a good margin for yourself. We can supply short and medium stems.

FANCY PEONIES SELECT

The Peony is the big decorative flower of June—but it makes all the difference what Peonies you order. Not many growers know how to put up Peonies so as to give invariable satisfaction. We have the oldest and largest of these, as well as the best of the newer growers—our Peonies please.

FANCY ROSES

It is well to remember that Amling's specialty always is a grade of Roses just a little better than can be had elsewhere in quantity. A large crop is on. We have a full line, including

MILADY WARD SUNBURST
BULGARIE KILLARNEY RICHMOND
WHITE KILLARNEY KILLARNEY QUEEN

SPENCER SWEET PEAS

We continue to handle great quantities of extra fine Butterfly (Spencer) Sweet Peas in all colors. There is nothing so popular for corsage work and Bridesmaids' bouquets. All colors. Let us show you what good stock is.

CARNATIONS

Our Carnations are fine, and it is a conservative statement that we have the largest supply in this market—several of our growers are cutting good crops. We expect to be able to fill all orders with good stock at moderate prices.

FANCY FERNS

By ordering of us you can get all the Hardy Cut Ferns you need. Our stock is good; we never ship anything but the best on the market.

United States, for orders fell off. The result was a large accumulation of stock and a big fall in prices. There even was considerable waste of stock, something that does not often happen in this market, where everything usually can be sold at some price.

The heat wave which arrived May 24 resulted in a flood of peonies on top of heavy production in all other lines. Those who had fears of a shortage of peonies for Memorial day ceased to worry on that score. It was asserted May 25 that there were more peonies in Chicago than ever before on that date. If this statement was a little strong, the rate at which the stock was arriving May 27 makes it seem safe to say that there will be more peonies here for Memorial day than ever before has been the case. The heat has resulted, not only in a supply far greater than was expected, but in wide differences in quality. Great quantities of peonies have been received from farmers, fruit growers and even from nurserymen and florists in such condition that they could never be sold at all unless sold at once. There are only a few shippers who know how to put up peonies in exactly the right way. This stock, as a rule, is finer than ever this year and will sell well.

If there are any items that are not in adequate supply they are American Beauties and cattleyas. There are plenty of short Beauties of more or less indifferent quality, but orders for strictly first-class long Beauties are not easy to fill this week. More cattleyas of first-class quality also could be used, although the demand is not heavy. All varieties of roses are in large supply. Killarney, as usual, has suffered in quality more than the other varieties. Sweet peas, while many growers have stopped picking, still are coming in great quantities from some of the specialists. They were hard to sell last week, and harder this week. The heat has hurt the quality, but some fine stock still is available. Easter lilies and gladioli are abundant and represent about all there is in market grown from bulbs.

An enormous business will be done in the three days preceding May 30. The orders are here. So is the stock—any quantity of it. What is worrying everyone is the quality of the stock, especially of the carnations. If disappointments ensue it is no more than fair to remember that the weather is responsible. Neither growers nor wholesalers are responsible for the present situation, nor can their best efforts remedy it. It is one of the unfortunate features of Memorial day, now the biggest flower consuming day in the year, that so much depends on weather conditions.

It is reported by one of the local papers that: "Peter Reinberg, president of the board of education, former alderman with a good record, and the most extensive florist in the country, is a strong candidate for county treasurer."

Robert Northam, of George Reinberg's, is the proud papa of a 10-pound baby boy.

One of the big rooms in the Western Cold Storage Warehouse has been rented for the exclusive use of Kennicott Bros. Co., in handling peonies, this season. E. E. Pieser states that the rent is $300 for sixty days, which makes it a little more expensive than where payment is made by count of the buckets, but it gives the advantage of making it unnecessary to crowd the stock.

Charles Klehm says that his establishment will be cutting Festiva Maxima by the end of the week, something which seldom occurs by Memorial day.

June always is a big month with H. N. Bruns and he has felt sufficient confidence in the business outlook to have a larger quantity of valley pips in sand than ever before. The heaviest sale of pips he ever has had does not weaken his confidence in an equally heavy sale of cut valley in June.

The first Old Red peonies of the season were cut May 21 by the Batavia Greenhouse Co., and O. Johnson now looks for white peonies to be ready at Batavia this week. Ten days ago it did not seem possible that anything could be cut before June.

Mothers' day is the best money-maker of the year for cut flower growers, according to E. C. Amling. He says that its value lies not so much in the sales for the day as it does in holding up the market between Easter and Memorial day. Before Mothers' day became a fixture there was a long stretch of distressingly low prices. Mr. Amling believes that the exploitation of Mothers' day has been the principal factor in relieving this long period of low values.

According to N. J. Wietor, the largest crop of carnations ever grown by Wietor Bros. is being cut this week; he says it will run close to 150,000 for the week, but that the crop will be of unusually short duration. Replanting these houses will begin Monday, June 1.

Returning from an outing at Saugatuck, Mich., J. Byers, formerly with the Chicago Carnation Co., is helping out this week with Zech & Mann. Next week he joins the forces of the Bohannon Floral Co., for the wedding rush.

At the meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association, May 21, A. C. Kohlbrand, chairman of the transportation committee, recommended the use of the New York Central lines to the Boston convention, making the start via Michigan Central. The recommendation was adopted. The Chicago Florists' Club already has chosen the New York Central, going via Lake Shore.

Work of demolishing the old Franklin McVeagh building preparatory to putting up another modern structure just north of the Atlas block, the business home of nearly a score of florists, has revived the perennial discussion as to how long it will be before the trade domiciled there will have to seek new quarters. A. C. Spencer has it figured out that it will be some years before there is need for a modern building where the Atlas block stands.

M. A. Benham, of Cobden, Ill., has been shipping considerable quantities of peonies loose in raspberry flats. Stock handled that way won't sell.

James King states that he has 50,000 peony plants, all of the better varieties, 2 years old at his new Wheaton nursery.

A new retail store has been opened by D. F. Hayes, at 2843 Diversey avenue. It is called the Diversey Flower Shop.

S. L. Lowenthal, the widely-known attorney, who was buried at Mount Greenwood, May 25, married Bernice M. Klingel, sister of Fred Klingel, of Erne & Klingel.

H. C. Mulder, who recently opened a new store as the University Florist, at 1121 East Fifty-fifth street, reports that business has been encouraging so far. He purchased a new refrigerator this week.

A half century of life, a large part of it spent in the florists' trade, will be completed June 1 by A. L. Vaughan.

E. Clody, of Clody's Flower Shop, 3924 North Clark street, is building an addition to his greenhouses at Clark and Byron streets.

According to report there are two opportunities for someone with money to acquire good downtown flower stores, both within a few feet of the corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street. It is said John T. Muir would like to concentrate his business at the stand at Grand boulevard and Forty-seventh street and would sell the Monroe street store and nine years' lease if an acceptable offer were received. Also, Lubliner & Trinz would entertain an offer for their handsome new Wabash avenue store so that they could devote all their time to the moving picture business. They have a lease for only one year, with the privilege of renewal for ten more.

The daily papers announced, May 22: "Edwin A. Kanst, Jr., 5329 Ellis avenue, was made superintendent of Lincoln park yesterday. He will take active charge of the park work June 1. Mr. Kanst for many years was employed as an assistant landscape engineer by the South park board, where he worked under the supervision of his father."

A big lot of bedding stock has occupied attention since the Easter plants were cleaned up. A new motor truck will soon replace the horse and wagon.

The filling of window boxes and planting of bedding stock is keeping all hands busy at the establishment of Geo. Wittbold Co., on Buckingham place. The demand for geraniums is fast eating up the large stock on hand.

Mrs. Carrie A. Maher, nee Eiseman, wife of John T. Maher, died May 21 at the Wesley hospital following an operation for appendicitis. Besides her husband, she is survived by a little son, John T., Jr. Before her marriage, Mrs. Maher was for a long time employed by the Atlas Floral Co.

A new concern has been organized under the name of the Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co. The incorporators have all been identified with the fertilizer trade of Chicago for many years and are as follows: President, John P. Bowles; vice-president, F. S. Markey; secretary, W. R. Love; treasurer, Chas. Goepper; manager, F. E. Moore. F. S. Markey was formerly identified with the Farmers' & Florists' Tankage Fertilizer Co. He states that John Tiplady, formerly gardener for A. B. Dick at Lake Forest, has been appointed sales manager and will assume his duties June 1.

The sidewalk in front of the store of W. W. Barnard Co., on West Madison street, presents the appearance of an old-fashioned garden. Bedding stock of all kinds is displayed and the advertising value is well demonstrated by the crowd of buyers coming and going all day long.

One of last week's visitors was Irvin Ingels, of La Fayette, Ill. He placed an order with the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co. for a house 27 x 200.

Visitors this week included two lady florists, Miss Kate Harris, of the Flower Shop, Memphis, and Mrs. Woodcock, proprietor of the Spencer Greenhouses, at Spencer, Iowa, who was on her way to Washington, D. C., for the commencement exercises in which her daughter will participate.

John Evans, of Richmond, is in town looking after ventilation jobs.

The Market.

Business last week was somewhat improved, owing to the delightful spring weather, which acted as a stimulus to trade. There have been no weddings to speak of, but a few large ones are booked for the latter part of May and early June. There are, however, numerous luncheons for the June brides. Funeral work has been plentiful the last few days. Transient trade is not brisk at present.

Roses have been scarce during the week, owing to the dark, rainy weather, and for several days there were no roses to be had after the day's shipment was disposed of at the commission house. It was necessary for buyers to stand and wait for the arrival of stock, in order to get any roses at all, and then pay a fancy price in the bargain. Peonies have made their appearance and are in fair condition, although somewhat small. Snapdragons are beginning to show signs of decline. Darwin tulips are with us again and have long, firm stems and wonderful coloring, with exquisite marking. They are used for a great many purposes. Carnations continue to come into the market in fine condition. Daffodils and jonquils are at an end, but yellow Darwin tulips are taking their place. Sweet peas are plentiful and fine in quality, the best they have been this season. This is especially true of the local flowers. Lilac sprays in lavender and white are abundant, but they are not selling well. Galax and magnolia wreaths are being made in advance for Memorial day, and everybody is expecting a big business day. However, the advance orders are not coming in fast.

Various Notes.

Jerry Brookins, of Orchard Park, is cutting a big crop of fine sweet peas of the Spencer type. The colors are pink, lavender, white, red and a beautiful shade of violet. They all have long stems and large blooms.

Mrs. I. R. Beyer has added a most attractive sign to her store, at 1375 Main street. The sign reads, "The Shop of Flowers," and is artistically designed. Mrs. Beyer reports business good for the last few weeks.

Benson J. Stafford had a good display window last week, consisting of a bird fountain and Japanese flower holders with yellow and white marguerites.

The Wm. F. Kasting Co. is producing some good Sunburst roses in the greenhouses at Erie, Pa. The quality of the roses is excellent, but there is not a great quantity of them.

The Wm. Scott Co., of Corfu, N. Y., is cutting a crop of good baby gladioli and Blushing Bride, and also some splendid snapdragons. The snapdragons, however, are about at an end, after a big cut of exquisite blooms.

J. G. Pickleman is having a great deal of funeral work these days, but other trade is rather quiet, he reports.

The tulip beds at Delaware park were at their best last week and gorgeous in their beauty. Handsome beds of blue and white hyacinths, and star and crescent-shaped beds of daffodils made a pleasing effect. In the hardy garden the clumps of English cowslips were of unusual interest, in charming shades of orange, tango, brown, maroon and golden yellow. In the conservatories there are special houses of geraniums, coleus, cannas and caladiums, all in excellent condition and ready to be set out in the various beds the first week in June.

Sunday, May 24, the Buffalo florists went to Rochester to visit the parks in that city and to look over the lilac collection in Highland park, which is the most famous in the world. The regular meeting of the club will be held Tuesday evening, June 2.

Visitors: J. Berg, of Lion & Co., New York, who still wears his genial smile, notwithstanding the fact that he has been married almost six months; Robert Dykes, representing Ed. Jansen, New York city; George W. Marshall, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh; William Lake, of New York, and Leroy Bates, of Akron, N. Y.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Elkhart, Ind.—Sheriff Leader levied May 14 on the greenhouse and retail flower store of William Currier, at 407 South Main street, to satisfy judgments on execution issued from the Superior court. The claims against Mr. Currier are one in favor of Sol. and Henry Stutzman for $135.75 and costs, and one for $144 in favor of the Chicago House Wrecking Co. The sheriff took charge of the property and will sell it to satisfy the execution. Mr. Currier has been unfortunate in his investments, it is said. Sheriff Leader placed Calvin Staples in charge of the Main street salesroom, and the greenhouse is also in the custody of an agent of the sheriff. If the judgments are not satisfied, the Currier property will be advertised and sold by the sheriff.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Eastern Market.

The cut flower market is still overabundantly supplied. The new factor is the heat, which puts the poorer grades of stock out of the race. The supply is so heavy that prices rule low. Only the finest stock brings listed quotations, while quantity orders, where selection is not required, can be had at buyers' figures.

Peonies are coming in more freely, with indications that a half or more of the local stock will be in bloom by the end of the week, which is considered as being in time, for peonies after Memorial day are not much desired. Most of the stock so far is from the south, but the local cuts are increasing daily. Cornflower, so popular for boutonnieres, has taken a tumble from the high figures of the last two or three weeks, due to increased receipts. Outdoor sweet peas, Spencer type, are in full bloom. They are extremely fine. The principal orchid is Cattleya gigas. Outdoor valley is over, leaving the field to the greenhouse grown stock, which needs what little demand is going. Easter lilies are slowly reviving from their depression. Carnations have felt the heat. Only the best stock is satisfactory. There are plenty of baby gladioli and irises.

The Twentieth of May.

It was 87 degrees in the shade. The coolest place in the spacious Girard College grounds was in the massive structure that holds the tomb of the great Stephen Girard. The lofty ceiling and stately columns lent an air of cool restfulness that was heightened by graceful palms, brilliant flowering plants and the mortuary emblems sent by the various classes and groups of young men who have left the college. It was a handsome display, effectively arranged, and one could not help wondering what the man in whose honor the day is celebrated would think of it all. Would one whose judgment of a fellowman was based on the implicit obedience and steady work shown in moving a large pile of bricks from one place to another and back again approve of this display? Or would he prefer greater simplicity? Probably not. The greatest men are but mortal and love of admiration is a most human trait.

Outside the bedding was arranged in red, white and blue for temporary effect, until it is warm enough to give the crotons their summer quarters. It was pretty, if only transient, giving a bit of color most pleasing to the whole. Charles W. Cox promises that when the beds are in their glory they will be something even better than in the past, excellent as that has been.

A New Club.

It may interest our retailers to know that just two days before the flower market held in Rittenhouse square May 20, or, to be exact, May 18, a club of society ladies was formed with the avowed object of beautifying their gardens, yards, window ledges or what not. The club, which is growing rapidly, may be called Yards and Yards and it may not. Anyone who has a flower pot with a plant in it, and who loves that plant and pot, can join. The members will aim to make what ground they have prettier, or their windows, or something. They will meet to see what each one has done and to tell how they did it. Here is the field for the retailers to cultivate.

Various Notes.

The credit list, or rather the discredit list, was worked over at last week's meeting of the Retail Florists' Association. It is good news to learn that this body will actively support the national show in 1916.

John L. Ratcliffe, of Richmond, Va.; Will H. Rehder and Mrs. Rehder, of Wilmington, N. C.; Lester Graham, of Warren, Pa.; W. F. Gude and A. Gude, of Washington, D. C., and the Malandre brothers, of New York city, were recent visitors.

Mrs. Fred Ehret returned May 28 from a three days' trip to Niagara Falls and Buffalo.

Alfred M. Campbell acted as godfather for Britton H. Miller May 24.

The Joseph Heacock Co. is glazing the new house at Roelofs, which will be planted with Radiance and Lady Hillingdon roses.

Charles Henry Fox believes that the publicity campaign of the Retail Florists' Association has done much toward making the good results of the season just closing, in which florists went ahead while other callings lagged.

Paul Berkowitz says that the red roses, pansies and violets in the metallic wreaths of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have made a favorable impression generally.

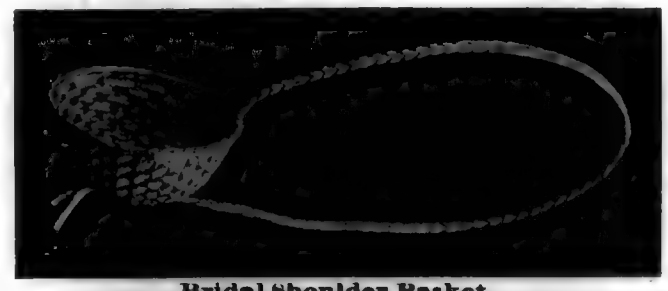
ST. LOUIS.



The Southwestern Market.

To say the market was crowded last week would be putting it mildly. The demand was quite large some days, but taking in the whole week, it hardly made an impression on the large consignments that came in daily at the five wholesale houses. The stock that came in was anything but extra fine quality and prices on all grades suffered greatly. The low prices that prevailed did not encourage retailers to buy heavily. This week, no doubt, business will be large on account of Memorial day trade. The great pageant and masque will also be a great help in disposing of the surplus. Prices will stiffen somewhat, but if the supply continues large, the advance will be only slight. There were plenty of fine cut peonies in pink and white from local and outside growers. Large receipts of these are expected for this week. Sweet peas continue in great abundance, with the bulk of them of poor quality. There is also a heavy crop of roses coming in. Richmond and Killarney are in greatest supply. The best of them hardly went over $6 per hundred at any time during the week. Easter lilies and callas continue in good supply. Carnations are holding up well, but most of them are showing the effects of the hot days. Gladioli were and are plentiful at all of the markets and promise to crowd the market this week. The price is down to $4 per hundred. Valley is in demand and of good quality. Daisies, both yellow and white, seem to take well with the trade. A great deal of outdoor stock is coming in, such as cape jasmine, forget-me-nots, candytuft, feverfew and larkspur. These, with peonies, should be in large demand by the end of the week, for Decoration day.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting May 18 at the Washington hotel. The meeting was not well attended. President Harry Young presided. An application for membership was filed. After disposing of all the business on hand, a discussion was started in regard to summer meetings, and it was decided by vote to hold no meetings during the months of June, July and August. The next meeting will be held September 21, although a special meeting for urgent business may be called at any time by the president.

The County Growers' Association will hold its regular monthly meeting June 4 at the Eleven Mile house. President Vennemann will, by that time, have returned from his honeymoon trip and will preside over the meeting. Secretary Deutschmann is making arrangements for the installation of the newly elected officers and the members should come out in full force to attend this meeting, as there is going to be something doing in the way of entertaining by the new officers.

Otto Sander, who is now with Grimm & Gorly, reports that the stork visited his home last week and left a fine baby girl. Mr. Sander was all smiles when his friends congratulated him.

W. C. Smith says that the wire department is working overtime making trellises, for which there are many advance orders.

Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week and A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, passed through on his way to Chicago from his vacation trip in Texas.

W. J. Pilcher's big new rose house at Kirkwood is nearing completion. Nearly all the Kirkwood growers contemplate adding some improvements to their places. Erecting new houses and rebuilding old ones will be going on from now on through the summer.

Grimm & Gorly, the Riessen Floral Co. and Alex. Siegel have prettily arranged Decoration day windows. They all report funeral work quite heavy last week, but in other lines trade was not so heavy. Special flower sales have been featured at these stores daily.

The C. Young & Sons Co., which does an exceptionally large shipping trade, reports a great many advance orders for Decoration day from near-by towns in Missouri and Illinois. The plant and seed business this year was large.

C. M. Shuh, representing the Home Mfg. & Supply Co., of Chicago, called on the trade last week, interesting them in metal and fiber jardinieres. This is a new line for the retailers.

Geo. H. Angermueller says he has been rushed all week with shipments of Decoration day supplies, orders for which still are coming in daily. His cut flower department was crowded during the week. In this line the demand was rather slow.

The unveiling of the "Naked Truth," in memory of the three late editors of a German publication, at Reservoir park, May 24, brought out a wealth of floral wreaths. Phil. Goebel, head of the park, made perfect arrangements to house the great crowds present.

Albert Stoneburner, the landscape gardener in the north end, was run down by a street car May 23 and is at the City hospital suffering from severe scalp wounds.

The St. Louis Poultry Supply & Seed Co. has moved its store from 706 North Seventh street to 520 North Third street. G. E. Meyers, the head of this concern, reports a large business in seeds and bulbs, both local and shipping.

The plantsmen in all parts of the city put in a busy week planting out, and expect by the end of the week to finish up the biggest part of their work, which they say was heavy this year.

All members of the S. A. F. in the eastern part of Missouri should keep in mind June 11, when they are to meet with the members of the Florists' Club. Arrangements are being made for this meeting by R. J. Windler, state vice-president for eastern Missouri.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

A regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held May 20. A beautiful display of flowers from hardy shrubs and herbaceous plants was staged. Judges Mooney and Featherstone awarded first prize to A. Golding, head gardener for D. G. L. Reid, and second to G. Wittlinger, head gardener for Miss B. Potter. A cultural certificate was awarded to T. Morris, gardener for D. G. L. Reid, for a vase of Mrs. Hugh Dickson sweet peas and one to S. R. Candler, head gardener to W. B. Thomson, for a plant of Cattleya gigas. Mr. Candler also received a certificate of merit for a new marguerite, a sport of Mrs. Sander. Mrs. C. Wilson received a vote of thanks for a vase of pink snapdragons and A. Golding one for a bouquet of wild flowers and a vase of wild cypripediums. Several new members were elected.

The Market.

Business continues to hold up well, although the prices are a little below the standard for this season of the year. Peonies are now arriving in quantity and are selling well at from $3 to $6 per hundred, with a good supply in sight. Beauties sold well last week at fair prices. Sweet peas also moved well. Roses are decreasing in quantity and are poorer in quality, as the extremely warm weather is showing its effect on these. Aside from peonies, the feature of the week was the arrival of some good Spanish iris, for which there was a good demand. A new crop of dagger and fancy ferns also arrived, but as plumosus and Sprengeri are now to be had in quantity, the demand is somewhat light. Asparagus is now plentiful for the first time since last fall. Plenty of Harrisii lilies can still be had at low figures. Callas are about over; only a few stragglers find their way to the market. Taken as a whole, business has been good for this, the off season of the year, but prices have been somewhat low.

Club Meeting.

The regular semimonthly meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was called to order May 25 by Vice-president Hamilton. Owing to the warm weather there was rather a small attendance. Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, spoke on the proposed trip by water to Boston in August, to attend the S. A. F. convention. A considerable number of out-of-town florists have already reserved berths and, as the boat capacity is limited, those who wish to go by this route should reserve their passage as soon as possible. The fare from this city is $15 one way and $25 round trip. This includes berth and meals. A one-day stop in Norfolk, Va., is included.

The members were reminded of the annual summer meeting of the Maryland Horticultural Society, to be held at College Park May 30, and a number are expected to attend.

FLOWERS ON THE RIVIERA.

Center of European Industry.

From a report, full of interesting information on the Riviera flower industry, issued by M. Aussel, secretary of the French Floral Industry League, it would appear that the value of the flowers annually dispatched from the French and Italian Riviera is no less than $12,028,820 and will this year exceed $12,200,000. The average number of boxes of flowers dispatched from the various French Riviera stations between November and May in each year is 2,000,000. As the average value of each box is 16 francs ($3.09), the total commercial value of the flowers sold from the French Riviera every year is $6,200,000. From the Italian side no less than 1,000,000 boxes were dispatched in 1913, the commercial value of which was $5,800,000.

Dealing more particularly with the French trade, M. Aussel says that apart from the roses, carnations, violets, etc., sent away, flowers to the value of $1,550,000 are utilized annually by the local perfumery and preserved sweet factories. The average annual net profits made out of the French flower trade on the Riviera by the actual growers is $2,725,000, but most of the Riviera flower growers likewise grow early vegetables and fruit, and the profit from trade in the latter is estimated to be $1,168,000, so that the average annual total profits of the growers are put at $3,893,000.

Paris the Largest Customer.

Paris is the biggest customer for Riviera flowers, and ten years ago Great Britain was, next to Paris, the French Riviera's best customer; but the first place among foreign customers has now been taken by Germany, England coming next, as shown by the following figures, in metric tons:

Years.	Paris. Tons.	Great Britain. Tons.	Germany. Tons.
1907-8	2,800	2,150	2,600
1908-9	3,400	2,150	3,000
1909-10	3,350	1,900	3,300
1910-11	3,550	2,250	3,500
1911-12*	3,500	2,150	3,700

*Approximate.

Formerly Austria was a good customer, but she now takes all her winter flowers from the Italian Riviera, and the competition of the Italian flower trade is giving the French growers some concern. Nevertheless the French Riviera continues to export to Rome and Milan a considerable number of boxes of flowers, because certain special varieties are produced by French growers which are not grown in Italy.

Owing to a more effective system of packing in wool, the French Riviera flower trade with Russia is annually increasing, notwithstanding the fact that it takes eighty-seven hours for a box of Riviera flowers to reach St. Petersburg. Only the most beautiful and the most expensive blooms are sent to Russia. It takes forty-eight hours for a box of Nice flowers to reach London or Berlin and twenty-one hours to reach Paris.

Sometimes the winter is too mild, even for the Riviera, and a sudden rise in temperature causes a glut of production for which there is no outlet; hence a fall in market value and loss of profit, the growers being obliged to sell their surplus production to the perfumery factories at any prices. Then, again, the winter flower trade is too centralized, Paris, London and Berlin being the three principal centers, and efforts are now being made to prevent congestion by opening up other markets in France, England and Germany. Another drawback is the great difficulty of keeping the flowers fresh during railway transport in mild weather. Often during mild winters the flowers, despite all precautions in packing, arrive at their destination in a faded condition, and are therefore unsalable.

The loss from this cause is considerable.

With a view to obviating this loss it is proposed to adopt a system of cold storage. In the course of various trials it was found that if flowers, immediately on being cut, were placed in cold storage from twenty-four to forty-eight hours, they afterwards preserved their freshness much better, even after a long railway journey in mild weather. Another advantage of cold storage was that the growers were enabled in periods of glut to keep cut flowers for two or three days before dispatching them. With a view to developing the cold storage principle the Paris, Lyon & Mediterranean railway has been asked by the various commercial syndicates interested in the flower trade to place a cold storage train daily at the disposal of the growers, instead of the special daily flower train that now exists. The railway company replies that it would have to raise its tariff, and that a 5-kilo (11-pound) parcel of flowers, which now, under parcel post rates, is carried from Nice to Paris for 16 cents, would, if carried by cold storage vans, cost 25 cents. The growers cannot afford to pay such tariffs, but have offered to take a certain number of cold storage vans daily from the company with a minimum guarantee of $78 per van from Nice to Paris. In consequence of this offer the railway company agreed to make a trial with one or two cold storage vans in April, 1914.

During the last fifteen years the competition on the Italian side of the Riviera has been making itself felt. Twenty years ago there were no Italian flower gardens, but since 1900 an enormous development has taken place, and whereas in 1895 the Italian Riviera was a barren waste so far as winter floral growth was concerned, the entire coast from Ventimiglia to Porto Mauricio is now a vast garden of winter roses, violets and carnations. As stated above, no less than 1,000,000 cases of flowers were dispatched in the winter of 1913 from the Italian Riviera, the commercial value being over $5,000,000. Profits, however, are less in proportion than on the French side of the Riviera, because, curiously enough, the Italian land requires more expensive manuring, the cost of suitable land is higher, and labor, instead of being cheaper than on the French side, as might be supposed, is, on the contrary, dearer. The reason given is that the Piedmontese flower laborers and gardeners prefer to seek employment on the French side, and in order to induce them to stay in Italy, higher wages have to be offered. The Italian flower trade has captured Italy, Austria and a large part of South Germany from the French growers, and now threatens to compete for the Spanish, Portuguese and Algerian trade, for, strange as it may appear, all cut flowers in the shape of winter roses and carnations seen at florists' shops in such southern cities as Seville, Lisbon, Algiers and Constantinople come from the French or Italian Riviera. Both at Seville and at Lisbon the climate would permit of winter floral culture, but no attempt is made to grow winter roses or carnations, because the demand is insufficient to make it profitable.—Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1913, to December 31, 1913, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 20%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders	$566.00
Less 20% allowed senders.. .. .	113.20
Net value of orders..... .:.	452.80

Here is an addition of $452.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

Yours respectfully,

The Market.

Memorial day expectancy now is in the air and everyone is looking for big business. Last week, except on Monday and Saturday, proved to be dull and considerable quantities of flowers went to the rubbish barrels. Carnations have been selling low. They now are in heavy crop and, while the bulk are being held back for Memorial day, more are placed on the market than it can gorge for the end of May. The quality is remarkably good. Roses have been cleaning up better than carnations, at from $1 to $8 per hundred. Only fancy stock has made the higher price, and the demand has been and is for short and medium grades, long-stemmed flowers being hard to move. American Beauties, which are fine, are selling cheaply and moving slowly.

Sweet peas are in considerable oversupply. Narcissi, except poeticus and the old double white, are gone; so are all the early tulips, but there is a good supply of Darwin, Gesneriana and other late varieties. Yellow marguerites are overdone. Snapdragon continues to sell poorly. There is an abundance of Easter lilies, with little demand, but these will sell better later in the week. Valley is abundant, both from outdoors and indoors. Lilac, as well as other outdoor flowers, is abundant. Cattleya Mossiæ still is plentiful. Gardenias continue to drag. Ferns are selling in large numbers, both hardy and adiantum. There also is a good call for sprays of plumosus. All the dealers in bedding plants are rushed to the limit in getting out orders, good weather having arrived at last.

Various Notes.

Norris F. Comley, of Burlington, has eleven large houses of sweet peas and his daily pick varies from 10,000 to 20,000. All are Spencer varieties and the quality is first-class. He will have an immense pick for Memorial day. He has eight houses devoted to his new Terrace Hall tomato.

J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., of Auburn, R. I., have a magnificent lot of long-stemmed Russell roses. Specially good also with them are Cardinal, Irish Fire Flame, Double White Killarney, Hadley and Sunburst.

Owing to the lateness of the season the several June exhibitions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society have been postponed as follows: Rhododendron show, June 13 and 14; peony show, June 20 and 21; rose show, June 27 and 28.

W. J. Dana, of Wellesley Hills, has the sympathy of many friends in the trade in the death of his wife, which occurred May 19. Mr. Dana, who was one of the pioneers in the trade, sold out his place to E. J. Ahearn and retired a few years ago.

store this season. His advance orders for Memorial day are far ahead of last year. He has hired a large extra store to properly handle his plant and Memorial day trade.

The W. W. Edgar Co. says that never has there been such a rush of orders for bedding plants, hydrangeas, etc. At present Gesneriana and other late tulips are being cut in quantity.

Of late Thomas Roland has been cutting from 5,000 to 7,500 roses daily at Revere and will have 25,000 available for Memorial day. He will start picking tomatoes from one of his mammoth houses within a week.

The Westboro Greenhouses have a splendid crop of giant ten weeks' stocks and carnations for Memorial day.

McAlpine & McDonald are getting fine America gladioli from C. S. Andem, Putnam, Conn. They expect to handle 4,000 bunches of feverfew for Memorial day.

Wax Bros. had a large funeral order at Hallowell, Me., last week, including a beautiful casket cover of valley and cattleyas. This stood on a carpet of Killarney roses.

Willow Hill Greenhouses is sending in an extra fine lot of show pelargoniums and French hydrangeas to the Boston Flower Exchange.

Mann Bros. are nearing the end of the season with bulbous flowers. This week they have a fine assortment of Darwin and other late flowering tulips.

In the Arnold Arboretum the malus collection this season was at its best May 22. The extensive lilac collection was fine May 25. The cornus and cratægus also are good now.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. is featuring artificial wreaths heavily this year and has received orders for them from all parts of New England.

N. E. Boyle, of Malden, says he will have a heavy crop of Richmond, Hillingdon, Killarney and White Killarney for Memorial day. His roses have done particularly well this season.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are rushed to the limit this week.

A. F. Coolidge, of Cambridge, is busy with bedding plants. No better grown geraniums, verbenas, petunias, heliotropes and cannas are to be seen locally.

Callers last week included F. G. Sealy, representing Julius Roehrs Co., and H. Waterer and J. L. McIntosh, Philadelphia.

Welch Bros. Co. reports advance orders for Memorial day as heavier than in any previous year.

Artificial wreaths are cutting more of a figure here this year than ever before and it looks as though this end of the flower business was being heavily overdone. Some retailers do not handle them, while others offer little else and have orders for immense numbers. I have always failed to see any sentiment in these artificial creations. That they will this season seriously hurt the sale of natural flowers goes without saying.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, June 15, will, as usual, be kept as ladies' night, with a program suitable to the occasion. There will be a small charge for admission this year, which everyone attending must pay.

A call at the seed stores, May 23, showed all to be busy. While the season opened up late, it has been prolonged more than usual and sales are well ahead of those of a year ago.

The convention garden committee visited the garden in the Back Bay fens, May 21, and found quite a number of beds planted. Growers who have not yet secured space should hurry up before it is all gone. The

The Market.

Perhaps it was because some days last week broke the May records for extreme heat, with a temperature of 90 degrees, or it may have been an echo of the general depression in all lines of trade; at any rate, after Monday, May 18, stagnation and decrepitude alone express the condition of the wholesale cut flower market. Prices fell steadily until less than the summer level was reached, and even Saturday brought no evidence of revival. A temporary revival is anticipated for a short time preceding Memorial day, after which, apart from the June weddings, there seems little hope of any uplift in prices before September. Peonies are already arriving in abundant measure, and the growers in this section are hoping for the perfection of bloom in time for Memorial day. Southern shipments of peonies are large and increasing daily. The same may be said of gladioli.

There are few perfect American Beauties and the top price now for the best of them is from $15 to $20 per hundred. Beauties seem to have carried the teas down with them and values have lessened all along the line. Shipments are heavy, especially of Killarney. Large buyers make their own terms and prices. Quality is not so general in the carnation department and quotations are low. Even in small quantities $1.50 to $2 per hundred was considered high; $10 per thousand was the prevailing figure. Anything "off color" sold at 50 cents per hundred and even less. A better level is predicted for Saturday.

Every wholesaler seems to be well supplied with orchids. Gigas maintains its standard of quality, but seldom sells above $50 per hundred. Mossiæ brings from $10 to $20 per hundred. Lilies are quoted at $4 to $6 per hundred. A top of $8 seems certain for Friday and Saturday. Valley is abundant and prices barely steady. There are few gardenias left. Iris, gladioli, tulips and callas are not selling encouragingly and daffodils and narcissi seem to have said farewell.

Various Notes.

June 9 is the date of the last meeting of the New York Florists' Club until September. The essay committee has promised a lecture and the house committee is due for a farewell luncheon. Some interesting exhibits are promised for this final gathering. Full information will be given in regard to the route selected for the New Yorkers who attend the S. A. F. convention. The club's annual outing will take place Wednesday, July 1, and Glen Island is the spot selected.

J. J. BENEKE

1216 Olive St. ST. LOUIS, MO.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.

The bedding season has commenced in earnest and all growers are busy. With favorable weather the greenhouses should soon be cleared out.

J. J. Kelley, of Valley Falls, has a large bench of excellent gladioli. Mr. Kelley has secured half the order of the Iron Workers' Union for magnolia wreaths for Memorial day.

W. Sword, of Valley Falls, is extremely busy with outside work. He has secured the other half of the order of the Iron Workers' Union.

Sometime last week about $10 worth of trees and shrubs was stolen from the Grosvenordale Nursery. K. J. Murphy reported that he had missed a section of hedge plants, two magnolia trees and four rose bushes.

The J. Shedden Co. has been busy the last week with funeral work.

Several of the local florists have run out of geraniums, and had to buy such stock as could be had at once for Memorial day. T. F. B.

Akron, O.—Henry Heepe's Sons note a decided improvement in business since moving across the street into the new store.

Birmingham, Ala.—For the opening of the 27-story Jefferson County Savings Bank, the McVay Seed Co. made a replica of the building, as close in appearance as was possible, of flowers and ferns. It measured 2½ x 4½ x 16 feet and was the work of E. A. Doetch, manager of the seed company's flower department, who was formerly with the Geo. Wittbold Co., of Chicago. The piece was much admired at the opening and has been used to illustrate the company's advertisements.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-second annual convention, Washington, D. C., June 23 to 25, 1914.

THE seed selling season has tapered off rapidly in the last few days. The season is about over. It has been an unusually good one.

A NEW seed store has been opened at Atlanta, Ga. The name of the concern is the Smith Bros. Seed Co. and its headquarters are at 127 Whitehall street.

FLORISTS will have none of the old type of sweet peas after this season's market experience and it looks as though the gardening public soon will call for Spencer varieties almost exclusively for outdoor use.

THE Senate passed the agricultural appropriation bill May 23, with the free seeds appropriation left out. The bill now is in conference, where the House friends of free seeds will try to have their paragraph put back, as has been done before.

DAMAGE SUITS FOLLOW FIRE.

As a result of the falling of the west wall of the Missouri Athletic Club on the store of the St. Louis Seed Co., at St. Louis, Mo., after the disastrous fire last March, the seed company is defendant in two damage suits for a total of $45,000. Herman Cobb, a salesman for the St. Louis Seed Co., has sued the Boatmen's Bank, which owned the Missouri Athletic Club building; the seed company and the Gray-Wimmer Construction Co. for $25,000, for injuries he received when the wall fell. Joseph McNally, a laborer, has sued the seed company, the Gray-Wimmer Construction Co., the Boatmen's Bank and the Central Real Estate Co. for $20,000, for injuries he suffered when the wall fell.

A MATTER OF NAMES.

In a recent issue of The Review there was reference to the case of Passinger vs. Thorburn in the matter of a litigation over a certain seed transaction. We suppose you know that this Thorburn has never had any connection with the house of J. M. Thorburn & Co., though many of your readers may think the citation refers to us. The above-mentioned Thorburn was a William Thorburn, in business in Albany for a number of years. The case in question we remember well as the result of the selling of a certain variety of cabbage seed away back in 1857. The case was not finally decided by the Court of Appeals of the state of New York until 1866.

We are making this memorandum because most people would certainly otherwise infer that the case in question referred to our house, while, as we have

BUY RIGHT— WRITE US NOW

You would not buy your coal of a druggist—your lumber or iron of your grocer—then why not buy your lily bulbs of lily bulb importers? The importing of lily bulbs is our game—we have made a deep study of the business from the time the seed bulblets are planted clean through up to the time of the disposal of the flowering crop—and without any flattery we can safely say that we know the game from A to Z. Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs are the best to be had—why risk buying any others? Profit by our experience in bringing the brand to the top notch—gained at an expense and outlay of many good simoleons. On orders placed now we can make deliveries from any of the following distributing cities:

NEW YORK	CHICAGO
BOSTON	CINCINNATI
PITTSBURGH	OMAHA
PHILADELPHIA	MINNEAPOLIS
NASHVILLE	BUFFALO
GRAND RAPIDS	TORONTO
VANCOUVER	DENVER

The building will be of reinforced concrete construction, with steel sashes and wired glass windows. The structure will have eighty feet frontage on Fort street and 130 feet on Twenty-first street, giving the company nearly three times its present floor area. The officers of the company are: President, John Pinten; vice-president, Charles W. Latham; secretary and treasurer, J. Lee Gillespie.

THE WASHINGTON CONVENTION.

Thirty-second Annual Meeting.

The interest in the thirty-second annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, to be held at Washington, D. C., June 23, 24 and 25, points to a large attendance and a lively meeting. The fact that the national capital is the place of meeting will undoubtedly draw many, and the program that has been prepared includes subjects which are strong in their appeal to seedsmen's attention. Those which Secretary Kendel points out particularly are the address of Curtis Nye Smith, the association's counsel, on "The Proper Use of the Disclaimer," and that of F. W. Bruggerhof, on "The Cental System of Selling Seeds and Its Advantages." The headquarters of the association at Washington will be the Raleigh, at the corner of Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue.

The Program.

The program of the meeting is as follows:

"Selling Seeds at Wholesale: Salesmen, Catalogues, Surplus Lists and Circulars," by Watson S. Woodruff, of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn.

"Printers' Ink Advertising: Farm Journals and General Advertising," by A. E. McKenzie, of Brandon, Manitoba.

"Trial Grounds and Their Advantages to Seedsmen," by Dr. W. W. Tracy, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

"The Cental System of Selling Seeds and Its Advantages," by F. W. Bruggerhof, of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York.

"The Proper Use of the Disclaimer," by Curtis Nye Smith, of Boston, Mass.

"Overhead Costs System," by Max Fischer, treasurer of Woodward & Lothrop, Inc., Washington, D. C.

MAINE POTATOES QUARANTINED.

Notice of quarantine No. 14, prohibiting the shipment of potatoes from the state of Maine into or through any other state, territory or district of the United States, has been issued by B. T. Galloway, acting secretary of agriculture, to take effect August 1, 1914. The powdery scab, designated as a dangerous potato disease and known scientifically as Spongospora subterranea, which has not heretofore been widely prevalent or distributed in the United States, has been found to exist in Maine, and to prevent its spread the federal horticultural board has put its ban on the shipment out of the state of the common or Irish potato, except in accordance with the plant quarantine act.

a letter from Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Galloway, in response to his telephonic request, saying that for a number of years the department had been conducting experiments with a view to establishing the bulb industry on the Pacific coast. Large quantities of Dutch bulbs are imported for the congressional seed distribution. The secretary said it is important the bulb culture work be continued in Washington state, as it is a valuable industry and could be well established in this country. The secretary recommended an appropriation of $12,000 to encourage the bulb production in the United States. There was some objection, but Senator Jones insisted the work is to determine if bulbs can be produced in this country. He admitted, however, that the bulbs produced in Washington state had been used to fill out the congressional distribution. Senator Jones' amendment was then adopted. P.

GOVERNMENT PRESS SERVICE.

The United States Department of Agriculture is doing the trade a service in the series of garden articles which are being contributed to the newspapers of the country through the Office of Information recently established in the Department. The articles are of a character similar to those sent out for several years by the National Council of Horticulture. For instance, No. 5 of the Lawn Series, which will be released for publication in the afternoon papers of May 30, is entitled "Roses to Adorn Home Grounds." No matter of cultural character can be written to fit the climatic conditions of all parts of the United States and necessarily there are those who will disparage any general matter of this nature, but the more garden publicity there is the better it will be for the trade as a whole. If the material given to the press does not fit local conditions it affords the local man the opportunity to show his value to the community—he can do it by word of mouth to his customer or by a communication to the newspapers.

NAME OF WILD FLOWER.

I am sending you a few plants, of which I should like to know the name. They grow wild in the woods in Michigan. D. H.

The plants forwarded were delayed in the mails and were much withered. The identification of the variety, however, is reasonably certain. It is what is known as the sweet white violet of the older manuals—Viola blanda. It seems to answer pretty well to the description of Viola pallens (Banks) Brainerd, in Gray's new manual. It is found in the sand-dune and bog region southeast of Chicago. This violet is dainty in habit of growth and quite select in its choice of habitat. It bears some resemblance to Viola odorata, the English sweet violet.

THE GLAD HAND

GLADIOLI -- GLADIOLUS -- GLADIOLUSES

Which is right?—the only way to find out is to plant some of our stock. And if planted now, or even later, they will BLOOM when the earlier planted stock is past, which means higher prices for the flowers and is GOOD BUSINESS. We offer the following varieties, less 5% if cash accompanies the order:

BODDINGTON'S QUALITY GLADIOLI

AMERICA (Our Specialty). This beautiful new Gladiolus has produced as great a sensation as the now famous Princeps. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color and, as a florist who saw it said, it is "fine enough for a bride's bouquet."

Selected Bulbs, 2 to 2½ inches: 25c per doz., $1.75 per 100, $15.00 per 1000. 1st size, 1½ to 2 inches: 20c per doz , $1.50 per 100, $12.00 per 1000; 1 to 1½ inches: $1.25 per 100, $10.00 per 1000.

PEACE. The flowers are large, of good form and correctly placed on a heavy, straight spike. They are a beautiful white, with a pale lilac feathering on the inferior petals.
"Peace" is not an early bloomer, but rather medium to late, and planted at the same time with other stock, it is in its best condition when most other varieties have passed blooming. Per doz. $1.25, per 100 $9.00, per 1000 $85.00.

Grand Novelty Orchid-flowered Gladiolus

MRS. FRANK PENDLETON, JR. Order early to procure Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Jr. Awarded First-Class Certificate of Merit by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society of Boston and by the American Gladiolus Society at Baltimore, 1911. Its color is the most exquisite salmon-pink with a very conspicuous blood-red blotch in the throat on the lower petals. Per doz. $5.00, per 100 $40.00.

PINK AUGUSTA. Color a lovely soft pink. This variety is especially suitable for forcing under glass, for which purpose it is especially recommended. Per doz. 35c., per 100 $2.50, per 1000 $20.00.

EUROPA. One of the finest white Gladioli, and the individual flowers are the purest in snowy whiteness. $1.75 per doz., $14.00 per 100.

DAWN. (Tracy's.) The most beautiful shell-pink Gladiolus ever offered. A long, graceful spike of magnificently formed flowers, all open at one time. $1.00 per doz., $7.50 per 100.

INDEPENDENCE. A brilliant rose-pink, with richly marked throat. A long spike of wax-like flowers. One of the best for cut-flowers and for massing because of its color and the lasting quality of the bloom. $2.75 per 100, $25.00 per 1000.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A few early weddings and a fair amount of funeral work just kept things moving last week; trade is undoubtedly dull, and unless Memorial day is better than usual the season will have to be classed as an extremely poor one. The quantity of outdoor stock now on the market is large and the value is practically nil. The steel-blue daisy, Arctotis acaulis, makes a pretty show now, and gladioli are at their best. The new Panama is a decided improvement on America as grown here. Orchids are overplentiful; at least, cattleyas are. There are not sufficient phalænopsis flowers for the demand, and it is a healthy sign that other flowers besides cattleyas are gaining in favor. Roses are overplentiful; so are carnations, and both are good. Valley is rather plentiful and the demand is fair. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

One of the most important nursery deals consummated here for a long time was the securing, by the Germain Seed & Plant Co., of 280 acres of land on the Whittier road. It has a long frontage, about two miles, on that much traveled thoroughfare and includes the present trial grounds. The value from an advertising point of view is great, and besides this, the land is good, alluvial soil, with sufficient mire and loam to make it ideal for balling. The extreme east of the property comes within a few yards of the Montebello town line, and here is the site of the proposed nursery buildings and glass. Within a short distance are the nursery establishments of Howard & Smith, Jacob Dieterich and Charles Winsel, as well as the great rose growing establishment of Henry Turner. The rapid growth of the nursery end of this old established firm's business has made this extension necessary. Large quantities of stock are being prepared at the propagating houses and this, when planted in the pure air and high altitude of this tract, is bound to give splendid results. The east side nurseries of the firm will be sold shortly and all retailing in future will be done at the Main street establishment. The Germain Seed & Plant Co. deserves great credit for its spirited policy along this line.

During the hot season it will only be necessary to drop in at Frank Lichtenberger's and see his window to feel cool. It is the prettiest idea I have seen for a long time. A fountain plays on top of what looks to be a large mushroom or toadstool, the water dripping into a miniature lake in which are water lilies, fish and other beasties. It is natural looking and extremely pleasing. At the time of my call all hands were busy on wedding work, except Bert Bateman, who has been on the sick list.

At Darling's Flower Shop several good weddings have kept things moving.

At the greenhouses of the Superior Nursery Co., C. Gutting is putting in a pair of 20-horse-power boilers, which can be worked either alone or together, and a new hot water heating plant.

The Huntington place is looking fine just now, the cool, moist weather having helped the newly planted stock materially. The lawns are in splendid condition, and the flowering and evergreen shrubs are making elegant growth. The progress made in this place is truly wonderful, the Japanese garden in particular being beautiful now. The orchid houses are gay with magnificent cattleyas, Mossiæ and gigas being at their best. There is also a fine collection of vandas imported from Singapore, and it surely seemed like old times to see these magnificent old orchids again. Vanda teres and V. Bensoni are among those in bloom and V. gigantea is showing spikes.

While the horticultural end has had so far to give way to the architectural at the new park being established by the Selig Polyscope Co., there is no doubt that eventually this will be a show place of great beauty. Mr. Selig is a great lover of flowers and trees, and has taken great care that none of the trees already on the property is damaged. Considerable planting has been done, including some large specimens, notably a pair of immense Phœnix Canariensis that cost $150 each to move. It is expected that the animal part, at least, will be opened to the public the coming winter.

Geo. Chandler, one of Howard & Smith's most capable outside salesmen, has gone to England on a visit to his relatives.

H. R. R.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Trade is pretty quiet. With the exceptionally early season for outdoor flowers, there is no great demand for the florists' stock. It is a long time since outside flowers were blooming so early and the market is flooded with roses, irises and other varieties. Sweet peas are of fine quality and are selling better than most other flowers. Carnations are fairly plentiful and are holding their price pretty well. Snapdragons are lending an attractive air to the stores. We have had dry weather for some time and more sunshine and heat so far than we have in an average season. Unless we get a good fall of rain before long, the flowers will not continue to bloom so long as usual.

The demand for bedding plants has not been so extensive as usual this year, partly on account of the mild winter, as many plants were saved in houses and basements. Hence, with an enormous quantity on the market, prices have ruled low.

Various Notes.

John Holze, of the Queen City Floral Co., has purchased a new motor car, and, with a new delivery car on the way, it looks as if there were some money in the flower business yet. It is a pleasure to report that Mrs. Holze has quite recovered from her recent severe illness.

Howe & Aune, who purchased the Rainier Valley Rose Gardens from Henry Morgan, are cutting fine sweet peas, for which they find a ready sale. They are also cutting heavy crops of Cecile Brunner and other roses.

The Woodland Park Floral Co., at Sumner, is now picking an excellent crop of tomatoes.

CUT FLOWERS AND FLORISTS' SUPPLIES

IN ANY QUANTITY ROSES AT ANY TIME

Now that you have decided definitely on your planting for the coming season, would esteem it a pleasure to submit samples and prices covering your requirements. Our stock is in splendid shape for immediate planting, especially in the following varieties. We guarantee satisfaction.

Prince E. C. d'Arenberg—This sterling new red is being planted heavily and is going to make a record. We have an extra fine lot of it for June 1st and later delivery. At the price we are delivering it for, you can give it a very liberal trial.

Mrs. Geo. Shawyer—Here is another one that you make no mistake in devoting a liberal amount of your bench space to. You will eventually discard all other pinks for it. Better make a good start this season; there will be no regrets.

Dble. White Killarney—Will surely supersede the original; larger, stronger, double and pure white in the hottest weather.

Lady Alice Stanley—A grand rose and easy to handle, of extremely vigorous growth, splendid at all seasons of the year.

Killarney Queen—A favorite with every one, wherever tried, always in demand at advanced prices.

Jonkheer J. L. Mock—Gaining friends everywhere, this giant pink has made a great place for itself and deservedly so.

Sunburst—The only yellow rose you can afford to devote space to, and a big money-maker.

Antoine Rivoire (Mrs. Taft)—Sells on sight and a favorite with every one; always brings top prices; beautiful in all stages of development and a splendid keeper.

Milady—A wonderfully good red that has proven itself a winner; grow cool and you will be surprised with its vigorous growth and freedom.

Mlle. Cecile Brunner—This charming little rose is a staple in every first-class flower shop in the country. There is always room for a few benches of it, and the returns are steady and generous.

Prima Donna—The demand exceeds the supply wherever grown, and is being planted in greatly increased quantities this season. Larger than Russell and a better and easier one to handle.

Mrs. Wakefield Christie-Miller—Strong grower, a big, massive built rose that every one likes, and very free.

availing; yet there will be plenty of all varieties of stock to go around. Carnations are giving a heavy cut, but are showing the effects of the heat. There is an oversupply of roses and it is almost impossible to keep the accumulation moving at a reasonable price. Kaiserins have suffered a severe attack of mildew, but the flowers are unusually choice. Snapdragon has proved a good asset this season; a good harmony of colors always finds a ready sale. Cecile Brunner roses have been wonderful sellers throughout the season and are giving a heavy cut now. They will be grown more extensively next season. Indications are that June weddings and decorations will be numerous. The bookings for valley and orchid bouquets is picking up.

Various Notes.

Commencing June 1 the florists will close their stores at 8 p. m. during the week, at 9 p. m. Saturdays and at 1 p. m. Sundays. This will apply the year around, with slight variations during the winter season. This action is taken because it is thought that the business that usually comes after these closing hours will come earlier when it is definitely understood.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

The retailers are busy with the planting trade, and the growers are busy making plant deliveries and soliciting orders for Memorial day. The supply for this occasion looms up as a serious problem, as there will be practically nothing in outdoor flowers. Of course, this stimulates the market for greenhouse stock and leads to better prices for the grower, with a corresponding rise in the retail price. A few growers have reported good batches of giganteums, which will be ready May 30, but these have been eagerly snatched up at the first mention. Trade conditions, on the whole, are not so good as at this time last year, due probably to the fact that more groceries, markets and other stores outside the florists' trade are handling plants, many of them carrying even larger stocks than the florists.

Various Notes.

The last two days of last week, May 22 and 23, were designated by the Spokane Ad. Club as aster days, the aster being the official flower of Spokane. On those days thousands of dozens were planted, the florists making a special price of two dozen for 25 cents. The Ad. Club furnished the florists with waterproof wrappers with planting directions neatly printed thereon.

Hoyt Bros. Co. has a card hanging on the wall in its store, which reads, "Business is good." A glance into the store at almost any time of the day bears out the belief that it is telling the truth.

DISEASED PALMS.

Enclosed you will find a sample of palm leaves that appear to be diseased. The disease usually shows first on the outside leaves; later the central part of the plant rots. Please let me know the cause and the cure.

G. F. O.

The segments of a leaf enclosed with this query give decided evidence of a fungoid trouble that is known to palm growers as spot, a disease that is usually encouraged by the combination of too much moisture with too low a temperature. Palms in general enjoy abundant moisture, but it is quite possible that the plant in question suffered from too low a temperature during the winter while in a wet condition. There are few commercial palms that flourish in a lower night temperature than 55 degrees and the majority prefer not less than 60 degrees.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE death of S. S. Howell, of the Howell Nursery Co., Knoxville, Tenn., is recorded in this week's obituary column.

THE Puget Sound Nursery & Seed Co., of Seattle, Wash., has been incorporated for $2,500 by William and Arthur Hemrich.

PARK work to the extent of $7,000 was recently completed for the city of Macon, Ga., by the Texas Nursery Co., of Sherman, Tex.

A RECENT addition to the force of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., at Owatonna, Minn., is S. Bell, formerly local manager of the G. A. Swan Co., which closed its grain elevator at Owatonna.

IRVIN INGELS, proprietor of the Home Nurseries, La Fayette, Ill., has been able to get along since 1887 without a greenhouse, but has ordered material for one 27x200 to be used for propagating purposes.

TWENTY acres of fruit trees were recently set out by J. D. Durksen, proprietor of the Garden City Nurseries, at San Jose, Cal. Fruit trees are his specialty, although he has also a good line of ornamentals.

A NEW apricot will be introduced in 1915 by Elmer Bros., of San Jose, Cal. It is of about the same shape as the Blenheim, a vigorous grower and prolific bearer. The firm expects great things of this new variety.

THE organization of a nursery company to grow Norway spruce for Christmas trees at Rock Island, Ill., is being planned. C. E. Taylor is one of the prime movers. About ten acres will be purchased to start with, it is said.

THE Citronelle Nursery & Orchard Co. has been organized by L. Reeves, Mina Reeves and R. L. Scott, of Citronelle, Ala. The company is incorporated with $6,000 capital stock, and L. Reeves is president and R. L. Scott, secretary.

THE 913-acre tract of the West Michigan Nursery Co., at Eau Claire, Mich., at one time one of the largest nursery concerns in the state, has been divided up into farms and is being sold. A heavy freeze several years ago killed an immense quantity of stock, causing a loss from which the proprietors did not recover.

THE CLEVELAND CONVENTION.

The nurseryman who fails to attend the thirty-ninth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, at Cleveland, June 24 to 26, will not only do himself an injustice, but will exhibit a great lack of appreciation of the benefits he has derived from the work of the association. The attendance promises to be large, but the accommodations at the Hollenden hotel, the convention headquarters, will be ample, and there are comfortable quarters for the convention sessions. The committees are determined nothing shall be wanting to make this a notable occasion.

Perhaps the subject of railroad transportation demands more attention just now. Of late years it has been more difficult than formerly to meet the conditions which entitle conventions to railroad certificates. Then, too, many do not care to be tied down to the rule requiring them to return home by the going route and to be compelled to return within three days after adjournment of meeting.

Therefore, we strongly urge all to see their local agents now in regard to routes and tourist, excursion and other rates. Demand the fullest information regarding each, for the routings and rates are so varied that almost any personal wish can be met. For instance, tickets will be on sale from all points in Texas to Pittsburgh, Pa., and return, at a rate of $46.65 from Denison, Tex. These tickets can be routed via the Big Four road from St. Louis to Cleveland, the holder having the option of making the return trip from Cleveland or of taking what might be termed a free trip from Cleveland to Pittsburgh and return. Also, anyone from the southwest desiring to go to Buffalo or New York can obtain reasonable round-trip tickets allowing a stop-over at Cleveland. Eastern passengers will be glad to learn that the Cleveland & Buffalo Transit Co. offers attractive rates between Buffalo and the convention city. In our announcement circular we gave a brief synopsis of rates from the Pacific coast, and also from prominent eastern points.

The badge book will be mailed to members in time to be received before leaving home for the convention. Those whose membership renewals are not received in time to be admitted to the badge book should lose no time in sending the fee to the secretary, in order that their names may appear in the published proceedings of the association. John Hall, Secretary.

You may discontinue our advertisement, as we are through with our spring shipments, but we will give you another order for fall, as THE RESULTS from the one for spring HAVE BEEN VERY SATISFACTORY.—Franklin Davis Nursery Co., Baltimore, Md., May 19, 1914.

RATES FOR PACIFIC MEETING.

Nurserymen who attend the meeting of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen will be allowed a reduction of approximately one-third the fare over several railroads, according to the recent announcement of F. P. Herbert, Tacoma passenger agent of the Great Northern Railway Co. Those who travel by these lines will get their tickets for one and one-third of the regular charge for a one-way ticket. The Great Northern Railway Co. will put in effect the reduced rates from points in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and British Columbia. The convention is to be held at Vancouver, B. C., June 16, 17 and 18.

RULINGS ON IMPORTATIONS.

Shipments Without Certificates.

From foreign countries which maintain nursery stock inspection commercial shipments of nursery stock occasionally come which, on account of the negligence of the foreign shipper, do not have the necessary certificate of inspection attached to the invoice and the copy certificates attached to the individual containers. April 14 the federal horticultural board ruled that such shipments would be allowed entry at United States ports after inspection of the stock at the expense of the importer by an inspector of the Department of Agriculture. The foreign shipper is to be warned that further shipments from him unaccompanied by the required certificates of inspection will be refused entry.

Returning American Stock.

The board also passed recently upon an inquiry whether a permit would be required for the return to the United States of American nursery stock shipped to points in Canada and there refused by the Canadian inspectors or by the consignees for any reason. In the ruling the board stated that the only means of returning such stock to the United States would be by permit, but that under these circumstances the original United States certification would be accepted in place of foreign

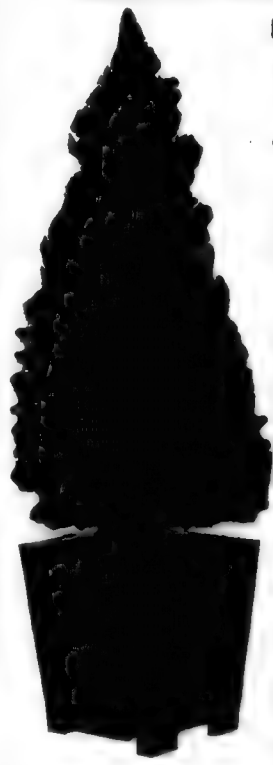
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business is quiet except for funeral work, but everybody is busy in preparation for Memorial day. Everywhere wreaths of magnolia and galax are being made in abundance. Growers and dealers in bedding stock are active. Ideal weather for outdoor work has materially increased the work of the gardeners and foresters. In cut flowers there is a sufficient supply of everything, and prices are almost at the lowest ebb.

Various Notes.

Alfred Wilson has been appointed by Judge Stone, of the Municipal court, as custodian of the estate of Eric Bonevier, with a bond of $2,500. John G. Jensen is one of the appraisers of the estate.



The funeral of D. J. Shea, a member of the Rhode Island House of Representatives, gave the florists in the vicinity of Pawtucket considerable business. More than fifty set pieces were sent.

Land has been cleared at the Olney Williams place in Johnston preparatory to the erection of two large greenhouses, replacing old ones.

The annual premium list of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society has been published and is now being distributed. The first exhibition of the year will be held June 17 in the parlors of the Mathewson Street Methodist church and the fall exhibition at the same place November 3 and 4.

The flower store of S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., on Main street, Westerly, was broken into Monday night, May 18, and the cash register rifled of the money that had been left for making change. No damage was done to plants.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

There is an abundance of all kinds of flowers, good and bad. Great quantities of outside flowers are shipped into the market; these could have had little value when packed and are almost worthless on arrival in the market. However, there are plenty of good roses and carnations to supply all demands, except, perhaps, for Decoration day, when there will probably be a shortage. There have really been no fine peonies in the market to date, but they will probably arrive this week, and they want to get here, for their name will be "Dinnis" after Decoration day.

Plantsmen have had a great harvest and many of them are already about out of stock. Good geraniums and alternantheras seem to be in shortest supply. It looks as if this would be a good year for the plantsmen.

The retail flower stores do not seem to be doing a great deal as far as cut flowers are concerned and there has been some complaint about things being dull. The weather today has turned extremely hot and will probably be hard on shipments of cut flowers.

Various Notes.

Henry Menschke, of Castle Shannon, will build three more houses this fall, to be devoted to roses and carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Ludwig visited their sons at Cornell last week.

At the next meeting of the Florists' Club, June 2, Mr. Barnes, state entomologist, will give a lecture on "Spraying," a subject on which he is well versed and which is of vital importance to most gardeners. E. C. Reineman, chairman of the ways and means committee, will discuss the trip to the S. A. F. convention at Boston, via steamship around the coast. Everyone will bring seasonable flowers.

Clarke.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. has bought from F. F. Nicola and Wilbur Shenk 40 x 110 feet on Sandusky street, between Penn avenue and Duquesne way, whereon to erect a building for its own use. The price paid for the lot is not definitely known, but is understood to be about $120,000.

Wrentham, Mass.—Samuel A. Wing has discovered what he believes to be a sure remedy for cutworms, both in the field and in the greenhouse. He would like to put it on the market as a proprietary article and is casting about for the best method and means.

New Rose, Killarney Brilliant

THE MOST VALUABLE ROSE INTRODUCED IN MANY YEARS.

We consider this new rose—a sport from the original pink Killarney—the most valuable rose that has been introduced in many years. It is well named Killarney Brilliant, on account of its brilliant color.

It is a great improvement on the original pink Killarney; first, because of its much more brilliant color, it being almost crimson in bright weather, while in midwinter—in dull, cloudy and foggy weather,—when the original pink Killarney loses its brilliancy and becomes badly faded, Killarney Brilliant is as bright and deep a pink as the original variety at its best. In addition to its great superiority in color, the flower is almost twice as large, having from twenty-five to forty full-sized petals.

It has the same desirable color that Killarney Queen possesses, but has double the number of petals, making it a very double and a fuller flower; and it is also very much more productive, having the same habit of growth and the same freedom of bloom as its parent.

We have watched Killarney Brilliant growing during the past winter, planted in the same house with the original and the double pink Killarney, and when those varieties faded so as to be almost unmarketable, Killarney Brilliant was superb. We are thoroughly convinced that it will immediately supplant the original Killarney as the standard market variety, and that every up-to-date grower will be compelled to plant it, on account of its great superiority. A prominent rose grower, who has seen it growing, says it is the only rose he has ever seen that needs no advertising; it sells itself.

F. R. PIERSON CO., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, NEW YORK

FROM MISSOURI

These gentlemen have "been shown" the great virtues of our SEEDLING Silver Pink Snapdragon, and here is how they "come back" at us:

Springfield, Mo., May 8, 1914.

Mr. G. S. Ramsburg, Somersworth, N. H.

Dear Sir: We inclose our check for $5.00 for seven pkts. of seed of Silver Pink. We are doing fine with it and have grown some splendid blossoms, which are a grand color and great seller with us. This is our first trial, and we are pleased.

Very truly, RAUGH BROS.

Every mail brings repeat orders. It is the ONE Snap to grow, and right now is the time to sow seed for fall and early winter blossoms. Don't delay. Price of seed, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Cash.

Its color is beautiful—a clear, silvery, sea-shell pink. Is a strong, stocky grower and the most productive variety in existence.

PLANTS ALL SOLD. If any customer has a surplus of good seedling plants, write us.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

The first part of the month business was a little slow, but at present it is brisk. Funeral work causes the biggest demand for stock. Roses and carnations are not extra good, owing to the continued warm weather. For sixteen days we have had no rain and all outdoor stock is in need of water. It is the longest dry spell for May in seventeen years. Flowers will be scarce for Memorial day, with the possible exception of peonies. Large quantities of these are being cut and stored. The planting-out season will soon be over and then all florists will have it considerably easier.

Various Notes.

C. L. Niednagel has his Beauties growing nicely after their rest and will begin cutting in four to six weeks. His other roses are in good condition and giving some good stock.

Dr. A. J. Knapp is cutting a large crop of peonies and shipping most of them north.

Mr. Kuebler, father of Theodore and Otto, suffered an epileptic stroke, at Decatur, Ark., recently, but is getting along nicely again. E. L. F.

Saginaw, Mich.—J. B. Goetz Sons have announced that they will hereafter close their flower store all day Sunday. All orders taken before 6 p. m. Saturday will be delivered that evening, but delivery before Monday will not be promised on orders taken after that time.

Club Meeting.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club met May 21 in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, B. F. Barr presiding. In the absence of L. S. Landis, secretary, the president appointed H. K. Rohrer temporary secretary. Rudolph Nagel read a paper on "Bedding and Bedding Plants," emphasizing the lack of variety in our outdoor planting. He suggested many plants specially adapted to our climatic conditions which are rarely seen these days.

H. D. Rohrer exhibited Helen Michell geraniums, in 4-inch pots, of exceptional merit, and also Ricard, in fine form. Rudolph Nagel showed Scarlet Bedder, which certainly seems to have a bright future, and a pink seedling snapdragon, entirely different from the pinks grown today.

The coöperative committee reported opportunities for securing hose and moss at greatly reduced prices. The flower show committee reported progress. A large number of the members spoke of growing special stock for the show. The show will be held in the auditorium November 6 and 7. The picnic committee reported favorably for Mt. Gretna and indications are that a special train will be pressed into service. The picnic will be held in July. Elmer J. Weaver, chairman, will report further at the next meeting.

Chas. M. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., will speak on "Asters" at the June meeting and Ira H. Landis, of Paradise, Pa., will speak on "Gladioli." President B. F. Barr gave the club an invitation to hold an outing at his farm sometime this summer, which was accepted with thanks. Several new members were elected. The next meeting will be held June 18. H. K. R.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Last week the market conditions took somewhat of a turn for the worse. The general supply increased steadily, while the call for stock, though generally good, was at times indifferent. Toward the end of the week flowers of all kinds accumulated to a certain extent. Prices dropped a few points. The Memorial day supply at the end of this week will undoubtedly be large and fully able to take care of all demands upon it.

The cut of peonies is large and includes many choice offerings. Practically all the local peonies are in full bloom and many continue to arrive from out of town. With this supply, the wholesalers will undoubtedly be able to take care of all requests for this flower for Decoration day. The rose offerings, including American Beauties, continue large and are adequate for present needs, in spite of the ordinarily good demand for them. Carnations are more plentiful, as well as a little cheaper, than they were a fortnight ago. The supply of lilies is still large, but there is no particularly strong demand for them. Some fine callas and rubrum lilies are coming into the market. The fine, large gladioli offered meet with a ready sale. Valley is good and has a fair market. Other offerings include some late outdoor bulbous stock, jasmines, sweet peas, iris, pond lilies, stocks, cornflowers and the like.

The supply of greens is good and meets with a brisk demand. The sale of new ferns is particularly large.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell has been having fine cuts of roses, including Beauties.

L. H. Kyrk was the first to offer outdoor sweet peas. The stock was excellent.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange received the first large daisies of the season. They sold readily.

J. A. Peterson & Sons have a large lot of fine specimen plants of Hydrangea Otaksa.

Recent visitors: Mr. Sanger, of Buffalo, N. Y., who stopped in this city on his way home from the conclave at Atlanta, and Simon J. Hider, of Hillsboro, O. C. H. H.

CYCLAMEN.

200,000 GIANT FLOWERING CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS AND BLOOMING PLANTS.

For the last 16 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed-bearing cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers that don't have to be petted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five-petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize winner. Received first prize at the Cleveland show and first and second at Toledo, early November, when blooming cyclamen were scarce.

STRONG AUGUST SOWN SEEDLINGS, once transplanted, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Cash with order. Cultural directions with all orders.

C. Winterich, Cyclamen Specialist, Defiance, O.

SALVIAS.

SALVIA BONFIRE.

10,000 Salvia Bonfire from selected seed. We grow all our salvias from seed, not cuttings, thereby avoiding a hard, woody plant that blooms early but stands still balance of season. These salvias were all shifted from 2-in. to 3-in. last week of April, are now making a nice growth and, while they will not bloom as quickly as plants from cuttings, when they do come you have something that satisfies your customers, and that is what you want. Price, $3.00 per 100 whether you take 100 or 1000. Cash with order.
